It looks like the baldheaded man may indulge in a real hope of growing again a full suit of hair. On no less an authority than the Popular Science Monthly the positive statement is made that this important (to baldheads) matter has been settled. Without attempting to give all the technical details of why men lose their hair, or why this particular treatment will restore it, we would make it plain that this is no quack advertising scheme but comes from the University of Illinois College of Medicine. Dr. B. N. Bengston, the expert in charge of the experiments says baldness in most instances is caused by a deficiency in the secretions of the endocrine (whatever that is) glands and that by injection of a pituitary (something else we know nothing about) gland preparation this deficiency can be overcome.

The treatment was tried on 16 very bald men and, as in every case, the experiment was a complete success. Dr. Bengston thinks that coincident can be ruled out. One man bald since 1914 grew a full head of hair in four weeks; another man 60 years old who was completely bald, not a hair on his head, commenced the use of the remedy and in five weeks he had a full crop of white silky hair. And in none of the 16 cases was there a failure.

HOUSE OF STEEL PREDICTS PROSPERITY

Hallelujah! "The low point has been passed"—again. Charles Abbott is the executive of the American Institute of Steel Construction. He pushed his face into the prosperity picture in the city of Chicago. He declared the United States is approaching a "greater era of prosperity than it has ever known." He said huge orders in the steel industry are being held up but are bound to come out in the future. He pointed out railroads, construction companies, automobile and farm implement manufacturers, "and others" will have to buy steel. He has made a coast to coast survey of the nation. He found that sentiment has changed from one of fear to one of confidence and hope in the future. He predicted, with all the passion of sincerity of an inspired prophet, "the low point has been passed; the reconstruction program has added confidence, business begins to feel its affect. Prophecies and economic predictions have fallen flat thus far on the ears of the people. Now they should be ready to welcome a greater era of prosperity than the republic has ever known."

A representative of the House of Steel said so.

FEDERAL MILLIONS FOR TEXAS HIGHWAYS

Democratic leaders of the House of Representatives have put over a huge appropriation of federal aid for state highways. Texas will be entitled to about $15,000,000 additional through enactment of the democratic-sponsored emergency road construction bill. This measure has been sent to the senate. Republican stand-pat leaders say President Hoover will veto it. This money, $15,000,000 additional federal aid, can be used by Texas to match regular federal aid funds now to its credit in the treasury, but unexpended because the state cannot raise sufficient money to carry its half of the burden. In the Lone Star state this amounts to $6,687,000. The emergency fund under provisions of the House bill is to be repaid from regular federal appropriations over a period of 10 years beginning in 1938.

Aid has been furnished the railroads, the big corporations, the banks, and other industries. Aid has been pledged to the farmers of America in the shape of loans. Now why shouldn't the hand workers of the country be given employment, speaking of the highway legislation, in order to carry them through the period of passing depression? Democratic congressional leaders say that the enactment of this bill of highway relief for the state will furnish employment to 1,000,000 unemployed workers. Isn't it just as important to feed the minnows as to fatten the whales? No, feed is not the word—employment in order that they may be able to feed themselves and their dependents.

RELIEF FOR REPOSITORS IN CLOSED BANKS

Democratic leaders, including Senators Glass of Virginia, Fletcher of Florida, and George of Georgia, have reported a bill to safeguard depositors in closed banks. Wasn't a pledge given by the president that the Dawes reconstruction credit corporation would render aid or rather relief to the depositors of closed banks? But not "the big banks and big corporations as they can take care of themselves." It is in the record and files of newspapers. Of course record files grow dusty but those who watch the record of daily events insist that the record should be kept straight, not for posterity but for the people now on earth.

The Hindenburg Line, 1932!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Perhaps some of the states can use a few of the unadopted suggestions for new taxation which were left over when the Democrats completed their tax bill.

But one of the most frequent proposals in the unsolicited wad of mail which came in from individuals over the country who wanted to help is hardly available for state use—that for a tax on legal fees.

On the other hand, some drys urged the House Ways and Means Committee to plaster a tax on wine grape bricks.

And other drys felt that there should be a special tax on ginger ale and all mineral waters which, as everyone knows, are sometimes used for nefarious purposes.

Just $750,000,000. ONE cent urged that the problem be met almost in one fell swoop: "Put in a flat tax of 10 on every person over 21 years of age. There are 75,000,000 of them, so that would mean $750,000,000."

Other taxes were proposed on labor-saving machinery, rabbit pelts, matches, chewing gum, salt and soft drinks containing certain ingredients.

Use of the taxing power as a regulatory device was urged by those who wanted a heavy levy on arms and ammunition to prevent the slaughter of game, and others who proposed that all corporations benefiting from the tariff should pay the government everything in excess of 15 per cent earned income.

Fall at Santa Fe

THE warden out at the Santa Fe penitentiary won't tell the newspaper boys anything about how Albert B. Fall is getting along inside, but a man here who recently visited Fall says the former secretary of the Interior will remain in the hospital until his release in May or June.

Fall's bad heart and a bronchial trouble are both serious ailments.

It isn't true that he had pneumonia a while ago, as reported. He receives good care, according to his friends, but still cannot walk without assistance. His mind is clear, but he grows bitter and "unreasonable" when discussing his own case.

He believes he was the victim of defense lawyers who made him the goat in the oil scandal trials. He finds the atmosphere colder than his home climate near El Paso. His wife or daughter is permitted to visit him once a week.

Around the Speaker

YOU have noticed, if you ever observed the House of Representatives in session, that about 15 men surround the speaker on the terraced superstructure which rises from the well and is surmounted on the speaker's chair.

Realizing that after some years of observation he didn't know exactly who all these gentlemen were, your correspondent asked. The lineup is as follows: First, Parliamentarian Lewis Deschler and Assistant Parliamentarian Lewis T. Roy stand on either side of the chair.

Directly beneath the chair are two reading clerks, A. E. Chaffee and Patrick J. Halligan. Then Tally Clerk E. F. Sharboff, in charge of roll calls and the calendar, and Journal Clerk Louis Sirkey, who keeps the minutes and makes up the only legal documentary record of what happens.

And a Timekeeper

THERE'S a timekeeper who clocks the members, so the presiding officer can bang the gavel when their allotted speech time is up. And in the front row, on the well level, are two or three reporters of debates with a clerk who sees to it that copy for the Congressional Record goes to the right place and in the right order.

Also, in the well, at Doorkeeper Joseph J. Sinnott's desk are usually two or three clerks who answer questions, supply copies of bills and reports and inform entering members of what's going on. Finally, one or two pair of clerks at the desk of the sergeant-at-arms.

place who makes a hobby of collecting postcards. I've sent him mail from such places as Maverick, Gouldsbush, Colmesniel, Burke, Scipio and many other out of the way post offices and I've never been in a post office yet that had worse looking fixtures in it than right here in the dear old Egg Basket. I wouldn't be surprised to see Old Rip's grandfather come out of those fixtures if they were ever dismantled and replaced with new ones.

I don't think President Hoover could find a better way of starting the country off to prosperity than to put on a crew of men and have them scrape off the old varnish off all old post office fixtures and replace with new.

Getting back to my little talk with Patterson as we shiveringly sorted out our mail and threw about a dozen franked letters into the wastebasket, Patterson said blank for the new farm loans are here. I forgot whether he said see him or go to the Chamber of Commerce or what. However, I guess anybody who figures there's a chance to borrow some money will go and find out for themselves.

What follows is merely what one man thought at the time it was written, and the writer reserves the right to change his mind concerning any subject, without notice, explanation or apology.

This was probably the coldest morning since 27th of last March. I've heard thermometer readings mentioned as low as 14 degrees. Probably by nightfall these stories will have the temperature going as low as zero. Every time it passes from one person to another it drops a degree or so, so there's no telling how low it would go if there were only one thermometer to start the story from.

Saw J. C. Patterson at the post office early this morning. He allowed as how the fruit and everything else in the way of crops was 100 per cent killed. At any rate it was plenty cold in the post office lobby. But you are not supposed to loaf around there anyway. And who would want to loaf there? I'm asking. Whoever is in charge of keeping the equipment of post offices in shape should visit the Eastland office. Instead of giving off the appearance of permanence it looks like a bunch of junk scrapped up from somewhere to be used in an emergency. . . . like a boom town office or something.

Speaking of Sports

By STUART CAMERON, United Press Sports Editor. Canzoneri's Title Safe For Some Months Yet. Tony Canzoneri will be lightweight champion until June, at least. It has been expected that the winner of the recent Ray Miller-Sammy Fuller bout would earn a chance for the lightweight title. Fuller won, and decisively, too, but it now develops that Fuller must take another hurdle.

This hurdle will be decided in the Billy Petrolie-Bat Battalino bout at Madison Square Garden, New York, March 11. The plan is to send the winner of this match against Fuller, with that winner being definitely in line for a bout with Tony in June.

John Drake Returns To Horseback Tracks. John Drake, who has ever insisted that "you can't beat the horses," and who has spent much of his life trying to establish the truth of his axiom, is making an active return to racing next week. His newly acquired horse, Coup de Chateau, is expected to run in the Grand National at Aintree.

Old-timers in sport have heard lots about John Drake. He is a survival of the days of "Bet-You-A-Million" Gates, and was regarded as a plunger on a par with his more widely known contemporary. Gates is reputed to have won more than $500,000 during the British season of 1899. He is said to have spent that half million, to have won as much again, and spent that, too.

FACTS ABOUT INCOME TAXES

No. 7

Returns of Husband and Wife

If husband and wife should each have a net income in excess of $4,000, but neither a net income in excess of $8,000, it is to their interest, in filing separate income tax returns for the year 1931, to divide the personal exemption of $3,500 between them, as shown by the following illustration, in which the husband claims $3,000 and the wife $500.

Net income, husband	$7,000
Personal exemption	3,000
Taxable at 1 1/2 per cent	4,000
Husband's tax	60
Net income, wife	4,500
Personal exemption	500
Taxable at 1 1/2 per cent	4,000
Wife's tax	60
Total for husband and wife	120

The normal tax rate being 1 1/2 per cent on the first $4,000 of net income in excess of the personal exemption and other credits, 3 per cent on the next $4,000, and 5 per cent on the balance, any other division of the personal exemption would have subjected part of the husband's or wife's income to the higher rate. The computations do not include the 25 per cent credit on earned incomes.

Aside from dividing the personal exemption, husband and wife often may further decrease the amount of their total taxes by filing separate returns and reporting their separate incomes therein, providing their joint income is sufficiently large to be subject to the surtax which applies to net incomes in excess of $10,000.

The Newfangles (Mom 'n' Pop)

—I think I've got something in my eye.

"You mean both eyes, don't you?" the other demanded as Ellen fumbled for her handkerchief.

Ellen, without replying, fished for her pocket mirror and began to dab with a handkerchief for the imaginary object in her eye. Tony had chosen the right means to stiffen the Rossiter pride.

"It's out now," Ellen said in a trembling voice.

"Subject closed in other words," Tony relieved her. "That's o. k. by me. I'm no Broadway columnist."

She waited while Ellen replaced the handkerchief and mirror and powdered her reddened nose. Finally she spoke with some embarrassment. "Did you come to get that $10 back? I can't let you have it right away but—"

"Of course I didn't come for that!" Ellen protested. "I meant that as a sort of parting gift to you. I—you know I won't be working here any more. I'm to be married Friday and we sail for Europe Saturday."

The black eyes beneath the soiled picture hat grew big and round.

"Aren't you high-hat?" Tony exclaimed. "Who's the lucky man?"

"It's a secret."

"Well, anyway," Tony went on after a pause, "you're leaving one broken-hearted boy friend behind. I hope that'll make your honeymoon sweeter."

"Who do you mean?" Ellen asked, feeling her heart sink.

"That good looking John I thought you'd tumbled for was up last night," Tony explained. "Did he have fits when he found you'd ditched us? I'll say he did!"

Ellen left Tony soon afterward. They casually said goodbye for what they thought would be forever.

Canton Leader

New hero of China is youthful-looking General Chen Chi-Tang, above, war lord of the Canton Nationalist forces. He has dispatched heavy reinforcements and contributed more than a million dollars to aid in the defense of Shanghai against the Japanese.

He should believe that she had known from the first, had thought of him as he had thought of her—as a casual, happy-go-lucky playmate whose ways had parted from her ways.

But she was so feverishly eager for him to receive the note that she stopped in a telegraph office and sent it to his studio by messenger.

Recital Ended Silence Of Old Church Organ

By United Press.

PARIS—After six years of careful repair work, the ancient organ of the famous church of Saint-Eustache has been heard again.

A crowd of 10,000 people gathered for the ceremony presided over by Cardinal Verdier in celebration of the venerable instrument's complete restoration. Joseph Bonnet, who has been for 25 years organist of the church, played the musical program.

The organ was first installed in 1876, and was hailed by musicians from all over the world as the finest instrument of its kind in existence. In 1926 it was thought inadvisable to continue to play it until it had been thoroughly gone over and repaired. This was its first overhauling in 56 years. Certain modernizing improvements were made simultaneously with the repairs, and so minute was the work done on the ancient pipes and delicate fixtures that a period of six years was required. Many of the pipes were enlarged and the whole organ electrified.

The program given consisted of the Prelude and Fugue in F. Minor, Clerambault's "Suite du Premier Ton," Jean Philippe Rameau's "In Convertendo," and Liszt's "Grande Fantaisie et Fugue."

The organist and Archbishop of Paris were further assisted by several soloists, the choir, and an orchestra. A group of religious numbers were given by the Maitrise under the direction of A. de Vallombrosa.

The dime-a-dance girl

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Ellen Rossiter, beautiful 20-year-old, falls in love with Larry Harrowgate, young artist, whom she met at Dreamland where she works as a dance hall hostess. Larry is engaged to Elizabeth Bowes, a debutante. He shows Ellen attentions until Elizabeth returns from Europe.

From a sense of gratitude Ellen agrees to marry Steven Barclay, a kind and wealthy man of 57 who has paid hospital expenses for her brother, Mike, injured in a street accident. Barclay also finds a job for Bert Armstead, Ellen's sister's fiancé. The girl convinces herself that gratitude can take the place of love.

Barclay has been married twice. His first wife died and the second, from whom he was divorced, was Leda Grayson, notorious dancer. Barclay fears talk of the divorce may be revived when he marries Ellen so they plan to keep the matter secret.

Ellen and Myra quarrel when Myra refuses to let Barclay pay for her trousseau. She and Bert are to be married the same day as Barclay and Ellen.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXI

In one morning and afternoon Myra and Ellen bought everything they had ever dreamed of desiring. And how they loved it!

Steven had opened accounts in all the smart shops. The two excited girls had only walk into the softly lighted interiors and choose what they liked of New York's most beautiful offerings. Gowns, shoes, hats and gloves—all the accessories they had never been able to afford, they exclaimed over and bought.

They did not entirely lose their heads. They were too sensible for that. But both discovered that for years they had consoled themselves with a fallacy. It was not true that a beautiful girl could make a cheap frock look expensive. It was true that an expensive frock could make a beautiful girl more beautiful. Like all girls they revelled in this discovery.

They bought suits first, suits of soft imported tweed. Myra's was deep brown with cuffs of beaver. Ellen's was Oxford gray with a blue fox collar that stood around her face like an arrogant ruff. There were silk frocks and woolen frocks in brilliant autumn colors. There were quantities of cobwebby lingerie, delicate as mist, and tailored things in heavy crepe. They really splurged in shoes, ordering six pairs each. Handmade shoes, the first either girl had ever owned that exactly fitted the narrow Rossiter heels.

After calls back and forth to the hospital and much consultation they selected the gown Molly was to wear at the wedding. It was a pale blue chiffon with a brimmed hat to bring out the lake-blue of Molly's eyes. Ellen and Myra were to wear identical frocks—simple, dignified, white frocks bearing the definite and unmistakable stamp of Paris and the glittering Rue de la Paix.

They ate a hurried luncheon on the Avenue. They watched the crowd outside the windows, discussed their purchases and swore they wouldn't change a thing. At three o'clock, exhausted and happy, they wound up the orgy by buying three pairs of gorgeous pajamas—black and gold for Molly, blue for Myra, and peachy satin for Ellen.

"My feet will never be the same again," Myra admitted with a sigh. "but it was worth it."

"It was fun, wasn't it?" Ellen agreed, as she turned to give the interested saleswoman the Brooklyn address. She was pleased by the saleswoman's courteous interest even though she knew it was due to the limousine outside waiting for them.

"She thought we were rich," giggled Myra as they left the shop.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS By Blosser

"But then you are—I keep forgetting."

"You take the car, Myra," Ellen said, feeling a vague let-down in spirit. "I'll take a cab to the hospital after I've finished that business with the lawyers."

"Why don't we drive there first?" asked Myra.

"Too early. Besides, I want to walk."

"You must be made of iron," Myra laughed.

The chauffeur sprang to the curb to open the door. The boxes were piled inside. Myra stepped into the car, sank back with a sigh of blissful relief and gave the hospital address. The car whirled away. Ellen watched until it was lost in traffic.

She had a special reason for wanting to walk, but she did not intend that Myra should know it. She had an absurd and foolish desire to walk past Dreamland again, not to go upstairs but just to stare up at the garish windows. She had the idea that if she did that something would be settled definitely and forever. For days her mind had gone back wistfully to Dreamland until she no longer saw it as it was but dreamed of it as a place of youth and romance. She wanted to dispel that vision.

She walked briskly away from Park avenue. It was still early to go to the law office but it was too hot for briskness and Ellen was genuinely weary. Her steps slowed. Perhaps her impulse was a foolish one. She was done with Dreamland.

Several times she almost turned back but she kept on. There before

Post State President Presides At Founders Day Program.
Mrs. C. E. Madlocks, past president of the Texas Congress of Parent-Teacher associations and president of the Ranger Parent-Teacher and Child Study Club associations, presided in an interesting and gracious manner yesterday afternoon, when Hodges Oak Park Parent-Teacher association observed an impressive program on Founders Day.

This thirty-first anniversary of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers which has been so widely observed finds the organization with 49 state branches, more than 18,000 units and over a million members. Headquarters are at the national capital, with an executive secretary and an office staff, a field secretary, and two organizers and an official magazine, Child Welfare Field, who are ever ready to give assistance through interviews and correspondence.

With all of this wonderful background one of the most completely carried out and arranged programs, presided by an enthusiastic group of patrons and friends.

Mrs. C. E. May spoke on "Relationship to Home and School," Mr. May chose as his topic, "Value of P. T. A. to School," Rev. G. W. Thomas, pastor of the First Baptist church, gave an interesting talk on "The Church and the School." Prof. J. F. Holloway brought the colorful program to a close with a splendid talk selecting as the subject "The State and School."

Hodges Oak Park ward is doing some very commendable work in their Parent-Teacher association meetings, under the leadership of its president, Mrs. O. S. Driskill, who has proven to be one of the most capable and sincere workers ever to have acted as president.

As the last event of the hour was passing a plate of hot tea and cake were served by the hospitality committee of the organization.

DURING Lent, hot cross buns claim much of our interest. Many bakers feature this bread every Friday during the period while others save them especially for Good Friday and Easter morning.

The custom of eating hot cross buns originated in old England. In ancient times buns, if properly prepared, were supposed to keep for years. They probably took the place of a pagan sweetmeat served in honor of Easter, a Saxon goddess of the east whose feast was celebrated in the spring. The sign of the cross on the buns proclaimed it a Christian cake. Often the housewife put the sign of the cross on her bread to prevent the evil spirit from interfering with her baking. As Good Friday was considered the most unlucky day of the year she naturally took every precaution to guard against evil influences and make her baking a success.

Since proper hot cross buns are made with yeast, there are, of course, two good methods—the long process and the short process.

Long Process
One and one-half cups milk, 1-3 cup granulated sugar, 2 table- spoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 yeast cake, 4 tablepoons lukewarm water, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 egg, 1-2 cup currants, flour.

Short Process
One cup milk, 1 yeast cake, 1-2 cup lukewarm water, 1-3 cup granulated sugar, 3 cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 cup butter, 1 egg, 1-2 cup currants.

Farm Loan Applications Will Be Recived In Ranger Soon

Miss Frances Coughlin and Mayor John Thurman, who attended the meeting at Abilene Tuesday to receive instructions on reconstruction finance corporation farm loans for this district, reported today that a large number of committees and visitors from this section of the country attended the meeting.

Owen W. Sherrill pointed out that the loans could be filed through the local banks, but warned that bankers could not legally force payment on notes out of the money loaned by the government and pointed out that several bankers had forced farmers to make payments on local notes last year when they had presented the checks at the banks for payment. These bankers, Mr. Sherrill said, are to be prosecuted and many of them will find themselves in serious difficulty before it is over.

Application blanks have been received in Ranger for the farmers to fill out. Prior to filling out the applications, a mimeographed form will be given them, showing information that must be obtained by the applicant before their application can be filled out.

Information that will be required will be the name of the survey in which the farm is located, with a local description of the land; a crop acreage and production report for the years 1930 and 1931; the total amount of seed and feed on hand; the number and valuation of all stock owned by the applicant and a full and accurate account of all present indebtedness.

All crops grown by the applicant and everyone interested in that land must sign a waiver. If cash rent has been paid, the owner must sign a waiver. Applicant may not borrow on one piece of land and also work another. The mortgage must cover all land he is to work and all owners must sign the waiver. Cotton acreage on all land worked will be limited to 65 per cent of cotton grown last year on that land. If the applicant did not grow cotton last year he cannot grow any in 1932 on government money. Property covered in the mortgage forms should list the number of acres of each crop to be planted and also list the garden. If the borrower changes his plans and does not plant as specified, he agrees to notify the Dallas office.

One dollar per acre may be used for any purpose the farmer may wish to put it incidental to crop production, such as buying groceries, but none of the money may be used to liquidate debts, to pay off notes to banks or other firms or individuals, under penalty.

Sherrill, a former farmer and county agent and now a banker at Georgetown, prefaced his explanation of the terms upon which the government will loan money by remarking that Texas was in much better shape this year than last when farmers of 67 counties borrowed money from the government for crop production and farm rehabilitation purposes. Ninety per cent of this money has been repaid by West Texas counties, he said—a record for the nation. Some counties repaid 95 per cent and one repaid 98 per cent of its borrowings.

Advances may be made in installments, and these installments after the first advance, may be discontinued if it is shown that the provisions of the act are not being carried out by the borrower.

Maturity date is Nov. 30, 1932, but proceeds from sale of mortgaged crops must be applied to the indebtedness when crops are harvested and sold. Interest is deducted from the last installment and when loan is paid before maturity, unearned interest is returned to the borrower.

Most of Sherrill's time was taken up by a barrage of questions covering details of the actual machinery of the loan. Almost every county had its own special problem to be explained, and found the administrator ready with his answers.

South Gives UP EASY GOING WAYS FOR AIR
NEW YORK.—The belief that the south is somewhat slow and easygoing has been disproved. Aviation is to blame.

Transportation at two miles a minute and better wouldn't appear to intrigue the allegedly languid south. But the supposedly slowest part of the nation is busily using the fastest transport it can get and it's doing it regularly, according to the U. S. department of commerce. In fact, the biggest air liners in America are serving the south.

Further Expansion.
Not only is air transportation being used to its fullest extent, but a sound foundation is being laid for further air expansion. With 12 southern states and the District of Columbia comprising one-fifth of the population of the United States, this same area supports one-fifth of the air transport business of the nation, has established one-fifth of the airports and intermediate landing fields of the U. S. and is keeping pace with the north and west in building new ones.

Such a government-certified record thoroughly blasts the old-fashioned idea that the southland is more eager to linger than fly. Of the 457,340 passengers carried by air lines in 1931, the south had its proportionate share, while early 1932 indicates that the southerners easily are keeping abreast of the nation in air enthusiasm.

Scores of Planes.
Atlanta, one of the big air terminals of the south, has scores of planes arriving and departing daily. Eastern Air Transport carries passengers up and down the southern Atlantic seaboard and to inland cities in time that would make the old south gasp in amazement.

Atlanta, for instance, is only five hours and 32 minutes from Akron, O., 694 miles distant, by air. Nashville, although 210 miles away, is put into almost the commuting class by flights that require only an hour and 53 minutes. Jacksonville and St. Petersburg are linked in two hours and 10 minutes, even though they're 251 miles apart.

Nothing since the Civil war has aroused the south so much as aviation. Every town of importance is looking forward to the day when it can get the speedy ships of the sky to put into its port for passengers and mail. And they're not content with dreaming about it.
