

WALTERS BANDS PROTEST MEETINGS

Mass Meeting Called to Discuss Cotton Laws BULLDOGS TO START PRACTICE WEDNESDAY

ARE TO REPORT FOR WORKOUT AT 2 O'CLOCK

All But Few of Regulars Back At Home After Summers Work.

Coach Eck Curtis has announced that the opening of the fall grid practice has been moved up from Monday, Aug. 31, to Wednesday, Aug. 26 and that all prospective gridiron stars are to report for their first workout at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The tentative date had been set for Monday because several of the players have been working in Tennessee during the summer and Curtis had not received definite word as to when they would be back home.

Coach Eck Curtis has announced that the opening of the fall grid practice has been moved up from Monday, Aug. 31, to Wednesday, Aug. 26 and that all prospective gridiron stars are to report for their first workout at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Although about eight lettermen of last year's team will not be back in the line-up this season, material to replace the regulars has been secured from the reserves of last year and the team is considered equally as strong in most positions as the team of 1930.

The first game of the season will be played at Big Spring, according to the present schedule, with the first home game played with Amarillo on Sept. 25.

FARMERS ARE URGED TO MEET ON SATURDAY

American Legion Hall In Ranger To Be Scene of Gathering.

At the suggestion of many of the farmers of the Ranger trade territory a mass meeting has been called by the Ranger Chamber of Commerce to be held at the American Legion hall on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Since the cotton conference held in New Orleans, sponsored by Governor Huey Long of Louisiana, in which the prohibition of raising cotton was urged, many farmers of the Ranger trade territory have requested that a mass meeting be called in order that the matter of a special session and special legislation for the relief of the cotton situation might be explained and an expression of opinion received from the growers.

Those who have urged the calling of the mass meeting have been in favor of the special session and have also expressed themselves as being in favor of strict prohibition of all cotton planting.

Postcards announcing the meeting are being mailed out to 500 farmers of this territory and invitations have been extended to Representatives Tom Cunningham of Eastland and Victor Gilbert of Cisco to be present in order that they might be guided by the wishes of the farmers themselves in the matter that is considered of such vital importance to all cotton producers.

Results of the meeting are to be forwarded to Governor Ross Sterling who either call a special session or decline to call it, according to the wishes of those most vitally interested.

Should the meeting endorse a special session but favor the Cunningham bill, sponsored by Senator Oliver Cunningham of Abilene, which prohibits planting cotton on the same land two years in succession, this information will be passed along to the governor and to the representatives and senator from this district.

..WHAT..
..WORRIES ME..
 By O. FORD

I never KNOW what my wife will do next. The other day I went home and found her with green paste smeared all over her face and neck, sitting in front of the electric fan drying it. I got to laughing and she said she hoped I would choke. That I wasn't so PRETTY myself and that a shave wouldn't detract from my natural beauty any. She said the only reason she didn't LAUGH at me was because it might crack her face with that clay on it. Anyway she said she was doing it for MY sake. I had to get out of the room or die laughing, the idea of the things she does for MY sake. But I didn't have any trouble getting laughing when she told me that she was doing it for MY sake. Industrial Texas To Profit By Data From Farm Census

AUSTIN.—As the farm census legislation enacted by the 42nd legislature became a law Aug. 22, advantages to industrial progress from its application were pointed out by J. B. McDonald, state commissioner of agriculture.

The law was enacted primarily as an agricultural aid, but it should also go far toward helping industrial development, McDonald pointed out in a letter to Charles R. Tipton, organization manager for Progressive Texans, Inc.

The farm census law provides for a yearly survey of the state agricultural products and resources. This data has been available before only in the five-year census of the federal government, which is usually inaccurate and incomplete before it is available.

The first will be taken next spring by county assessors, and the material assembled and disseminated through the state and federal departments of agriculture cooperating.

The data should prove invaluable in promoting the industrial development of agricultural regions in this manner, McDonald said: "Before an industry locates in a new area, it desires information regarding the potentialities of that area—source of raw materials, financial condition, labor supply, and prospects for future growth. These things are largely determined by the agricultural condition of that section. The data has not been available in complete, accurate form before.

"In many instances, communities have been put to the expense of making these surveys themselves, in order to induce industries to locate with them. This is amply illustrated in the demand of railroads that the prospective territory to be opened offer them sufficient inducement before they will give that territory rail connections.

"This data should prove of special value to those sections of West Texas which are still, comparatively speaking, undeveloped and especially in need of rail transportation before a real program of industrial expansion can be attempted."

BIRDS TO FIGHT INSECTS

ASHLAND, Wis.—Widespread construction of birdhouses has been advocated here as an aid in combating insect pests, more numerous this season than for many years. Birds are one of the greatest factors in controlling the pests, E. F. Pruett, county agent, declared.

Butter Fingers!

GUILTY LIPS
 by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "MAD MARRIAGE"

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Norma Kent, pretty 20-year-old secretary in a law office, meets Mark Travers, attractive and wealthy, when together they rescue a frightened puppy from the midst of downtown traffic. Norma refuses to tell the young man her name or where he can see her again. Later she joins Bob Farrell, young lawyer, for a dinner engagement. Farrell asks her to marry him and Norma says "no."

The scene of the story is Marlboro, middle-western metropolis. Norma takes the puppy to her shabby apartment she shares with Christine Saunders, generally called "Chris." She finds her roommate in tears. Norma fears Chris is falling in love with her married employer, Bradley Hart, proprietor of an advertising agency. The older girl refuses to tell what is troubling her. Next day Norma inserts an advertisement about the puppy in the lost and found column of the Marlboro Press. The first person to call in response to the advertisement is Mark Travers, who explains he has made every effort to learn Norma's identity. He tries to make a date but she declines his invitations. Travers departs. Later he telephones Natalie Price, popular debutante, and goes with her to a party concluding with a round of the night clubs.

The following evening Norma arrives at the apartment and finds Chris gone. There is a note on the table.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VI

Norma picked up the sheet of paper. She read the first words, uttered a choking cry of dismay. Norma dropped into the nearest chair and read the note again slowly. The words were scrawled. There was no salutation. The note read:

"Minnie Baker's baby's been hurt in an accident. I've gone to see what I can do. Minnie's nearly crazy. I'll telephone later, Chris."

Four Minnie Baker! She was the bookkeeper at the Hart Advertising Agency and of course in time of trouble she would turn to Chris. Why, oh, why did grief and sorrow so often descend on those who had already had their fill! Norma had never seen Minnie Baker but had heard Chris speak often of her. She knew Minnie's husband was in a sanitarium fighting against tuberculosis. Chris Saunders had helped them borrow the money to send him there. Chris had saved Minnie's job for her, too, though the bookkeeper did not know this. Minnie—poor struggling Minnie—was the sort who never in the world should have been in a business office. She would probably spend the rest of her life there, a painstaking bookkeeper but a slow one.

"If anything happens to that baby," Norma told herself, "I don't know how I can stand it!"

Two-year-old Junior had been everything of joy and happiness in the pinched, deprived life of the bookkeeper. Well, it was lucky Minnie had such a friend as Chris to stand by!

Norma sighed, arose and put away her hat and coat. She prepared a frugal meal for herself. The bad news had depressed her and she was not hungry.

While she was drying the dishes a little later the bell rang, summoning her to the first floor. Norma threw down the dish towel and ran down the stairs. She supposed it would be word from Chris.

But it was not Chris nor was it a telephone message which awaited her. Instead a small boy in not particularly clean sweater and knickers stood framed in the doorway.

Norma looked at him inquiringly. "Where's the dog?" the youngster demanded.

"You mean—" Norma began, hesitating.

"The boy flourished a folded newspaper. "Here it is," he said,

Norma read the note again slowly.

"in The Press. It says you've got a puppy here just like my 'Spot.' I've come for him. 'Spot' got away last week when Dad and me were down town in the car. We parked and when we came back Spot was gone. You a carrier for The Press. I read your ad last night but I couldn't get over here on account of getting somebody to carry my route. But I'm sure it's 'Spot' you've got. He's just like the ad says, gray and brown with a black spot over the right eye and a black tail." That's why I named 'im 'Spot.' Where is he?"

The long speech had come tumbling forth in excited jerks. The boy had his cap in his hand. His sandy hair slanted across his forehead in disordered wisps. He had blue, very serious eyes and a determined manner.

"Wait a minute," the youngster said, eyeing Norma shrewdly. "I suppose you'll want to know if it's really my 'Spot' you've got here. I suppose you think maybe I made up some of what I told you. We don't have to go downstairs to find out. Listen to this—"

He got down on his two knees before the open door, leaned down into the darkness below and uttered a shrill whistle. An instant's pause and then the whistle was repeated with three sharp blasts.

For a moment the pair eyed each other. Compassion swelled in the girl's heart as she saw the boy was sure to face disappointment. He was sure a sturdy little urchin, no confidant.

The boy did not whistle again. He was leaning forward, hand cupped to his ear, straining to hear.

Then a smile like sunlight crossed his face. "He's coming!"

Norma sighed, and then the youngster was a rolling, squealing mass of ecstasy. They tumbled backward against the wall. They tumbled forward. With quick, bounding leaps the puppy was now in the didn't have 'em on the day in the car. Believe me, Spot's going to wear that leash from now on whether he wants to or not!" He gave the dog a squeeze. Then backing away and looking up at the girl with a glance that was a perfect imitation of a dignified adult, he said, "Well, Ma'am, what do I owe you?"

"Why—for what?"

"As a reward for findin' Spot." Norma laughed. "You don't owe me a thing in the world," she said. "Not a thing. Take your puppy home and see to it that he doesn't get out again without that leash. By the way—you haven't told me your name?"

"William Schwartz."

"Mine's Norma Kent," the girl told him. "Well, William, I'm glad to have met you and glad to turn Spot over to you."

"I ought to reward you," the boy said uncertainly. "Spot's a fine dog and he's worth a lot to me."

She persuaded him such a course was unnecessary. A minute or two more and William Schwartz paused in the door again, this time bearing the puppy in his arms. "Miss Kent," he said formally, "if there's ever anything I can do for you I hope you will call on me. Remember the name—William Schwartz. I live over on East Seventy-sixth. The number's 804."

"Thank you very much, William. I'll remember to her room with a pleasant sense of satisfaction. It was fine to see anyone as happy as that youngster. He had made her forget that the world is filled with disappointment, sorrow and heartache."

Half an hour later when Chris telephoned the soberer view of life came back. Little Junior Baker's fate was still in doubt. The child had been bandaged and treated by a physician. He was quiet now. Chris was doing what she could do to comfort Minnie, who was hysterical, utterly useless in caring for the infant.

Chris' voice betrayed the emotional strain under which she had been working. It required questioning from Norma to bring out what had actually happened to the child and even then the tale was incoherent. The baby had, as usual, spent the day with the woman who lived a flight below Minnie and who was paid to look after Junior each day while the mother was at work. The woman's name was Mrs. Sorenson. Shortly after 5 o'clock—only 20 minutes before Minnie reached home—Mrs. Sorenson had gone to the door to answer a knock and the baby toddled into the kitchen. There was a steaming pan of water on the stove. In some way the child had overturned the pan, been drenched in the boiling liquid. Junior's screams immediately had brought the household. By the time Minnie arrived a doctor had taken charge. One of the baby's arms was entirely stripped of skin. His back was badly burned. The doctor's flashing light pronouncement was that there was a bare chance the child might live. Everything that could be done to save it had been attended to. Now Chris was trying to soothe the tortured mother. She told Norma that she would remain through the night. There was a neighbor sitting with the child but Chris felt she, too, was needed.

She was talking from a telephone compared with the fine, vibrant spirit with which Chris always turned to help a friend!

For the third time that evening Norma turned to climb the two flights of stairs when the door of the first floor rear apartment opened, letting out a slanting wedge of light. Bessie Hawthorne's face appeared in the opening.

"Oh, Miss Kent!" the girl called. "Yes, Bessie?"

The custodian's daughter came forward. "Did he take him, Miss Kent? I mean the puppy. Did the boy take him?"

Norma nodded. "Yes," she said. "There wasn't any doubt about that boy and dog belonging together. You should have seen him."

Bessie smiled. "That's good," she said. "I was going to tell you Ma's coming home tomorrow so you couldn't keep the pup downstairs much longer. Oh—she paused dramatically—"did you get your message at the office?"

"What message?"

"Didn't you get it? Goodness me—the man said it was important!"

Honors In Shooting Go To The Snake

HARLINGEN.—Dave Ferguson, constable of Harlingen, believes it's no test of marksmanship to clip off the head of a rattlesnake with a pistol bullet. In fact, if there's any honor in such target shooting, it should go to the snake. And Constable Ferguson will tell you why.

"All you have to do is point the pistol at a coiled rattler, pull the trigger and his head flies off. The reason is that a snake on guard points its head directly at any menacing object. No aim is needed."

Chatterton Art Vivifies a Great Romantic Drama

A superb ability to touch the deepest emotions of an audience has brought Ruth Chatterton her present tremendous popularity. Her characterizations are vivid, sincere; she sweeps people with her through romance and high drama with compelling realism.

Add to the unequalled Chatterton ability a story that abounds in dramatic power, filled with tense situations, with a depth of feeling that brings a catch to the throat, and you have the elements of Ruth Chatterton's new drama, "The Magnificent Lie."

There are sobs in "The Magnificent Lie." There are laughs as well. And, more than anything, there is dramatic emotion, intensified by occasional flashes of humor.

Young, attractive, dramatically efficient Ralph Bellamy makes a brilliant bow in a featured role that gives him the greatest opportunity any young male actor has enjoyed in months of screen productions. One-time favorite stock player, more recently a Broadway star, he played his first featured picture role in "The Secret Six."

A stroke of real showmanship genius put Stuart Erwin into the featured cast. He adds a note of comedy, mixed with dramatic pathos, that assures the production of well-rounded entertainment value.

Francoise Rosay and Charles Boyer, French actors popular on the Parisian stage, contribute interesting character parts to the production, and Sam Hardy is in the cast.

"They're out—so they can't be in!"

Every LUCKY STRIKE is made of the finest tobacco leaves the world can offer—the finest from Turkey—the finest from Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia and the Carolinas—the Cream of many Crops throughout the world. But all tobacco leaves, regardless of price and kind, its nature produces them, contain harsh irritants. LUCKY STRIKE'S exclusive "TOASTING" Process—a process that mellows, that purifies, that includes the use of the modern Ultra Violet Ray—expels certain harsh irritants naturally present in every tobacco leaf. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds, who use them as a base in making sheep-dip, as well as a powerful spraying solution for trees, flowers and shrubs—enough to permit the daily dipping of over 50,000 sheep or the daily spraying of many thousands of trees. Thus, you are sure these irritants, naturally present in all tobacco leaves, are not in your LUCKY STRIKE. "They're out—so they can't be in!" No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat.

Methodist Ladies Put On Play

The Woman's Missionary society of the Methodist church sponsored a get-together and fellowship meeting last evening at the Methodist church in Ranger when 125 members and friends of the church enjoyed a musical program, and afterwards an old-fashioned watermelon feast.

The program rendered was as follows: Music by Ranger High school band; vocal solo, Miss Mary Elizabeth Campbell; male quartet, composed of James Wesley Campbell, Arthur Deff-bach, Charles Williams and Frank Plumley; piano solo, Miss Nell Tibbels; vocal solo, Miss Maxine Henderson.

After the musical program, the ladies of the church staged a play entitled "A Typical Missionary Society."

Ladies of Christian Church Entertained

Mrs. E. A. Grigolett entertained the Adolphus Bible class of the First Christian church at her home in the Sinclair camp Monday afternoon. The club meets next week with Mrs. Montgomery.

W. M. S. Meets In Circles Monday

The W. M. S. of the First Baptist church met in circles Monday afternoon. Circle No. 1 met with Mrs. Ross Hodges. Mrs. W. A. Lewis read the devotional and Mrs. J. N. McFatter led in prayer. The W. M. S. manual was finished and examinations taken. At the close of the study, refreshments were served to if good attendance.

Circle No. 2 met at the home of Mrs. Hugh Russell. Mrs. Wheeler opened the meeting with the devotional and Mrs. Lee Mitchell led in prayer. Work was continued on the book, Stewardship and Missions. The circle discussed plans for royal service program, which they will give in September. During the social hour Mrs. Russell served lead watermelon.

Circle No. 3 had no regular meeting Monday but several of the members went visiting instead.

The society will meet at the home of Mrs. Bob Hodges next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock for the regular monthly royal service program. Circle No. 3 will be in charge. All members are cordially invited to attend.
