STANDARD YOUTH IS KILLED IN CRASH

ABOUT THIS AND THAT.....

Well, the Texas legislature finally decided upon an oil and gas conservation bill and at the last vote passed a measure that is expected to put an end to wasteful production. The bill leaves it to the railroad commission to issue conservation orders and puts a fine of $1,000 per day for each day an operator violates the order and provides for quick action in the case of suits brought to court. The suits are to be filed in the district court of Travis county.

The railroad commission is to act on Monday, Aug. 24 to consider the bill in East Texas and it is to be tested out in the rest of Texas field, so the commission members say, and if the law does not stick like they think it would the national guards will be sent to the fields in East Texas to see that it is enforced. The bill followed by "Alfa Bill" Murray.

The bill drawn up by the conservation committee and concurred by the house by a vote of 125 to 12 and by the senate by a vote of 29 to 1 and signed by Governor D. W. Witt, is a measure that will immediately, may not carry all the provisions wanted by some of the backers of the original administration bills, but it is so much better than has been feared could be the outcome of the 30-day session that everyone seems to be more or less satisfied with it. It is the independent and major oil companies should be in a position to operate on a slightly more profitable basis within a short time.

The provisions of the new law include:

"Operation of any well with an oil ratio exceeding that fixed by the commission.

"Drowning with water of any amount capable of producing oil gas or both in paying quantities.

"Underground waste caused by premature intrusion of water to any producing well or wells producing from the same stratum, resulting from improper drilling or producing methods.

"Permitting any natural gas to be wasted.

"Wasteful utilization of natural gas provided, utilization of gas in well producing both oil and gas for manufacturing natural gas shall not be construed to include.

"Creating unnecessary fire hazards.

"Actual physical waste incident or resulting from so drilling, tapping, locating, spacing or operating wells so as to reduce, or tend to reduce, the ultimate total recovery of oil or gas.

"Waste incident to the unnecessary, inefficient, excessive or improper use of the gas, gas energy, water drive in any well or pool; however, it is not the intent of this act to require the repressuring of any oil pool, or that the separately owned properties in any pool be utilized under one management, control or ownership.

"The escape into the open air of natural gas except as may be necessary in drilling or operation of a well.

"Waste incident to the inequitable utilization of gas energy, water drive, or other natural force, resulting from inequitable withdrawal from any common pool; provided the commission shall make this definite of waste only for the purpose of preventing discrimination in production as between producers disposing of their oil and gas by means of regulated carriers, and those producers disposing of it by means of unregulated carriers."

Blump and Autos Are Blamed For Missing Persons

HARRISBURG, Pa., The automobile and the depression both have been held responsible for an increase in the number of missing persons in Pennsylvania.

Reports to the state police for the first six months of 1931 showed that 893 persons were reported missing from home. The 1930 total for the same period was 788.

Officials commenting on the increase blamed dissatisfaction with conditions in general and the ease with which a person may adopt the rule of "hitch-hiker" for the most 100 per cent increase.

S. E. WILLIAMSON VICTIM OF CAR CRASH AT BAIRD

Funeral Services Had Not Been Made Early Thursday

S. E. Williamson of Eastland, son of C. A. Williamson, prominent farmer near Eastland, was instantly killed about six miles from Baird Wednesday night when the car in which he was driving plunged off a 40-foot embankment.

Williamson was on his way to Abilene to attend the druggists' convention in that city when the accident occurred.

O. H. Doss, manager of the Eastland Drug store, which is owned by C. A. Williamson, father of the dead youth, was in a car just ahead of the one in which Williamson was killed. He said today that he did not know just what happened unless the steering gear on the car broke, hurling the car down the embankment.

"We were traveling at about 40 miles an hour," Mr. Doss said today, "and I was driving my car just a short distance ahead of him. Suddenly the car swerved from the road and down the embankment, breaking Williamson's neck and killing him instantly."

Mr. Doss said that the accident occurred on a straight stretch of road and that no other car was approaching so that there was no way of accounting for the accident unless it could be blamed on faulty steering gear or a sudden attack of some kind that rendered young Williamson unconscious.

The body was taken to Eastland soon after the accident. Funeral arrangements had not been completed Wednesday morning as far as telephone conversations to Eastland revealed.

The car in which Williamson was driving was reported to have been badly damaged.

ARE WE GETTING BACK (OR GOING AHEAD) TO NORMAL?

When speakers have declaimed about getting back to normalcy (remember the after-the-war orations?) this writer has often wondered what was the normal about which they were talking.

Now comes Bruce Barton with a definition of "Normal." Mr. Barton successful advertising agency operator, writes in the Redbook Magazine for September thus:

"I remember visiting Henry Ford in the midst of the 1920-21 panic. Certain eminent bankers had told me that he was so nearly broke that they would probably own his business within a few months.

"To my surprise I found him cheerful and confident. He said many interesting things including this:

"Everybody says we must get back to normal. What is normal? Tell me that, and I can give you a guess as to when and how we'll get back to it."

"Ten years later a business friend of mine asked this same question and answered it.

"What is normal?" he asked. "I'll tell you. When the buyer is resisting the seller as he is at present, that's normal."

"I add the comment of two other sagacious gentlemen scattered during the current unpleasantness.

"Said the first: 'Nothing lies like the orderbook. When orders are pouring into a company, everybody in the concern says, "Business is wonderful," never stopping to realize that that is just the time when trouble is in the making.

When, on the other hand, the order-book is absolutely blank, that is the moment when things are just about to get better."

"The other wise man is nearly 70 years old. He established his own business in 1870, and has been on the job continuously since. He was talking with his son, who is now in his middle forties.

"You young fellows who have been in business only a few years have a distorted point of view," he said. "What you don't realize is this—normal years are hard years. We never used to think about making a clean-up. Our idea was that if we worked hard all our lives, we might hope to come out a little ahead. We expected tough going and toughened our spirit to stand it."

"A great deal of this kind of thinking has been going on recently. Our excess fat is gone; our extravagant ideas are dissipated; we no longer pray 'Lord, give us wealth, but only, 'give us work."

"We are getting back to normal."

CENSUS CHANGE SUGGESTED.

Controversy which developed at Austin over the correctness of the school census this year has drawn from Mrs. George R. Feltes, census taker for the Austin schools, the assertion that a more accurate accounting for purposes of paying state funds to school districts could be had by using the highest enrollment figure of each school, rather than the special enumeration in which all persons between certain ages, whether or not they go to school, are supposed to be counted.

A proposal to amend the state census law was before the 42nd legislature in its regular session, but was defeated. Possibly, as the uncertainties of the present system are brought out more forcefully, the legislature will come around to changing the system.

For one thing, making state payments on a basis of enrollment would eliminate census taking, a fairly costly procedure. Then there would be little or no opportunity for error-making in compiling the lists. It is the experience of persons who make enumerations that never can as many as 1000 persons be counted with absolute correctness, without requiring, as they do in Turkey, that each person stay within his own house during the period of the nose-numbering. The common assumption in census taking is that one error in excess will be off-set by a similar error of omission, and that the final result will be approximately correct if the number to be enumerated is sufficient to give play to laws of averages. The Texas law provides, however, that the census rolls must be sworn to as being correct absolutely, a thing mathematicians and enumerators call impossible.

THIS MUCH DONE.

Whether half a loaf, or just a thin slice of relief, the oil industry was accorded one measure Monday by the legislature toward nourishing it back to health.

The pipeline bill was passed. It was given a vote that will put it into effect the moment Governor Sterling approves it.

East Texas sponsors claimed it will go far toward remedying the conditions of the oil business. The bill was handled by an East Texan—Senator Pollard of Tyler. It was passed without a dissenting vote in the senate, and was accepted, 112 to 20, in the house, the votes giving proof that the legislature believes it workable and effective.

Whatever the fate of the conservation enforcement bill, the success will have produced at least one law designed to help the oil business. If it works out as its advocates expect, this pipeline law may go most of the way to re-establish the demoralized oil business on a sound footing.

This was the first session of the legislature ever called to deal with the economic ills of one industry. The pipeline law may be all that is done, or practically all that has meaning. It may be the important economic success that would fully justify the session.

The difference is that a statesman thinks he belongs to the state, and the politician thinks the state belongs to him.

The stock exchange solved one great problem, anyway it taught us how to stay thin.

WASHINGTON.—As unemployment and wage-cut news crashes insistently to the front, along with many predictions of a distressful winter, the administration is again charged with camouflageing in an attempt to make conditions seem brighter than they are.

Federal figures are not being falsified and the most reliable of them are still being issued frankly and fearlessly even if there is no reason to hail them. Efforts of Secretary of Labor Doak and his U. S. Employment Service to give us something to cheer about have been so naive that if the country has been misinformed it must be the fault of careless hands who are always lived in large numbers at this period.

The employment service bulletin begins by announcing: "There was an improvement in the demand for certain classes of labor throughout June." It then tells at length about a seasonal increase of outdoor work, finally admitting "little change in the industrial situation."

The effect, along with that of wage cuts, is seen in lower per capita earnings of those actually at work. The labor statistics bureau shows reduced incomes per man from June, 1929, to June, 1931, of 22 per cent in manufacturing, 15 to 22 per cent in coal mining, 20 per cent in metal mining and about 15 per cent in trade.

285 NEW FIRMS REGISTERED. STOCKHOLD.—In spite of the universal trade slump, 285 new corporations with a combined capital of $3,296,000 were registered in Sweden during the second quarter of 1931. At the same time 80 corporations increased their capital stock by $21,943,200 and 32 corporations also registered a capital increase by means of transferring from the profit and loss accounts $1,460,600.

The constraint was almost tangible. Tressa fidgeted with her bracelets and walked about, humming a little tune...

No, she would just have to take the chance of heating Tressa at this game. If only she hadn't provided Clive with an "out" by that suggestion last week that he might be better off free!

When Tressa arrived, bag and baggage, Liane forced herself to show a cordiality she did not feel.

"No man in his senses would prefer me to her," thought she. Still Clive had chosen her in the first place when Tressa had been at hand...

"Isn't that a new gown?" She hoped her smile was not as coquettish as it felt. "It is. Do you like it?"

"I loathe her, loathe her, loathe her!" cried Liane in her inmost heart, watching the tableau.

At the table she was almost gay. But she soon discovered the conversation was being taken out of her hands.

SOCIETY and CLUB NEWS

MISS ARRITTA DAVENPORT
Phone 224 Editor Ranger
Lovely Shower Honors Recent Bride, Mrs. Barnett. Weddings, which have been in society's big spotlight since early June, continue to be the happy inspiration for many smart and delightful honorary affairs, given for popular recent brides. In a setting colorfully arranged in a most artistic manner, the home of Mrs. Walter Harwell, Young street, reflected a lovely setting primarily of roses and bursting buds this week when she and her associate hostesses, Mrs. Bob Hodges and Mrs. A. N. Larson, entertained with a beautifully appointed surprise shower for the recent bride, Mrs. J. E. Barnett. Before her marriage she was Miss Tera Laughman, teacher at Young school last year and a close friend of the hostesses. Adding more color to the well chosen blossoms for the occasion, silver baskets filled with clusters of crepe myrtle rendered harmonizing tones to the color scheme. Upon the arrival of the honoree, each guest was invited to a table covered with lace and centered with a huge punch bowl filled with iced punch. Small flowers embedded in sprays of fern banked the serving bowl and dainty appointments. Opening the diversion for the affair each one present was asked to write a note of advice to the bride. After each note had been collected they were presented to Mrs. Barnett to judge the winner along the line of "advice" for a bride. Mrs. F. E. Moore was announced winner in this unique feature. A dainty scrapbook was also presented the honor guest with favorite recipes written by the party members. Giving more delight to the hour, a piano solo was played by Miss Mildred Moorman, followed with a musical selection given by Miss Frances Glazner and Miss Gene Williams. Accompanied at the piano by Miss Glazner, Miss Williams sang "Carolina Moon" and "I Love You Truly." To impress the function more strikingly, Miss Glazner, immediately following Miss Williams' vocal numbers, drifted into a wedding march played by the pretty soft tones that only an accomplished musician can master, at which time the small and dainty little Miss Mary Jane Bishop entered, dressed as a bride, with Master Freddie Larson acting as the bridegroom. Together they pulled a wagon decorated in tones of black and white with dots of pastel colors blending into a deep rich array of shades, creating a pretty picture. The heavily laden wagon with each gift, reflecting balls of whiteness and tied with ribbons, was given to the honoree. In her gracious and attractive manner her marked appreciation was expressed in a pleasing way. Drawing this colorful smart function to a climax in late afternoon, the hostesses served a delicious angel food cake course, with cream and confections softly repeating the green and white color hues. The afternoon party was attended by 40 guests and the honoree.

"TOASTING" expels SHEEP-DIP BASE naturally (Black, biting, harsh irritant chemicals) present in every tobacco leaf
"They're out—so they can't be in!"
Every LUCKY STRIKE is made of the finest tobacco leaves the world can offer—the finest from Turkey—the finest from Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia, and the Carolinas—the Cream of many Crops throughout the world. But all tobacco leaves, regardless of price and kind, as nature produces them, contain harsh irritants. LUCKY STRIKE'S exclusive "TOASTING" Process—a process that mellows, that purifies, that includes the use of the modern Ultra Violet Ray—expels certain harsh irritants naturally present in every tobacco leaf. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds, who use them as a base in making sheep-dip*, as well as a powerful spraying solution for fruits, flowers and shrubs—enough to permit the daily dipping of over 50,000 sheep or the daily spraying of many thousands of trees. Thus, you are sure these irritants, naturally present in all tobacco leaves, are not in your LUCKY STRIKE. "They're out—so they can't be in!" No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

If you are planning to replant your perennial border this fall, consider the sweet herbs along with the delphinium and pyrethrum. A corner given over to sage and thyme and as many herbs as you have room for, will prove most satisfactory as a part of your garden. Because of their aromatic bouquet, these herbs add much to the flavor of all foods, but are particularly valuable in soups and salads where elusive and intriguing flavors are needed. Most of the sweet herbs which can be grown in the garden are used in cooking. Some, such as lemon verbena and sweet lavender, are deliciously fragrant and delightful to dry and use in the household linen cupboards. Many of the sweet herbs can be dried and stored for winter use. Some can be used fresh, just as they come from the garden. Borage, burl, sweet basil, thyme, sage and savory are used after being dried. Chives, parsley, dill, chervil and mint are used fresh as well as dried. Some of the herbs are perennial and, when once established, will come year after year. Thyme, for instance, is a perennial plant which grows in the form of a small shrub from six to ten inches high. The young leaves and shoots only are used. Sage and sweet marjoram both are perennial plants. Savory for Soups The "ragot of herbs" or kitchen bouquet usually contains bay-leaf, parsley, pepper-pod, carrot, celery and chives. Soups and stews seasoned with these herbs have a savoriness quite impossible to gain by other means. The secret of fine cooking lies in the seasoning. Sage, thyme, savory and marjoram are used in stuffings for poultry and meats. Dill, caraway, fenel, mustard, burnet, horseradish and mint are used in sauces and are pungent and stimulating. Herb vinegars are particularly worth while to have on hand for salad dressings. Basil, tarragon, garlic and parsley vinegars are easily made at home. They offer the source of the indescribable taste found in French dressings served in fine hotels and restaurants. Basil vinegar is made by steeping the leaves in vinegar. For two weeks the vinegar is heated each day and poured over the leaves. The infusion is strained and more basil added until the desired strength is obtained. Tarragon vinegar should be made in August when the leaves are at their best, although the dried leaves always can be used. Four cups of hot vinegar are poured over one cup of fresh leaves and allowed to stand three weeks, stirring each day. Then the vinegar is strained and hot water added to make one gallon. Garlic Vinegar Garlic vinegar is unusually good for summer vegetable salads. Head lettuce, sliced tomatoes, cucumbers, raw cabbage—in fact, any vegetable served with French dressing made with garlic vinegar gains a distinctive flavor that is sure to be liked. Six cloves of garlic, 8 leaves basil, 1-2 nutmeg, 3 lemons, 3 1-cup vinegars, 3 1-cup grate nutmeg. Squeeze juice from lemons. Heat vinegar to the boiling point. Combine all ingredients and bring again to the boiling point. Bottle and let stand three weeks. Strain and seal.
