THE SAN ANTONIO MUDDLE.

The San Antonio Light in an editorial to "His Excellency, Governor R. S. Sterling," requests the governor veto legislation authorizing the San Antonio municipal government to make a refunding bond issue, an idea already failing of approval at the hands of the state attorney general. The bill, the Light says, was "passed under the guise of 'local legislation'" and represents a brazen and deliberate attempt to override the taxpayers of San Antonio. . . . No re-financing emergency exists in this city. . . . If the . . . city administration were content to meet this overdraft of $1,100,000 from back tax collections, there would be no burden added to the taxpayers. . . . The bill does not go into effect for 90 days . . . a bond issue could be decided by the voters in less time."

San Antonio affairs have been muddled notoriously for several years. The refinancing, it appears, is the result of pressure by bankers loaded down with warrants issued by the city from time to time. For months the chambers of administration has been changing things in an effort to put its house in order. The bond issue idea has already been taken to court on an injunction motion. Should the bill referred to above become a law, it probably will face the same test, with precedent against it on the point of passing local bills under guise of general legislation. It looks as if a good fight is brewing. Let 'em to it. Maybe they'll break down the rings.

OFFICERS AND THE WICKERSHAM REPORT.

The Wickersham penman is keeping busy these days. It's a poor week that brings no report from him and the commission. The latest is a blistering condemnation of police methods, the word police applying possibly to all local law enforcement agencies. In Texas we have a sheriff and his deputies in each county; several constables and their deputies; in towns marshals and a police force; for the state as a whole the ranger force.

"Third degree" beatings the report condemns. It opposes the "sweat box,"—a system of questioning over long periods of time by officers in relays, a method which produces mental confusion and actual physical suffering. The "sweat box" is used commonly by officers, and in it the officers in charge say they see nothing wrong. A favorite stunt is seizing a suspect on a warrant, carrying him about 100 miles away from his home, and keeping him secreted while officers ply him with questions. No resistance can be offered; the accused man's lawyer may go to court on a habeas corpus action. But 72 hours may elapse before the court can get the accused before it; and it has appeared on at least one such occasion a district judge preferred red tape to direct and fortuitous action.

The commission included nine suggestions for revision of laws governing criminal trials. Some of these points have been proposed in Texas; some of them would be futile. After all, the governor recommends, the legislature enacts (or kills), the Wickershamers must have learned by now. Here are their nine rules:

1. Establishment of a statutory minimum time for the preparation of the defense.
2. Adoption by the states of a rule to disqualify a judge if the accused files an affidavit alleging bias on his part.
3. Requirement that the prosecution shall furnish a list of witnesses to the accused.
4. Representation of the accused by counsel in all cases unless the penalty is very light, or the defendant has refused counsel.
5. Inclusion of qualified persons on jury lists regardless of their color.
6. The clarification of the law regarding the admissibility of evidence of other offenses than that charged.
7. Allowance of comment by the judge upon the refusal of the accused to testify.
8. Abolition of the payment of judges, prosecutors and court officials from fines and costs.
9. Right of appellate courts to reduce sentences without a new trial and the right to grant new trials, if required by justice whether an appeal for one has, or has not been made.

THE TEXAS MARRIAGE LAW.

Census figures showing an increase in the "export" marriages of Texas and a decrease in marriages performed inside the state are attracting wide attention. The Texas press has naturally commented at length, and papers in other parts of the country are discussing the supposed effect of the Texas law on Texas marriages.

That law was intended to serve a good purpose, and is evidently doing so. The fact that so many marriages are performed in neighboring states for couples who might have been hastily wed in Texas offers pretty good evidence that such a law was needed. It is not unreasonable. It merely forces a couple who think of getting married to wait at least three days before taking the leap, which often is a leap in the dark, no matter how long it may have been considered in advance of the event. The prospective husband must also have a health certificate.

Any doctor will be glad to tell the uninformed or the skeptical that the health certificate is a necessary protection to girls and women, preventing much needless suffering and the probable birth of diseased children. And the doctor will not approve of the health certificate merely because he or some other member of his profession may be paid a fee for signing it. The fact that a medical examination costs money is one of the objections made to the marriage law, but the man or youth who cannot pay for a medical examination has no business getting married. However, free medical service may be obtained almost anywhere nowadays by persons not able to pay for it.

The Texas marriage law has been called a "crazy" law, but the hasty marriage often brings such woe in its train that drastic methods to prevent or discourage it may be warranted. A single "gin marriage" may produce half a dozen future criminals, or patients of charity hospitals and insane asylums, to be a burden and expense to the state. It is safe to say that the Texas law, which may not be perfect and may yet be amended or repealed, has prevented few worthy marriages in the state since it was passed. The fact that marriages have decreased in Texas may be explained by economic and other causes, as well as the marriage law.

WASHINGTON—The famous old "Conscience Fund" continues to do business as usual.

The amounts received each year by the treasury from persons who say they once cheated their Uncle Sam fluctuate perhaps as widely as the human conscience itself and there is never anything to indicate that hard times either stimulate consciences or cause folks to hold back who otherwise might contribute. But there is always something coming and an estimate from the treasury indicates that the amount sent by anonymous persons in the fiscal year 1931 about equals the $6,371 received in 1930.

The "fund" received $30,000 in 1929 and only $18,76 in 1928, the lowest amount in a very long time. The big year was 1916 with its $54,923, thanks to a record-breaking deposit of $20,000 by a gentleman concerning whose identity the treasury hasn't the slightest idea. Since the first contributor paid $5 in 1811, the government has received about $200,000 in this manner.

There isn't really a "Conscience Fund" as seekers after donations or loans for worthy causes have to be advised again and again. The government takes the money, which is often sent in an envelope without explanation and often with the comment that the sender once defrauded the government, and accounts for it under miscellaneous funds—"money received from persons unknown." The cash goes into the general fund.

RECENT receipts have been largely from income tax evaders and veterans whose memories go back to the war days or who have since received money from the Veterans Bureau to which they were not entitled. But there is the annual crop of folks who "once used a postage stamp twice" and so send in an uncancelled stamp to square things. Religion figures importantly in penic crop we have ever produced."

The far reaching effects of farm depression were cited by the commissioner.

"If our cotton must sell at prevailing prices or lower, our people will be unable to pay taxes and provide schools for their children, or support their religious institutions. Many thousands of farms will be lost to loan companies—and this is not the end. Because, under normal conditions, loan companies provide for a small percentage of forfeitures, and usually these farms can be resold. This is not the case now. When a loan company takes a farm it is confronted with the same problem of cheap commodities, high taxes, insurance, road bonds and school bonds that confront the individual. The large percent of farm mortgages are sold to life insurance companies. If these farm loan companies should be bankrupt, it is apt to bring bankruptcy or at least distress to life insurance companies. It is altogether possible that the man who lost a farm would have his life policy, intended to care for his widow and orphans, invalidated."

"If our government and laws cannot be utilized to avert this impending crisis," he concluded, "and the human suffering is not averted, then I have underestimated the value of civilization. I have no patience with the contention that this will be a period of the survival of the fittest. That's a law of the jungle. I hope that we, as Texans, will be awakened to our duty and our opportunity."

When the car dropped him at the office in the canyons of lower New York he left her reluctantly. "I don't want to let you out of my sight," he explained, half in earnest.

Gay Affairs Honors
South's Company's Sales Force of Fort Worth and Ranger Guests at Pretty Nelson Home

Taking top place in society functions for last week was the gay and most delightful chicken barbecue and watermelon cutting, with Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Nelson, entertaining at their pretty suburban home, Country Club road, Saturday in honor of the Swift & company office force of the car route sales department, Fort Worth, together with their families and a group of Ranger guests.

Mr. Nelson is Swift & company's representative for this territory and has gained a host of friends through his pleasing and impressive mannerisms.

Upon arriving the guests were received by the host and hostess on the attractive lawn and veranda, where a colorful lighting effect afforded a shimmering brightness against shrubs and climbing runners of greenery against fleecy white and green lattice work, designed about the spacious porch.

Bouquets of golden hued daisies filled boxes used on the fire place mantel in the living room, with a lovely potted begonia in full bloom marking the table center, flanked on either side with matching tapers and holders. Other fragrant clusters used in the room decorations were white and blush pink tea roses and opening buds.

Following a social hour and the usual greeting introductions, the guests were seated at a long table, arranged in the back yard near an immense mulberry tree aglow with electric lights. White linens covered the table centered with yards of sunflowers in keeping with the outdoor affair.

A very delicious plate of barbecued chicken with potato salad, sliced tomatoes, olives, huns, coffee, and iced punch was served. To carry the excellent menu out to a degree of perfection a course of fresh watermelon was passed.

After the feast the following games were played with J. E. McManey, leader: "Swat 'Em," "Spud," "Are You Ready, Brother?" "Cock-Fight," and "Walking Statues."

As the close of the novel feature of entertainment music was furnished by the famous and highly popular "Tickler Band." Each individual "tickler" professedly unassuming, if it is possible to have one program as superior to another. Buzz Johnson, the announcer, in his clever and jesting manner, introduced the band to the Fort Worth guests, adding to the interest of the program. Each Fort Worth member endorsed the group of musicians as one of the most colorful and talented group ever to have appeared in a large or small city. Their feature number during the performance was "A Good Man is Hard to Find," sung by Dr. C. C. Craig and Harry Henry, in dedication to Mrs. Clingman and lady visitors from Fort Worth.

The continued applause from the opening "She'll Be Coming Around the Mountain" again emphasized their ability as one of the most splendidly organized bands one will find. As the popular expression goes, they are a "wow."

The hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson could not have been exceeded and this function greatly helps to mark Ranger's social affairs as one of the most outstanding of many seasons.

The gay hours went winging until thanks were graciously expressed to the host and hostess by the

PEACHES are more plentiful this season than they have been for years—consequently we can use them lavishly for those preserves and conserves that seemed a bit extravagant at the time the fruit was high in price.

Fresh peaches make an infinite variety of luscious summer desserts. Although the fresh fruit lacks some of the minerals found in apples, it has a decided tonic effect and a definite place among the essential fruits. It's a good plan to use peaches often while they are in season. Peaches and cream make a particularly simple dessert that long has been symbolic of luxury, but did you ever try freezing this dish? Pare and slice peaches exactly as you would for the old-fashioned dish. Sprinkle with sugar and place in freezing tray of electric refrigerator or in mold of freezer. Pour over rich cream to cover and freeze until firm. If a freezer is used, pack in eight parts ice to one part salt and freeze without stirring.

Small children should not be allowed to eat uncooked peaches as they do apples, for the structure of the fruit is not as digestible as the apple. However, when the fruit is stewed, children five or six years of age may eat it.

If your family likes hot rolls or toast and marmalade, by all means make some peach and orange marmalade.

Peach and Orange Marmalade
Twenty-four peaches, 3 oranges, granulated sugar.

Peel peaches and remove stones. Squeeze juice from oranges and cut rind in thin strips. Cut peaches in thin slices. Combine juice, prepared rind and peaches. Weigh. Add as many pounds of sugar as there were pounds of fruit. Cover and let stand over night. Bring slowly to the boiling point. Stir to prevent sticking and burning as the mixture thickens. It will take about two hours to cook the marmalade.

When the butter is nearly done it splutters and splashes and will burn one's hands if the spoon handle is not long enough. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

If a thicker butter is wanted cook the pulp and sugar until a little tested on a cold plate is the desired consistency.

Peach conserve is much like peach and orange marmalade. The conserve adds molasses raisins (white ones if you can get them) and nuts and uses only one orange. One cup nuts and one cup raisins to 24 peaches should be used. Add them for the last ten minutes of cooking.

Commission Seeks Man To Take Role Of Geo. Washington

WASHINGTON.—The Geographical Bicentennial commission is in search of a man to take the role of George Washington—one who understands surveying and farm and one who, in an emergency, would be able to direct a revolution.

The commission is canvassing the country in an effort to find a man who can portray the role of the first president in a pageant to be held here next June as a feature of the celebration of the 200th anniversary of Washington's birth.

It is rumored that one high government official here, who has striking resemblance to the nation's first chief executive, has been suggested for the part. The commission will not make a choice until it has heard from the entire country.

More than 5,000 persons representing all sections of the United States will take part in the pageant. The production will be staged under floodlights beneath the Washington monument and will last for five or six nights.

In addition to Washington, the play will portray other figures of his day. Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton, Benjamin Franklin, Charles Carroll of Carroll, the Lees, and others will be featured.

Hat Pins Back With New Hair

LONDON.—The return of straw hats worn at perilous odds has brought the hat-pin back. The change from skull caps and beehive hats to large, floppy ones of careworn size has left a demand for smart young things to follow, but the good old hat-pin appears to be saving the situation.

The modern hat-pin must anchor in a wind-blown bob the stubble of a permanent wave. It is a dainty affair measuring approximately five inches in length and the sharp end is closed, emerging from the hat, by a small knob to match the head of the pin.

Encasing the hat-pin is said to provide the male with free hand and arm movement, without the pangs of a stuck finger. The fashion has made them safe, it is expected to be popular.

Prickly Heat Hits Big Bear Guzzler

EL PASO.—Of course, the city may not face the same problem that El Paso does since it is near the Mexican border, but the who drink quantities of beer cool off in hot weather are let themselves wide open to attack prickly heat.

Not only beer, but any kind of alcoholic drink that stimulates the circulation and heart may bring on the irksome affliction, Dr. P. H. Outlaw, health officer, says.

"Two or three spoonfuls of water will relieve the sufferer until the diet can be corrected," Dr. Outlaw said.
