A PACKING PLANT FOR THE TEXAS PRISON SYSTEM

Well, the Texas prison system has a hundred thousand dollar packing plant at the central penal farm near Sugarland in Fort Bend county. It costs $100,000. It was built by convict labor. It is to furnish meat for all state institutions. It is grinding, Capt. J. R. Flannegan is the manager of the penal farm. This plant will supply 35,000 pounds of meat daily to inmates of the prison system and other state institutions. This new $350,000 unit also includes a cannery and modern barracks to house 260 prisoners. It goes without saying that the Texas prison board made no mistake when it called Lee Simmons from his farm in Grayson county and made him general prison manager. He is not only one of the best farmers under the skies of Texas but one of the ablest and shrewdest business men. His record bristles with substantial achievements. He believes the prison farms should produce the stuff that will feed all the wards of the state behind prison bars or on convict farms. Moreover, never forget, Texas has a pardon board second to none in the United States. Three veterans of the law, men who had been famous district attorneys as well as noted district judges pass on all petitions or applications for paroles or furloughs. Their reports are accepted by the governor. Paroles and furloughs are granted. All this without the aid of lawyers seeking fat fees or powerful friends on the outside clamoring for clemency for men on the inside who have violated the laws. It is well for the Texas voter to remember some of these things and to keep them in mind on the day when he casts his primary ballot in July. There are no prison scandals. There are no convicts compelled to pay for their release from prison. Merit alone wins for the convict a parole or a furlough. This is as it should be.

SPEAKING OF COTTON TWINE

In one North Texas city alone, E. C. Oliver of Dallas, found more than 160,000 pounds of imported twines are being used annually. He holds that the use of cotton twines instead of twines made from imported materials would furnish outlets for hundreds of thousands of bales of cotton annually and has been collecting data on the subject. Cotton twine he says is slightly more expensive on the pound basis but it is really less expensive, for by measurement and weights he found that while he could buy at wholesale prices a pound of imported twine for 16.15 cents and a pound of cotton twine of equal breaking strength cost 20 cents, also wholesale, in the pound of imported twine there was only 1080 feet while in the pound of cotton twine the footage was 1575 feet. In other words, for one cent he could buy 60 feet of imported twine, but the one cent would pay for 75 feet of polished cotton twine, both of 40 pound breaking strength. According to the public relations man of Progressive Twines, Inc., an effort is being made to interest some of the Texas cotton manufacturers in the projects of adding twine equipment to their mills, giving them an additional product and at the same time affording stable sources of supply for buyers who would be interested in substituting a Southern article for one imported from overseas at a considerable saving in footage cost. Well, why not stand up for Texas and Texas staples and projects? Why not make a market for the cotton picked in Texas fields?

EDWARD YOUNG CLARK IN THE PICTURES

Edward Young Clarke, once a leading figure in the Ku Klux Klan and recently promoter of a new fraternal organization he calls Esskaye, has been committed to a Chicago psychopathic hospital for observation. His friends desired Clarke to be placed under observation for a test of his sanity. Edward Young voluntarily accompanied his friends to the Cook county hospital. His headquarters have been abandoned according to a Chicago dispatch and "all telephone communication removed." For years he was one of the most successful solicitors, indeed the brains of the Atlanta officers in the old days. Now an eminent physician has decided that he is suffering from paranoid dementia. Round and round goes the big wheel and every revolution that it makes is a record of the rise and fall of erstwhile familiar faces in the great national picture gallery. George M. Cohan was right. In one of his plays, the star said "Life is the queerest of propositions, after all."

RAIL HEADS HOLD AN IMPORTANT CONFERENCE

Rail heads of America, speaking of the advisory committee of the Association of Railway Executives, held an important conference in the city of New York. There were many proposals uppermost. One, an effort to reduce heavy expenses on the steam roads. In other words, to abandon costly competition. Of course, the meeting was held behind closed doors. No formal statement was issued but it was learned that interest was shown in a recent proposal that the Reconstruction corporation be allowed to grant loans to the carriers for use in buying their own bonds, now selling at a heavy discount, later retiring such securities. This plan would reduce present heavy interest charges of the carriers. Well, the carriers are up against it. They are the victims of economic transition in transportation methods. Costly competition must go and regulation of highway freighters and passenger buses must come to pass. This would be doing justice to all concerned.

SOLICITORS OF CHARITY

The present economic depression has produced a class of solicitors who are preying on the public in the guise of soliciting for charity. Both men and women are engaged in this business. They garb themselves in a semi-military hat in imitation of a well known charity organization and seal at the doors of homes shaking a tamborine asking for money and in some instances they sell a religious paper or calendar. Investigation of these parties by the chamber of commerce often shows that they hail from some distant city and that they give addresses of parties wholly unknown. All legitimate solicitors for distant charity organizations will call at the local chamber of commerce to receive a proper endorsement. As a rule, all others can be classed as frauds. It is a good rule to follow to give no cash to any of these unknown solicitors.

You should pin your faith in your city, just as your city pins its faith in you.

Origin of Kiss Told By Doctor

PARIS—The origin of the word to "kiss," according to Clement Wood, connoisseur of the art of oration, comes from the Anglo-Saxon coss, a kiss; and is, by general gossip, descended from the Gothic kustas, a proof or test, which in turn is a close relative of the Latin gustus, a taste. Some Uncertainty. "It is also kin to the Anglo-Saxon coosan, to choose," says Mr. Wood, who has written a little booklet entitled "The Art of Kissing." The antiquated bus is of uncertain origin, a byword of unknown race; although it is clearly close to the Bavarian Bussen, to kiss, and may be related to the Spanish and Portuguese busa, a kiss of reverence, which seems to have come from the Turkish busa, Persian busa, and Hindu busa, a kiss. Haverlock Ellis points out that manifestations resembling the kiss are found even as low as the insect. Snails and other insects caress each other with their antennae, while birds bill one another affectionately. Two Main Varieties. "Throughout the world there are two main varieties of kisses," continues Mr. Wood. "The touch, tactile or lip kiss, osculus Europeanus, and the nose or olfactory kiss, osculus Asiaticus. No man or woman is born a perfect kisser or a perfect lover. Society as now constituted is sadly lacking in proper facilities for learning the technique of love and kissing. A hundred years from now, every well equipped school will contain departments of Erotology, teaching theory as well as laboratory work and experimentation. The nose kiss may be done in three stages: first, the laying of the gentleman's nose gently against the lady's cheek. Secondly, the gentleman draws in a long breath of inspiration, lowering his eyelids as if in the extremity of bliss. Thirdly, the gentleman's lips give a slight smack, but without touching the lady's cheek whatever. This is the type of kiss that is the staple product of China, India, Ceylon, and parts of Africa."

Sam Sharpe of Roswell N. M. is visiting friends this week. Mr. Sharpe joins Mrs. Sharpe, who has been visiting Ranger friends for past few days, among whom are Mr. and Mrs. Owen Bray.

Political Follies of 1932

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

CHICAGO—There is a solid Democratic South and a solid Republican north.

The Republican solid south functions in June and the Democratic south functions in both June and November, which is to say that the Democrats of the south are the ones who win all the elections whereas the Republicans of the south get the postoffice and other federal jobs and show up every four years at the Republican convention with 250 or 300 delegate votes which invariably give the Republican administration full control.

The southern delegates, black and white, vote solidly because their branch of the party subsists on patronage and they know what will happen to them if they disobey the men behind the pie counter.

South's Veto Power

THE south, in both parties, appears to hold something of a potential veto power over the north. The Democrats can always be sure of getting all the south's electoral votes unless they nominate Al Smith and the Republicans can always be sure of not getting any southern electoral votes unless the Democrats nominate Al Smith. The southern Democrats can usually block a candidate for the Democratic nomination if they try hard enough, thanks to the two-thirds rule, and the southern Republicans can be used by the administration to block things that are demanded by a majority of delegates from the northern states where the party either always wins or always has a good chance.

That Repeal Plank

IT is now contended that if it had not been for the southern federal machine's virtual unanimity in voting for the administration recommitment plank, the plank demanding repeal would have been passed by the Republican national convention. A change of 105 votes would have carried the minority amendment. Thirteen southern states voted 258 for recommitment and Mississippi politicians declared later they had voted for repeal by mistake. Thirty-five states and the territories east a majority for repeal, even though the administration influence was predominant in many of their delegations. It should not be forgotten that it should not be forgotten that the south is dry, but if its delegates had been told to vote wet they would have done so without cavil. Both parties have heavy convention representation from states where they are non-effective—Republicans in the south and Democrats in northern and western states which haven't voted Democratic for decades.

C. O. P. "Realigning"

THE Republicans profess to meet in a small way the criticisms that attend their southern delegate system by realigning delegations in a small way. Basically, the states are allotted by each party about two delegates for each electoral vote. But the Republicans allow two delegates per congressional district only where the Republican vote has been 10,000 or more. Any district polling a smaller vote than that gets but one delegate. Votes that thus become left over are used as "bonuses" for other states. Democrats treat their non-effective states just like the others, asserting that the two-thirds rule prevents them from having a too disproportionate voice at the conventions. All states and territories, are equally represented on the national committees in each of the parties.

Contesting Delegations

SOUTHERN Republicans frequently send contesting delegations to the convention city. First, the national committee decides on these contests, then the credentials committee decides, and finally the convention itself, which usually merely ratifies. There is little pretense that these cases are decided on their merits. The national committee voted to seat delegations headed by two committeemen, Joe Tolbert of South Carolina and Perry Howard of Mississippi. The Hoover leaders had urged it to uphold the administration, which had undertaken to build up "holy white" organizations in the two states which were now being represented by the slates contesting the Tolbert and Howard groups. The credentials committee seated the Howard delegation and barred the Tolbert delegation. At the 1912 convention Taft had 233 southern votes and Roosevelt four. There were 216 contesting Democrat delegates and they were 21 thrown out by the administration on a roller in favor of the Hoover delegates.

YEAH... COME ON IN WITH ME—YOU WONT HAVE TO DO ANY TALKIN'...

HRMPH... WELL, GOOD MORNING, BOYS... WHAT CAN I DO FOR YOU?

AN' NO SOONER HAD THE DOGS CATCHER PICKED POODLE UP WHEN MR. DITMAR, OUT ON ROSEHILL, CAME AN' BOUGHT HER FOR FIVE DOLLARS... I CLAIM ITS MY DOG AN' MR. DITMAR WONT GIVE HER BACK TO ME.

MR. DITMAR! HMM... AND DO YOU KNOW IF HE HAS A LICENSE FOR THE DOGS?

YES, HE HAS... BUT DOES THAT MEAN THAT MY DOG BELONGS TO HIM? ISNT THERE ANY CHANCE TO GET MY DOG BACK?

JUST HOW CONSTABLE EARLY FIGURES THIS A CLEAR CASE IS BEYOND US... BUT WAIT! THE LAW BENDS MANY WAYS!!

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
CHERRY DIXON, pretty 19-year-old daughter of wealthy parents, falls in love with DAN WILLIAMS, newspaper reporter. She quarrels with her father about Dan leaving home, taking advantage of Leap Year, asks Dan to marry her.

They are married and for the first time Cherry finds what it means to look money. Her struggles with housework are discouraging. HILLY SHANNON, movie critic of the News, is friendly with Cherry. She meets handsome MAX DEANSON who also works on the News.

Cherry receives a letter from her mother enclosing a check for $500. She returns the check because pride will not let her keep it. Dan, worried about bills, undertakes to write a short story but becomes discouraged and leaves it unfinished.

Two days later Cherry learns her mother is critically ill. Cherry goes home and at her mother's bedside the father and daughter are reconciled. HILLY'S gossip is the crisis of her illness and after several days Cherry returns to the apartment. She goes to see her mother each day. On one of these visits she meets a man who has a plan to which he hopes she will agree.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXIX
WALTER DIXON leaned back in the desk chair. "I had a long talk with Dr. Knowles yesterday," he said slowly. "He says your mother isn't making the progress she should. Think she needs to get away—have a complete change of scene."

Cherry nodded. "She worries too much," she told him. "About the house and the way the servants do things. I've noticed it."

"Dr. Knowles says she should get away," the man went on, "for several months. Says air would be good for her. There's a little place on the coast of Massachusetts he recommends. Not a resort exactly. Quiet and comfortable."

"I think it's a splendid idea," Cherry said. "When can she go?"

"That depends. Knowles wants her to leave before we have an intense hot spell. Says it might take all the strength she's gained. Cherry, I want you to go with your mother."

"You want me to go?"

Dixon nodded. "To keep her company. The nurse will go too, of course, but your mother needs someone else. She'd rather have you than anyone."

"But Father, it's—it's out of the question. I can't leave!"

"Why not?"

"Well, I just can't!"

"Of course I'll take care of every expense. Clothes. Anything you may need. It'll be a splendid vacation. I thought you'd enjoy it!"

The girl moved uneasily. "Yes, of course," she said. "But—I can't leave Dan."

"You mean you're going to spend the entire summer in that tin box in an apartment. But that's ridiculous. Why should you? Just because he must stay here in the heat—no reason why you should!"

"I want to stay," Cherry said slowly. "You don't seem to understand. Father, that I love Dan. Besides he needs me here."

Walter Dixon got to his feet. "That has nothing to do with it," he said impatiently. "I should think that for your mother's sake—"

The girl interrupted. "I've done everything I could for Mother," she said, "and you know I've been glad to. But I can't leave Dan. You can get someone else. There are plenty of people. Why don't you go yourself?"

"How can I get away?"

"It might be good for you. You and Mother haven't had a trip together for years. You're the one who should go with her."

"But father shook his head. "I'd never be able to leave low," he told her. "I have to think of business."

MRS. DIXON next day added her appeals to her husband's and tried to persuade Cherry to come away with her. It was no use. The girl was firm. She also told her mother she had decided against ordering the dresses at Madeline's.

"What I have will do for the places I'm going to wear them," Cherry said. "And I couldn't take the things without leaving Dan know about it."

"Then I must say I think you're being down right stubborn!"

Cherry laughed. "Call it that if you want to but let's not quarrel about it. By the way, that's a lovely dress. I gow you're wearing. Did Madeline make that?"

The trip to the Massachusetts resort for several days. Then with characteristic abruptness Walter Dixon decided he would accompany his wife and that they would depart the next week.

Cherry was pleased. The decision eased her mind about her mother's health and it also settled problems that had been bothering her. The three or four hours she had been spending every day at her parents' home cut into her schedule. Each day ended with many things undone and the tasks had piled up rather alarmingly. Then, too, she was learning it is not easy to divide your time, spending half of it amid luxurious surroundings and half counting pennies.

In spite of what her father and mother might say Cherry knew they disapproved of Dan. Though he inquired solicitously about her mother's health she knew Dan was aware of this disapproval.

Yes, Cherry would be glad when she could settle down to her own life. Back in her mind there was the vague fear she would not admit even to herself—the fear that, ever so slightly, she and Dan might be drifting apart.

That was too frightful to be recognized.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon were to depart Wednesday morning. Monday Cherry telephoned to say that she would not be out that day. She had shopping to do and several errands. If Martin could come for her early the following day she would spend all afternoon at Briar-top.

She hung up the receiver with a sense of relief. Pinky scampered across her path and she picked up the kitten and held his fur against her cheek.

"You've been neglected, Pinky," she announced. "But we're going to change that. Goodness, how you're growing!"

Pinky arched his back, poked at the collar of Cherry's dress with one paw, and seemed to enjoy the new game.

The shopping Cherry had to do consisted entirely of purchases from a 5-and-10-cent store. Mrs. Mureau, who lived upstairs, had bought some dishes there and Cherry wanted some like them. The loss of dishes by breakage during her first month of housekeeping had been alarmingly high. She also needed a saucenap to replace one that had burned through, some tea towels and a glass top for the coffee percolator.

At 2:30 she pulled on the last year's Panama with the black band around it, picked up her purse and gloves and left the apartment.

There was a long wait before the street car came clattering along. When it finally came and Cherry climbed aboard there was only room to stand with the other perspiring stragglers. The motion of the car created a breeze, however, and she was grateful for it.

"It's lucky Mother's leaving on Wednesday," the girl thought. "We're certainly in for a heat wave!"

She had a fleeting picture of her parents' home, Briar-top, with its lawn like clipped velvet, the breeze rustling through its stately trees, the garden, broad porches and cool shaded rooms.

Cherry sighed and wiped her forehead again. It was going to be even hotter down town.

The car jolted on. The weather was showing its effects on the dispositions of passengers. Men and women pushed by each other impatiently. When they finally reached Twelfth street and Central avenue there was a general scramble to be out first. Cherry hung back for a moment and was among the last to leave.

It was a block's walk to the 5-and-10 store. Cherry had been there only a few times. The dozens of counters with their apparently unlimited assortment of articles still amazed her. She became confused and could not find the household department until a young man directed her.

She bought the saucenaps and moved on to the china counters.

It was 45 minutes later when Cherry finally emerged from the store. Both of her arms were filled with bundles. She was conscious that she must be very careful of the dishes. Her nose and cheeks were glistening, her hat pushed awry. The dress that had been fresh when she left home was rumpled and soiled now.

She was tempted to stop in a drug store for a soda but the bundles dissuaded her.

"If I put them down," she told herself, "I'll never be able to manage them again."

She was on her way to the car stop when a clear, high-pitched voice interrupted her. Cherry turned.

"Why, Gretchen, hello!"

"Cherry Dixon! Oh, excuse me—I keep forgetting you're married. Philippe, isn't it? What on earth have you been doing? My dear, I didn't know you! All those packages—!"

Cherry's cheeks had been hot before. Now they were flaming.

"Shopping," she said. "Some things I wanted in a hurry and couldn't wait to have delivered. But what are you doing down town on a day like this?"

Gretchen Alden frowned. She was dressed in silk the color of creme de menthe. Her hat and sandals matched exactly. Not a single strand of her lovely golden hair was out of place.

"Frightful, isn't it?" she asked. "I'm simply melted. But you see we're leaving for Lake Louise and I had to have some fittings. I'm getting three of the sweetest frocks—"

She described them succinctly. Cherry's arms were becoming cramped with her bundles but there was nothing to do but listen.

"Cherry, my dear," the other girl wound up, "mother and I are giving a little musicale Sunday evening. Awfully informal, you know. That good-looking violinist, Carl Van Dyke, is going to play. Won't you come and bring your husband? I'm dying to meet him!"

"I'll see," Cherry agreed. "I'm not sure what our plans are. Well, I must be on my way."

"Can't I give you a lift?" Gretchen urged. "I'm meeting Mother with the car at 5—"

Cherry shook her head. "No thanks," she said. "I'll call you later about Sunday."

As she rode home (luckily having secured a seat on the street car), Cherry entertained herself with a vision of Dan at one of Gretchen Alden's musicales.

She gave him an amusing version of her afternoon's adventures over the dinner table. Afterward Dan helped wash and put away the dishes. They were finishing the last of them when there was a knock at the door.

"I'll answer," Cherry said. She crossed the room and opened the door. A moment later she cried, "Why, Father—!"

Blanton Issues Challenge to Meet Jones In Debate

The following is a copy of a letter sent to Joe Jones by Thomas L. Blanton, congressman from this district, and who Jones is opposing in the present campaign: Abilene, Tex., June 26, 1932

Hon. Joe L. Jones, Eastland, Texas.

Dear Joe:

You have been actively campaigning this district since last January, indulging in personal attacks, while my duties in the national congress at Washington have kept me away.

I expect to speak in each county in this district, and I am prepared not only to defend my own record, but also to discuss yours, which is now under investigation at Austin.

I expect to prove to the people that I have been faithful to every truth they have imposed in me, and that you are wholly unqualified for the office.

I don't like to discuss my opponent behind his back. I therefore challenge you to meet me in joint debate at each and all of my appointments, one in each of the 19 counties in the district. If the committee controlling the July Fourth program at Cico will arrange to give us the time from 1 o'clock until 3:30 o'clock, I propose that we begin there on Monday the Fourth.

These debates are to be held under the ordinary rules of debate, each side to have one hour and 15 minutes, the one opening to consume an hour and 5 minutes with 10 minutes rejoinder, we to alternate each meeting on opening and closing; that is, if you should open at the initial meeting, then I would open at the next succeeding one, and then alternate, and we to draw for who shall open the first meeting, opening each night at 8:30 o'clock, and continuing every week-day night except on Saturdays, upon which we are to have two debates, one beginning at 1:30 p. m. and the other at 8:30 p. m. I propose that the democratic district chairman preside as chairman of all of these debates.

Please advise me immediately whether you accept this proposal so that I may make my arrangements accordingly.

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) THOMAS L. BLANTON

DOGS RAID DEER FENS

FORT WORTH.—A dog pack is depleting the supply of deer in the city zoo here. In three stealthy visits to the deer pens the dogs, believed to be a small pack with a cunning leader, have killed four deer. On the last foray the dogs killed two of the largest and finest bucks in the zoo. Efforts to capture the dogs have proved futile.

SNAKE IN WOOD CHIPS

SMARTVILLE, Calif.—A. G. Wheaton was gathering up wood chips while clearing a piece of land. As he lifted a handful, a rattler writhed in his grasp. He hurled it to the ground and killed it.

POLICE STOP TURTLE FIGHTS

HARTFORD, Conn.—Police have been forced to stop some queer fights here, but the queerest was in the Park river—between two large turtles. A patrolman borrowed a boat and roped the embattled creatures. One weighed 50 pounds and the other 40.
