ROBINSON OF ARKANSAS IN A NEW ROLE

Joseph Taylor Robinson of Arkansas is a minority leader of his party in the American senate. Arkansas democrats held their state convention. Robinson was the keynote. He declared in his address that over capitalization of utilities through mergers and consolidations had led to evils that must be corrected and suggested a cure in the democratic plank of the Chicago platform calling for federal regulation of rates of utilities operating across state lines.

Texas is the largest producer of natural gas. Natural gas utilities have their pipelines crisscrossing the country. They have been given a jolt by the Texas railroad commission. They have been told that the natural treasure wealth of the commonwealth is an inheritance of the people. That it is the sworn duty of public servants to safeguard this wealth to prevent waste and to see to it that all owners or leaseholders of gas lands or fields are given equal opportunity for the sale and the transportation of the produce.

TEXAS GAS POLICY

The action taken by the railroad commission in closing down the Panhandle gas field is a pleasure to every citizen of Texas familiar with the situation.

That field is in the grip of a powerful group of foreign utilities whose only interest in Texas is to export from the state the natural gas that they sell to their northern and eastern customers. Complaints of their business practices from landowners, independent operators and the state authorities have been continuous for a year. These companies try to settle with their royalty owners for the smallest fraction of a cent that their monopoly of the market permits them to dictate.

The natural resources of the State of Texas belong to Texas, and it is time these people are made to understand this.

It is hoped that this legislature will do something about it.

Uncertainty is far worse than bad news, and much more unsettling to business.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

WILLIAM SOUTHERN, JR., publisher of the Independence (Mo.) Examiner, says:

"In a recent official bulletin, Jewell Mayes, secretary of the Missouri State Board of Agriculture, included the following paragraphs: 'Supporting your home newspaper is a combination of duty and privilege, one of the obligations of modern citizenship. No matter whether you live in city, town or country, your fellowship with journalism is the same, one of the responsibilities of every 100 per cent progressive person. The newspaper is a true community builder, its editor a practical optimist. When you loyally pay your newspaper subscription in advance, you thereby add to the life-blood of your community.'

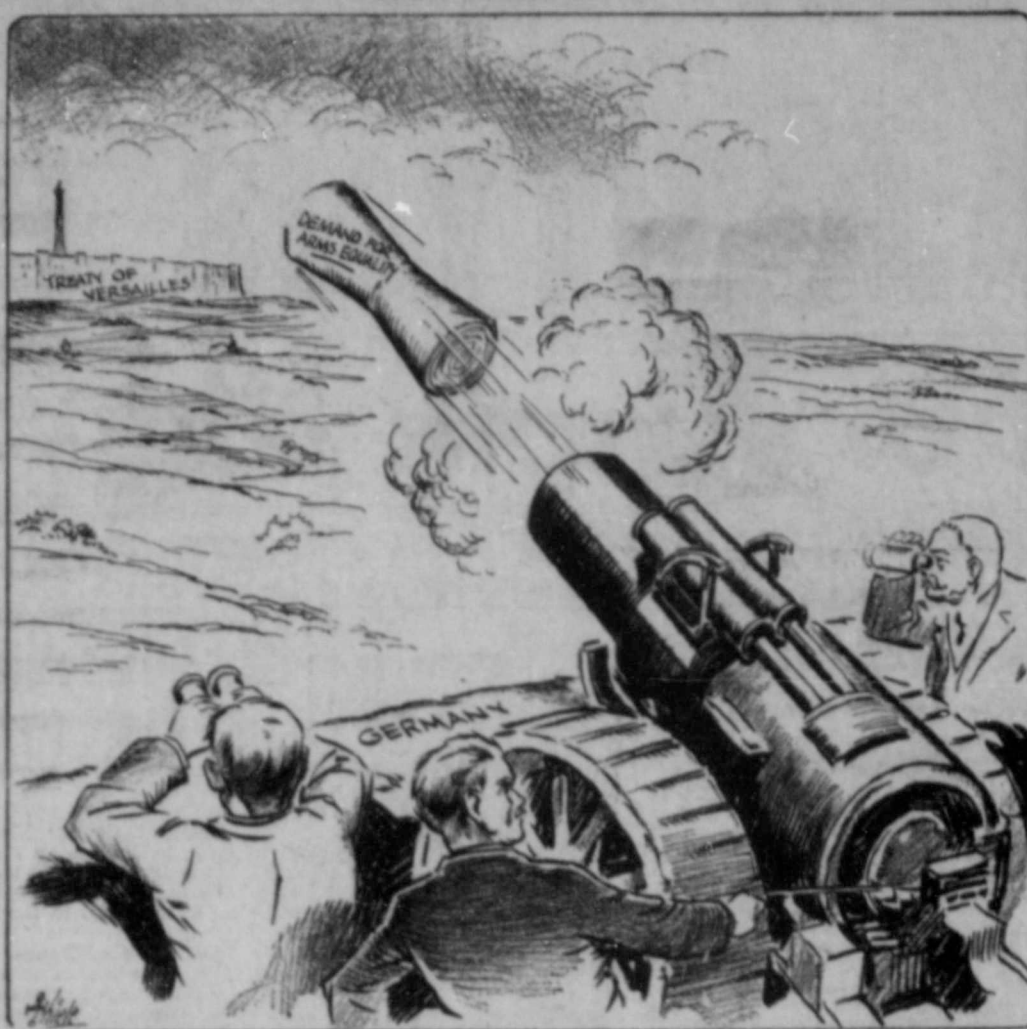

"Is a local newspaper simply another business, operating to make money for the publisher, or is it an asset to the community?"

"The answer to the question depends on the publisher of the paper and loyal community support, and I am glad that only in a few instances are local newspapers simply selfish commercial institutions.

"If the merchants of every city understood this and turned all their advertising and printing patronage to the newspapers, they would be helping make a better town, they would be bringing more business to themselves and would be cooperating from every business standpoint. Every dollar the merchant spends in handbills or in free papers is not only wasted, but it takes away from the real newspaper just that much money which would help to make a better paper, a paper better able to fight the battles of the town where it is published.

"A newspaper is of no value unless it is prosperous. A kept newspaper living from official patronage is of no value to a town. A pure advertising sheet is of no value to a community or to the advertiser.

Eastland Gun Club Has Sunday Shoot

W. J. Peters turned in high score in the pistol practice at the Eastland Gun club range Sunday afternoon, turning in a score of 96x100. J. J. Coffman was high in 30.06 rifle, prone position, 200 yards, eight-inch bulls-eye, with a score of 49x50. The Eastland team of five men turned in an average score of a little better than 47x50. Mr. Peters announced that for the remainder of the season there would be off-hand practice with the rifle.

The skeet match was won by Jim Horton with the score of 44x50. Individual scores were: Jim Horton, 44x50; K. R. Tanner, 41x50; Mrs. Horton, 40x50; Roy Allen, 34x50; W. J. Peters, 35x50; George Fee, 16x25; Sam Butler, 12x25.

Pistol scores were: W. J. Peters, 96x100; Jim Horton, 95x100; R. H. Perrine, 92x100; Tom Harris, 91x100; Mrs. Horton, 85x100; Delores Tanner, 68x100. Rifle scores were as follows, each score being out of a possible 50: J. J. Coffman, 49; Tom Harris, 47; R. H. Perrine, 47; Fred Hutton, 47; Jim Morton, 46; Horace Allen, 45; Horace Oldham, 44; W. J. Peters, 41; George Fee, 40; Margaret Hart, 40; Boyd Tanner, 39; K. R. Tanner, 38; Mrs. Horton, 38; Roy Allen, 35; Bobby Dwyer, 35; J. Connelley, 35; Sam Butler, 30; Bobby Hart, 29; Delores Tanner, 29.

Harpo Known For Never Talking

Harpo (Arthur) Marx, the second eldest of the famous brothers, appearing as the ice-man in "Horse Feathers," at the Arcadia Theatre, is known as "the one who never talks." He is a competent musician. His first teacher was his brother Chico, who taught him two songs on the piano. He later taught himself to play a harp, developing an unorthodox style that has always baffled the best harp teachers.

As a boy he lost so many jobs as a piano-player in the movie houses that he turned to bell-hopping in his native New York. Later, with Groucho and Gummo (the brother who has since retired from the theatre,) Harpo was urged by his mother to doff his bell-boy's suit at the Plaza Hotel and don a sailor's suit for an act which she organized for presentation at Henderson's Music Hall in Coney Island. With no lines prepared, Harpo spoke a word in stage or movie work.

When the act later became "The Four Marx Brothers," Harpo functioned as the red-wigged mute who attained fame with his brothers in the films in "The Coconut," "Animal Crackers," "Monkey Business," and "Horse Feathers."

Ferguson Supporters Prepare For Fight At Convention

By RAYMOND BROOKS. AUSTIN, Sept. 12.—As J. E. Ferguson and a retinue of Ferguson adherents left Austin tonight for pre-convention action in Lubbock, supporters of Ferguson here laid claim to control of the democratic state convention in Lubbock Tuesday.

It was indicated a large Ferguson group will go to Lubbock, and will be there before state executive committee meets its work Monday of certifying count of returns made by chairman in the governor's race.

Pro-Ferguson lawyers at Austin said the increased load of woman candidate in the state likely will strengthen the incumbent's forces to a point where he can dominate the convention.

But supporters of Gov. Sterling insist the convention be clearly pro-sterling in make-up. Former Gov. Dan Moody in that opinion, he said here, Ferguson's decision to be on the ground at the scene of election, may be an unprecedented conflict over a nomination, taken as meaning he will lay groundwork for the fight in the convention declare, with delay, the nominee as shown the election returns.

As has generally been agreed that the election law given state committee no latitude in declaring the mathematical result of county returns.

Political leaders insist the party will have the right satisfy itself on issues of voting or charges of fraud in election, and that it may require for a brief period of investigation of uncertainties. This was not affected by being in supreme court of mass proceedings on behalf of Ferguson, to compel delivery of lists of voters to the state committee. Mr. Ferguson, in announcing the court proceedings, was for the purpose of "exercising its function and duty of the law and not to be interfering with any gratuitous meddling of any faction."

Announcements. Mrs. W. A. Fetters announces that the Bethany class of the Presbyterian church will open their fall meetings with that of Wednesday afternoon of this week, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Ross Moorhead will be house hostess and Mrs. Jack McDermott co-hostess. All neighbors are urged to attend.

Attended Dance. At Breckenridge. Jay Sarver of Breckenridge was host to a group of Eastland friends Thursday night, entertaining them at the Burek hotel dance, when music was furnished by the Jack Gardner orchestra of Austin. The party included Miss Thelma Brewer, Miss Peggy McLaughlin, Miss Madge Brewer, Miss Marjorie Davidson, Miss Josephine Martin, Sam Conner, Kad Tanner, Milburn McCarty Jr., Winston Castleberry, Marshall McCullough Jr., and host, Jay Sarver.

Junior Auxiliary. Baptist Church. The Junior Auxiliary of the Baptist church enjoyed a song period at the meeting of their assembly, conducted by the president of the auxiliary, L. J. Lambert Jr., Saturday morning, in the Baptist church. Numbers used were, "For Jesus," "Love Lifted Me," and "Jesus Loves the Children of the World." A pretty voice duet, "The Scattered Bands," by Cecil Seale and Opal Hunt, closed the song service. Opening prayer by Cecil Seale, prefaced the brief program presented by the senior group. The quilt upon which the young people have been working was exhibited. Each block was pieced by members of the junior division and etched with the worker's name. The blocks were made according to the original idea of the child, Mrs. J. P. Truly is chairman of the making of the quilt, which will be sent to Buckner Orphan's home. The intermediate program, in Bible study, was presented by Geraldine Terrell, Cecil Seale, Loraine McCoy, and L. J. Lambert Jr., directed by Miss Opal Hunt. The junior division had a Bible lesson based on the Twentieth Psalm of David, and taught by their director, Mrs. J. P. Truly. The Sunbeam band, heard an interesting lesson, based on Mark 12:41-44, given by their director, Mrs. T. J. Pitts. The theme of the study brought a story, "Jesus Needs Helpers," by the director. At this time the new mission study book, "Chinese Babes," was taken up and the first lesson, "What Happened on a Spring Day," was thoroughly enjoyed. The children who do not miss a story, from now on in this study will receive a diploma, when the book is completed. Those present, Loraine McCoy, Geraldine Terrell, Bonnie Kate Wood, Doris Lawrence, Virginia Garrett, Geneva Pearl Matlock, Verne Ella Allison, Ruth Walker, Frances Laverne Darby, Edith Allison, Anna Jean Darby, Peggy McFarland, Jerry McFarland, Eloise Sanderford, Othello Bishop, Blonnie Lee Crutchfield, Margaret Ann Sanderford, Betsy Lou Timms, a new member, Cecil Seale, and Dixie Little of Cross Plains, a visitor, L. AS MISS AMERICA WON FIRST HEAT

Miss America wins! After trailing Kaye Don's Miss England for 25 miles in the first heat of their 35-mile speed race at Detroit, Gar Wood passed the Briton and finished two miles in front. This picture was taken as Wood flashed past the Miss England at 80 miles an hour. Wood's time was 30 minutes, 48 seconds. Don finished in 33 minutes, 55 seconds. A disabled motor eliminated Kaye Don's boat in a later heat.

for LOVE or MONEY by H W CORLEY. (Continued from page 3) said, "Have we finished all the errands? Coffee pot, thread for Miss Gracie, peppermints, glue. Didn't someone ask for stationery?" She thought a moment. "Oh, yes, we were to get avocado! I fell as if I should eat as many as possible before we go back." "You mean to New York?" This was nearing dangerous ground again. A reference to departure might be fatal. "Let's get the mail," Mona urged. They waited in the wide post-office where the arched window looked out on a riot of poincianas. Postoffice clerks in khaki or linen coat over their tasks. Presently one of them raised the frosted pane which shut out the too eager public and called to Barry. "An awful for us!" Barry said, scanning the packages he had received. "One, another one—two for you right on top! Lottie has her share too. Who do you suppose writes to Lottie? It must be a one-sided correspondence because I'm sure she never sits down and remains quiet long enough to answer a letter." "Mona, deep in one of her own letters, nodded absently. Withington reported that the Maharajah had replied to his communication concerning the Empress. The price he offered far exceeded Mr. Townsend's purchase price. They awaited her instructions. However, was Mrs. Townsend quite sure she cared to sell the stone? Was she entirely certain that she was free to take this step? "I certainly am," Mona said to herself, annoyed. Outside the post-office she and Barry were swept into a stream of passengers from the Helena. Mona stood with the letter folded in her hand while Barry scanned a newspaper two weeks old. She looked at him meditatively. The Empress would bring Barry into his own. He must accept it. He must! Later when her family needed her no longer she would marry him and let her go to the saint's home, the orphanage or whatever the will decreed. "Well," said Barry abruptly, "shall we go?" They started off across the square toward the jetty where their boat lay. A tall, slender man in white, wearing a sun helmet, almost ran into them. "I beg your pardon," he began, raising his hat. He was about to pass when Mona cried out, "Whv, Mr. Garretson! How in the world did you get here?" (To Be Continued)

HERE--- AND THERE By ELVIE H. JACKSON. School days are here, and mothers are busy getting boys and girls up early, giving them their breakfasts, kissing their fresh washed faces, and sending them off with a God-bewith-you, to their different schools. Restless little boys and girls, who have had the untrammelled freedom of many long days of vacation and who look wistfully back at the home surrounding the staid drone of classwork and the calls and cries of the children as they play on the campus during intermission. And the teachers are again entering upon the routine of their several hours a day close contact with varying personalities, differing needs, and varieties of temperament. And perhaps the teacher sighs as she realizes her vacation has ended, and her days, weeks and months of responsibility have begun. We sometimes wonder if parents thoroughly appreciate the important place the teacher occupies in children's lives. To the teacher is entrusted through six hours, five-days a week, for several months, the mental, spiritual and cultural training of those in her charge. There is no question but that the cornerstone of the child's character is made during the first four years of their school life. The Parent-Teacher associations have done much to bring the interests of the teacher in closer contact with the home life of the student. But there is yet much more that could be done. Those entrusted with the schooling of our children could often be our invited guests, at our home table, and often asked to share an hour or two in the evening, with the family circle. Often parents could invite the teacher to go on a Saturday outing, a motor trip, or a hike through the woods. Many mother and fathers, too, are prone to look upon the teacher as a sort of an institution, something that is paid for, and with whom they have no immediate personal concern. This attitude is wrong, and eventually brings its own return, in the child's lack of appreciation of their teachers efforts in their behalf and resolves itself into a surly, rude boy or girl, difficult to handle in the school. Many children are like the little chap that was rebellious, and said, "No'm; I don't want to go to school, an' I don't care if I'm a fool. It's too hot to sit indoors, there's darn ole splinters in them floors, I don't want to wear no shoes. No'm, I'm sick, and rot the blues! Believe 'twould do me good to hunt out in the woods for squirrels; Oh gee, that's sure the stunt; My school strap's lost, and lunch-box broke. No'm, I won't go in that box and make, for hours, and gets and pencils. Oh, ef I kin stay at home, I'll show you folks how smart I am; No'm, I'm sick—'twas that peach jam. I'll tell you what I'll do, for
