BUSINESS AND COPPER.

Citizens of the mining states will be especially interested in a recent statement by Colonel D. C. Jackling, president of the Utah Copper Company.

"I see no indications of a downward trend, or, for that matter, an upward trend, in business," Mr. Jackling said. "Naturally business men hope for a change toward better conditions."

"Improvement of the German situation would reflect itself everywhere. Copper, like other so-called world commodities, would be benefited by improvements in the situation. Stabilization of the silver market and improvement of prices for the metal would help everything, including copper, through the reopening of markets."

"The downward trend of copper is reflecting curtailment of production on some properties. It is a natural recession because of low prices, and as long as low prices continue, producers cannot afford to produce more than they can dispose of."

THIS ECONOMIC PROBLEM.

How to get the old economic machine out of the slough and to rolling ahead on the highway of prosperity is a question that no one seems able to answer, much less to provide a solution for. For the past 18 months the nation, and the greater part of the world, for that matter, has had a good case of the dumps. It has been like the morning after, with a terrific headache to remind the old globe of its orgiastic revelry in speculation and high prices. Prices boomed and with prices production. Everybody was after all he could get. Now that he has it he doesn't know what to do with it. Somewhere on the economic rails a lot of congestion has taken place. Production has backed up until stores and graineries are bursting with plenty, while the millions who would normally consume this produce are without the wherewithal to purchase it. The medium of exchange, the specie which represents value, has become twisted into some terrible snarl. Intrinsic value, represented by the commodities produced and necessary to human sustenance, is rotting in uselessness.

It is, to put it frankly, the devil of a situation and it doesn't look all too healthy for the capitalistic system which has permitted itself to acquire an over-emphasis in some quarters with a resulting overbalance.

Remedies for the sickness are plentiful. Everyone, from the street corner politician to the high "muckity-muck" who reigns in the upper stratum of the business and social world, has his pet panacea.

Nations, many of them on the ragged edge of financial security, are grappling heroically with the question, resorting to all manner of expedients in frantic efforts to balance their budgets. Brought face to face with the bare truth that national independence means in the final analysis interdependence, the powers of the world have rushed to the financial aid of one tottering member after another with a sort of financial Alpine rope that affords a community of strength.

The prime necessity of providing buying power among the masses as a means of restoring the clogged channels of circulation is the aim of most programs that have been advanced. Work for the working man is the cry, and every exponent of a doctrine of relief calls upon agencies of government and business to provide work for the working man. Public works are looked upon as the means of bringing about the necessary employment and a widespread program of this character, which must of necessity be supported by public money, is embodied in almost all proposed solutions.

But the fault with such an expedient lies in the fact that no economic system can depend upon the government for support. Such a system must stand upon its own feet and it admits a serious weakness if in times of particular stress or crisis it applies to the government for relief. It is, of course, a patent fact that it can and should complain of restrictions that hamper and to the extent that it appeals for the removal of unjust regulations it can seek relief, but from the previous standpoint, the economic system is appealing for succor to something which it itself supports. In the final analysis the expedient of appealing for governmental sustenance encourages paternalism.

It requires money to support huge governmental programs and to supply public money it is necessary to levy taxes. The effect of the efforts which have so far been made in the direction of bolstering the economic structure with public work is already being seen in the trouble which the nation and the states, specifically our own state, are having in keeping taxation down. The tax curve, even in this period of decreasing values and rising dollar buying power, is rising. Even the 69 cent rate prevailing in the state this year, is measured in dollar buying power, a far higher rate than it would have been two years ago.

Obviously there is little prospect of getting out of the economic hole through paternalistic governmental operations. That is merely another version of the unethical custom of robbing Peter to pay Paul. Rather, it would seem, the government could perform a more effective service by taking such steps as will serve to get rid of the millstone of gold that hangs around the national neck. England's action in suspending its gold standard is regarded by many leading bankers and financiers as a hopeful event and the effect of the action in restoring body to the national currency, is revealed in a healthful influence upon the British markets. The United States' allegiance to its gold standard may contain the crux of the present problem.

THE PRESENT-DAY GAS INDUSTRY.

At present consumption of manufactured gas is nearly four times as great as it was twenty years ago. The industry is composed of 655 companies—of which 603 are privately owned and operated—serving 4,600 towns and villages. To manufacture the present annual gas output requires almost 10,000,000 tons of bituminous coal, 443,000 tons of anthracite, 4,188,000 tons of coke and 962,312,000 gallons of oil. Sales for 1929 were 40,000,000 cubic feet over the former total established the year before.

The seers of forty or fifty years ago said that the advent of electricity sounded the death knell of gas. Like most seers, they were bad guessers.

New Rate Ends Old Flour Fight

By United Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Freight rate handicaps on southwestern flour mills have been eliminated with the announcement of new schedules by the interstate commerce commission.

The new rate parity climaxed an eight-year fight by the Southwestern Millers League and the Kansas City board of trade. The new schedule affects shipments from here and from Minneapolis and northwestern mills to eastern points of consumption.

Under the schedule shipment from southwestern mills into the 20,000,000-barrel consuming territory of Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Michigan, Kentucky and West Virginia is on the same per mile basis as that from northwestern mills.

Under the rates in effect before the revision, the northwestern mills had an advantage of from two to 10 cents per barrel.

LETTERS URGE COMPLETION OF SCOUT DRIVE

The Boy Scout fund drive in Ranger is making headway, though there is still plenty of work to be done by the committee, H. C. "Andy" Anderson, chairman of the finance committee announced today.

Letters are being mailed to all members of the committees urging them to complete the work as soon as possible and letters are also being mailed to business firms which have offices outside of Ranger urging them to take part in the drive and to mail checks for their donations as soon as possible.

A total of $382 in cash had been reported this morning, which is short of the total amount needed to carry on the work for the coming year, but there is still a chance of filling the budget if all the committees continue their work until they have covered the territory assigned to them, Mr. Anderson said today.

The letters mailed to the committees and to the concerns with offices outside the city follows: To All Committees, Boy Scouts of America, Finance Drive, Gentlemen:

The Boy Scout drive is going along very nicely and I am frank to say, better than was expected. This, of course, is a result of the good work performed by you who had charge of the collecting of funds.

The drive, however, is incomplete, and our records indicate that your committee have considerable work yet to do. You realize for one committee to complete their work and other to incomplete their work would be an injustice to the community since each committee was assigned a certain sector and we are asking that you complete your work as soon as possible by bringing this work and drive to conclusion.

Your usual promptness and co-operation will be greatly appreciated.

Yours for scouting,
 H. C. "ANDY" ANDERSON,
 Chairman Boy Scout of American Finance Drive.

Dear Sirs: We are making a drive for funds for the Boy Scouts of America and as you people are a part of our city, we felt like you would want a part in helping to make the drive a success.

We are sure that you are called upon on various occasions for donations for the many needs of the community in which you operate, nevertheless, we must all assume our responsibility and see to it that all worthy causes are given due consideration.

Any amount that you feel is justice to the cause to represent your company in this community will be greatly appreciated. For your convenience, we are enclosing a pledge card which you will kindly fill in, keeping one copy for your files which will act as a receipt, returning the other copy to us, together with your check for our records and files.

Thanking you for your consideration in this matter,
 Very truly yours,
 H. C. "ANDY" ANDERSON,
 Chairman Boy Scouts of American Finance Drive.

of placing the legislation upon the foundation he built. . . . It seems that the legislature has declared cotton farming to be a public utility. . . . the cotton law declares it "impressed with a public interest," the basis upon which the state regulates certain activities as public utilities. . . . If that stands, acreage, rents, types, costs and prices could be made subject to state regulation.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—Senator David Aiken Reed of Pennsylvania is commonly regarded here as Andy Mellon's own representative, as a deep-dyed reactionary and as a very sympathetic little brother of the very rich.

All of a sudden Senator Reed pops out with a proposal which appears to kick all holders of great wealth right in the midriff and as radical, if not more so, than anything suggested this season by the most wild-eyed member of Congress.

Asserting that wealthy estates should be taxed after death to the point where the heirs, except for widows and dependent children, would have to go to work, Reed lines up with the progressives and other liberal-minded folk who see a great menace in the rapid concentration of wealth and believe heavy taxation is the best cure for the disease.

This must have sounded to some of his multi-millionaire admirers as if David suddenly turned bolshevik, for his plan would end all thought of perpetuating the great American fortunes. But the senator is a temperate man, sleeps free from nightmares and, according to his friends, has had that radical idea in his head for a long time.

ANYWAY, Reed certainly has had more than a passing glance at the increasing concentration of wealth. His father's law firm represented the Mellon interests and now David's firm does. David was counsel for the Steel Corporation before his election to the Senate and he is friendly with the du Ponts. Naturally, he also has a wad of money himself.

Dave's friends will tell you that he would not be so widely considered a pal of great big business if it were not for the Mellon shadow and that when Mellon passes from the local scene Reed will look a lot bigger and better than he does now. They point out that everyone concedes him to be a senator of extraordinary ability and assert that this is by no means the first time he has gone counter to the thought of our biggest and best plutocrats, even including Mellon.

Long years ago he was chairman out to do its part in electing a president of the United States. . . . The wets certainly will invite disaster if they fight for outright commitment to dampening of the prohibition laws. . . . It is not impossible that driving the bargain of Sahara dryness at the sacrifice of every other consideration would make the democratic cause hopeless.

John L. Darrouzet, Galveston political leader, is a dry, but he says, also, with equal frankness, he is for Al Smith, all the time. . . . He is one of those taking a middle-ground course of trying to leave the troubles of the wet-dry issue unstirred in Texas by sending a delegation free to do its best for Texas ideals and to help Texas count in the nomination and the election of an outstanding democrat.

As a first step in the "battle of courthouses" that is sure to come, Senator Walter C. Woodward, co-author of the cotton legislation, will during the final days of this session begin a brief of the points sustaining the constitutionality of the acreage law.

It was a coincidence that during passage of the cotton bill, depending upon the conservation amendment for its claim of validity, the author of the conservation amendment should have passed from the scene, in the death of former Rep. Leonard Tillotson. . . . Acreage control probably was far from the ideas with which Mr. Tillotson projected the amendment; but had he been physically able during the last days of his life to come to the sharp edge of the broken portion to scrape off the ink.

It may be the extreme wets and the extreme dries will have common cause in a program of harmony next year, when Texas sets

By LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "MAD MARRIAGE"

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Pretty Norma Keet, 20-year-old secretary, marries Mark Travers, millionaire's son, in spite of the opposition of Mark's father, F. M. Travers.

The story opens in Marlboro, middle-western metropolis. After an extravagant honeymoon at fashionable Blue Springs during which Mark spends all his money and borrows $500 the couple return to Marlboro. Mark loses his first job. Then he becomes a floor-walker in a department store. In spite of poverty he and Norma are happy until his father sends for him. Travers offers to take Mark back into his business organization if the son will prove he can make good. His first task involves a business trip to France. Norma must remain at home. She tries to persuade Mark not to go but is unable to do so.

Norma, rudely treated at her father-in-law's home, slips away, leaving no trace of her whereabouts. Chris Saunders, her former roommate, helps her find a job. Mark's father, determined to effect a divorce, employs detectives to track the girl. Norma produces records to show that Norma three years earlier had been convicted of a vice charge. In spite of evidence that this charge was framed and Norma innocent, Travers sends his lawyer to Paris. Norma knows nothing of all this until she receives a letter telling her Mark has secured a divorce. Next day in the office Norma faints and Chris take her home. Though ill, Norma goes to the Travers home to appeal to Mark's parents. She learns they are in Florida. Norma moves to the apartment. One night Chris meets Bob Farrell, former suitor of Norma's, and says, "Something has to be done and you must help me."

BEGIN HERE TODAY

One of the changes will probably be made in the field, since Don Flahie, fleet footed leader of the Bulldogs, is out of the lineup with a wrenched leg which he received in the last few minutes of practice yesterday afternoon. Flahie may be out of the game for a couple of weeks, though it is possible that he may be ready to play again by the time the Eastland Mavericks invade Lillard field on October 9.

On this week-end the Mavericks, who will be the next foes of the Bulldogs and will play the first conference game of the season, are to play the San Angelo Bobcats in San Angelo. Last year the Mavericks easily defeated the Cats in San Angelo in a conference game and predictions are that they will repeat this year in the non-conference battle.

Ranger defeated the Central team last year in Fort Worth and should repeat this year, even though the team is slightly crippled. Flahie will be missed in the backfield, though there is some good material to take his place. Squint Williams has a banged up knee that is not giving him much trouble and he should be able to play part of the game.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY

MUCH food value can be embodied in a simple pudding, and if other foods are properly eaten there is no reason to deny children the pleasure of a sweet, small persons usually look forward to dessert at the end of their meals with such eagerness. The pudding or whatever the dessert may be should be planned to be a definite part of the menu and not merely an addition to it.

Mild puddings of agreeable texture can be made in varied forms to be acceptable to almost everyone. EGGS, cornstarch, rice, tapioca, bread crumbs, gelatine, junket and sea moss can be used with silk singly or in combinations with fruits. Such puddings offer much nourishment for growing bodies and are not difficult to digest. An easily digested pudding that is suitable for children surely cannot hurt the adult members of a family and need not be distasteful to them.

Rich steamed puddings and rich pastries are difficult to digest and have no place in a child's diet. When the family dessert is of this type, a plain dessert of fruit can be substituted with little extra work on the mother's part.

Long Cooking Essential

Whenever cornstarch or tapioca is used, long cooking is imperative. This means that they must be pre-cooked before combining with eggs, for all egg dishes must be cooked at a low temperature. Tapioca also must be pre-cooked when the pudding contains egg. Remember that all poorly cooked starches are unpalatable and difficult to digest.

The sauce used with the pudding is another important factor. Plain cream is often liked while make desirable accompaniments for children's puddings.

There is a rice pudding stiffened with gelatine that is unusually good and inexpensive. No eggs are used in the recipe.

The move is considered a good thing by the management as it puts the company in one of the most desirable locations in town and will be more convenient for shoppers.

Auxiliary Superintendents of Cisco District Met Tuesday.

Auxiliary superintendent of Christian social relations from all over the Cisco district were called to meet Sept. 29, at the Eastland Methodist church. Mrs. Bert McGlamery, district superintendent of Christian social relations, presided. The morning devotional was based on the Scripture, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Christian social relations superintendents have under their direction many and varied efforts on the part of missionary women to bring the "abundant" life to those who have it not. A heart-to-heart discussion of the phases of work and problems involved consumed the time till noon.

The afternoon devotional message was based on the Scripture, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Power is necessary to success, and this power will come only from Jesus Christ. Plans were made for definite service along the lines of citizenship, world peace, civic and social welfare work, inter-racial relations and rural development. The session was concluded with a splendid rendition of the negro national anthem, by Charlene Coleman of Eastland. Members of the group were delighted to have with them during the afternoon session Mrs. S. J. Rucker of Delson, conference superintendent of publicity.

Those present were: Meses, Greer of Delson, Fate of Carbon, Lanater of Gorman, Stafford of Ranger, Sternberg of Breckenridge, and Johnson and McGlamery of Eastland.

If this is your trouble, why not take steps to overcome it—remembering that a "tired feeling" may be a warning . . . so are pimples, boils and paleness.

For generations S.S.S. as a tonic has been helping people gain New Strength, better health and happiness. Its successful record of over 100 years in restoring strength and vitality to the blood surely warrants your giving it a good trial.
