Italy's Motor Cops Are Fighters

Part of the reason for the minimum of crime in Italy is due to the vigilance of the Metropolitan Military Motorcycle Police Patrol of Rome, which is a valuable fighting unit. The corps, guns ready for action, is shown in review at the seventh anniversary of its organization.

STERLING MAY BE SUMMONED BY GRAND JURY

AUSTIN, Nov. 3.—Likelihood that Governor Ross Sterling will be summoned before various grand juries to substantiate election charges, was seen here today after the governor issued a 2,000-word "justification" of his bolt from the state democratic ticket. Governor Sterling announced that he has in his office "a metal filing case packed with affidavits, statements, letters and lists of illegal votes." A governor generally is not liable to answer a subpoena. He can be forced to answer, however, after he relinquishes office on Jan. 17.

Third Parties In Past Have Been of Short Duration

By BURETTE W. PATTERSON—In 1896 William Jennings Bryan was requested to leave the Democratic party and join the Populist party which was at that time advocating many reforms for which Mr. Bryan stood. He replied that when he wished to clean house he would not go over to the home of his neighbor to commence. He remained with the Democratic party and fought her battles for the reform for which he stood during the remainder of his life. Many of his admirers, in the absence of his great leadership, have drifted from their party, scattering into the Republican and Independent parties, with the result that the Democratic party has lost their counsel and leadership and is weakened in some of its former policies and purposes. American history reveals that no third party has long survived in this Republic. They spring up and flourish for a season and pass away. The country then returns either to the Democratic party that has ever stood as the tribune of the people's rights, or to the Republican party that has been the champion of a centralized government and the patron of industry and organized wealth. If the Democrats of Texas who have dropped from the ranks of their party expect to ever accomplish the principles and reforms for which they stand, they must yield to the big game of the Republican party that they are incapable of maintaining a republic, because in political contests the losing faction will not yield to the majority. He says that a nation can not maintain a republican form of government unless that people are incapable of self-government when they refuse to bow to the will of the majority. It is my hope and I sincerely urge that every Democrat in Eastland county remain in our party, regardless of whether or not they are individual choices or not. They have been chosen in the manner provided by our party and the laws of our country. Let us be good sportsmen and let us exert our best efforts to win our right to secure the declaration and accomplishment of these principles and reforms necessary to the welfare of our country. Let us fight for our individual ideals within our party, and if they be right they will finally prevail; but by all means let us be united in our right against the party or parties whose doctrines and principles are contrary to those principles so long espoused by our Democratic party. It seems to me that we can hope to sooner accomplish our ideals of simple democracy by voting for our Democratic nominees, and especially for Roosevelt for president and for Ferguson for governor.

SAFETY MEET WILL BE HELD BY COMPANIES

The annual safety meeting of the Lone Star Gas company and the Texas Pacific Coal & Oil company will be held tonight at the American Legion hall in Ranger. The safety meeting will be conducted in the auditorium while the Carl Barnes post is holding a regular weekly meeting in the recreation room of the hall. Prominent men who are well versed in safety measures will be on the program and both an interesting and instructive program has been planned. These safety meetings have developed into one of the most important features of the safety programs of the various companies in this section of the country. The materials are issued for the comparatively few accidents that occur in the plants of this section. It is expected that a large crowd of employees of the Lone Star and Texas Pacific companies will be present, in addition to a large number of visitors.

Phyllis Pratt to Marry Soon

Miss Phyllis Pratt, above, youngest daughter of Representative Ruth Baker Pratt, soon will marry Paul H. Nitz, son of a University of Chicago professor. Mrs. Pratt, a New York City representative in Congress, announced the engagement.

QUORUM NOT PRESENT WHEN HOUSE OPENS

AUSTIN, Nov. 3.—Rumbling indications of a real "oil battle" before the fourth special session of the Texas legislature were heard here today as law-makers assembled in answer to Governor Ross Sterling's call. There were 40 of the 150 members of the house present when Speaker Fred Minor called the house to order. One hundred is a quorum. Ten senators were here at noon. A senate quorum is 21. It was apparent that neither house nor senate will have a quorum today and that the session cannot start before tomorrow.

A committee of lawyers had completed a first draft of a bill to carry out the purpose of the session. "Market demand" is written into the draft of the new bill, which copies almost literally the noted Oklahoma oil law, upheld by the supreme court of the United States. Any production in excess of transportation or marketing facilities is termed waste and is forbidden. Governor Ross Sterling told the former oil session he would veto a "market demand" bill. "We just convinced him that it is right," Charles F. Foster, president of the Texas Oil and Gas Conservation association, said when asked how the governor was brought to change his mind. The hearing called by the state railroad commission for today to consider a new oil order for the East Texas field, was recessed indefinitely.

"GATE" RATE OF LONE STAR IS BEING PROBED

FORT WORTH, Nov. 3.—Inquiry into the fairness of gas rates charged by the Lone Star Gas company continued here today before Chief Examiner Ohio Culbertson of the Texas railroad commission. Other commission members had returned to Austin for the special session of the legislature. E. A. Steinberger, Lone Star valuation engineer, on the witness stand for the third day, submitted data on two pipelines as representative of costs of the entire Lone Star system of 461 main lines. One line, known as Line K, running from West Texas to Joshua, near Cleburne, was appraised at $1,816,635, with a book value set at $2,414,326. Questioning brought out that the Lone Star's appraisal was made as of Dec. 31, 1931, when the lowest market since 1923, prevailed. Cost of rose bushes, cottonwood trees and hedges are included in the $73,927,635 valuation the Lone Star has made of its properties, Steinberger testified.

Fergusons and Bullington Near Campaign End

DALLAS, Nov. 3.—Oreille Bullington cited statements of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt to democratic voters here last night to support an appeal that they disregard their primary pledge and vote for the republican nominee for governor next Tuesday. "The state supreme court tells you that a pledge is binding no longer than it can be conscientiously observed," he said to the accompaniment of cheers. Today the republican nominee plunged into the troublesome oil belt. Mrs. Miriam Ferguson, democratic choice for governor and her husband went to Houston to open the final stage of their campaign. Bullington will continue his whirlwind campaign through Saturday. The Fergusons, taking things easy, will make three more appearances, one at Houston tonight, in Dallas tomorrow night and at Tyler Saturday afternoon.

Roses Replacing Cotton In One of Texas' Counties

TYLER, Texas.—King Cotton has found a serious rival in Smith county's major industries. If he is dethroned, it probably will be by the kind of flowers—the rose, for thousands of dollars annually are added to the bank accounts of the farmers and nurserymen of this county through the sale of field-grown rose bushes and cuttings. The native soil has been found adapted to the growth of some 30 varieties of roses. The roses are planted in rows and cultivated as cotton or grain. The zenith of the industry will be reached this season when shipment of plants and cuttings begins. Early season forecasts are that approximately 100 carloads of rose bushes or cuttings will be sent from here to points scattered from boundary to boundary of the United States. Chief attribute of the Smith county roses is that they are so hardy that they are able to live in the most extreme northern parts of the United States. Their beauty is another outstanding quality. Blossoming in the open field, the buds compare with the finest of hothouse blooms. Roses that might sell in New York city for 25 cents a dozen or less. Many Tyler merchants keep dozens of blooms on hand, receiving new supplies daily during the season, for sale to customers.

Eastland Red Cross Work Is Now Progressing

Up to date of Wednesday afternoon, 650 yards of the cotton materials have been issued to applicants at the Eastland Chapter of the Red Cross. Twenty-five applications were filed Tuesday and materials were given out by women of the Methodist church. Mrs. F. M. Johnson, assisted by Mrs. R. C. Purter, W. P. Lewis, Dan Childress, Carl Springer, R. E. Sikes, M. J. Piest, Eugene Day and W. E. Stalter, who made eight garments in boys shirts and night shirts. Ladies from the Presbyterian church will be in charge of the sewing this afternoon. There will be no more applications receive in the mornings, the chamber of commerce room will be open for this work, Friday and Saturday afternoons. A fine response has been made by the women of the churches and clubs in this big undertaking and their help in the successful handling of the branch of the Red Cross work by Mrs. Stalter and Dr. Tanner.

ROOSEVELT TO END HIS DRIVE IN NEW YORK

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt embarked today on the final tour of his drive for the presidency. The democratic nominee planned to make a brief invasion of New Jersey tonight and then swing back into New York city for the first of three addresses that will wind up the campaign. He is expected to renew his appeal for a "new deal" in government and again extend the invitation to those persons of all parties dissatisfied with the leadership of the republicans to join with him on Nov. 8. As Roosevelt prepared to depart he repeated his expression of confidence over the political situation. "I feel very good about the whole thing," he said.

Ranger Lions In Meeting Hear of Old Clothes Drive

With the exception of a few announcements the time allotted to the regular weekly meeting of the Ranger Lions club was taken up today, with business matters pertaining to the club. W. C. Hicker, announced that the old clothes drive, which was conducted on Monday of this week was a decided success. He reported that a large quantity of good, serviceable clothing had been obtained through the cooperation of the people of the town with the Child Welfare club. He also suggested that each club in town should join in a tree-planting campaign for this spring, possibly planting trees on each side of the highway east and west of the town. He said that the state highway department did not have funds for planting trees, but that the maintenance crews would care for and water the trees as needed. He cited the highways of New Mexico which have been beautified by planting trees and said that this could be made the most attractive portion of the Broadway of America if the tree planting campaign was carried out.

Loving Drill Rig Across River Is Quite a Problem

By United Press.—Moving an oil rig is no time an easy task and transporting it across a river is a harder still. But the oil rig that necessity is the mother of invention still holds good in the case of the oil field in the pinyon hills of East Texas. Down in the middle of the river where the Sabine river is its farthest meander to the east and passable roads are unobtainable, it became necessary to rig a rig from the south to the bank of the river. If conventional methods were employed, it would have meant a long delay while the rig and machinery were trucked over the land and reloaded about to the ultimate destination by a stone's throw away on opposite side of the stream. The rigging being the boom of the contractors, a steel was rigged across the stream the derrick timbers and machinery trolleyed across in record time. No. 30 Judge in the P. W. survey—is drilling on the bank with the three booms on the south side, the connecting cables suspended from the rigging. The suspension bridge encroaches on the river bed, but the workers to cross back from boiler to rig.

Lack of Connections Prevents State From Collecting On Oil

AUSTIN.—Lack of pipeline connections is holding up state income from its venture into the oil business. Nine producing wells have been brought in by the state's lessees in the Sabine river field in the East Texas field. Locations have been made for 21 more wells and others are to be put down. Under existing railroad commission orders for the East Texas field, production of a well is limited to 40 barrels a day. What the state wells could produce, if uncontrolled, has not been determined. State Land Commissioner J. H. Walker, member of the board for leasing the river bed, expects to see substantial funds coming into the state treasury before the end of the year from its Sabine river bed wells. Possible location of 114 wells in the river bed has been mapped. It is probable about 60 will be drilled. Under the state's contract, the state received $5,000 a well as completed and a three-eighths over-riding royalty, payable out of the oil recovered. Concurrent with the state's drilling campaign in the river bed, it is reported that owners of leases along the river are carrying on a drilling campaign. Texas courts have decided that oil underground belongs to whoever withdraws it. When the legislature was asked by Gov. Ross Sterling to authorize recovery of the oil in the river bed, he estimated that several million dollars would be brought into the state treasury from the venture.

Ranger Legion Will Meet Tonight

Cliff Davis, post commander of the Carl Barnes post of the American Legion, announced today that a very important meeting of the post would be held tonight at 7:45 o'clock. This will be an important meeting as it will be the last to be held prior to the big Legion smoker on Nov. 10 and before the rodeo on Nov. 12 and 13. Sig Fajcloth and Bill McDonald, who have charge of the rodeo, are making contact with some of the outstanding rodeo stock owners in this part of the country and will probably stage the best rodeo that many in this territory have seen. A report on the progress of the various events to be held in connection with the Armistice day celebration will be made. All Legionnaires and ex-service men from miles around to watch the antics of the inflated cows, are invited to be present at the meeting.

Industrial home work consisted largely of art needlework, knit goods, and all forms of clothing. Gloves, handkerchiefs, neckwear, neckties, boys' sweaters, hair goods, wooden and paper boxes, medical and surgical supplies, artificial flowers and feathers, and babies' clothing were listed as articles produced in the homes for mercantile consumption.

FORT WORTH.—Payment of back taxes to the state and county for the past 16 years may be required of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show. The exposition is not subject to tax exemption, Baylor Agerton, county legal adviser, said in an opinion written for the commissioners' court. Exhibit buildings of the Fat Stock show were placed on the tax rolls at a valuation of $150,000 for the first time this year. Agerton said he was "unable to find any constitutional or statutory provisions which would exempt the property from taxation." Money accruing from the exposition is used for the advancement of agriculture only, the court was told.

HOW THE MIGHTY HAVE FALLEN

Col. Luke Lea was a famous citizen of Tennessee. He was the publisher and editor of important daily newspapers. He was a gallant soldier in the World war. He was United States senator for six years. He was a power in the politics and business and finance. While the gambling era was on, he attempted to become a Napoleon of finance. Then the crash came. He was stripped of the dead branches are stripped from a fallen oak. He was indicted with charges of conspiracy to violate the state banking laws of North Carolina in connection with the failure of the Central Bank and Trust company of Asheville. His financial ramifications covered several states. He was convicted by a jury and is under a six to 10-year prison sentence behind the bars. His son, Luke Lea, Jr., was given the alternative of a two to four-year prison term or the payment of $25,000 in fines and costs. Wallis B. Davis, president of the bank and a co-defendant, was given a sentence of four to six years in prison. Well, the Leas appealed to the supreme court of North Carolina, asking for an order staying their sentences. They asked for a new trial on the grounds of new evidence. They lost. Now Davis has bowed to the inevitable. He will shortly begin serving his sentence. As for the Leas, they are on the way to prison. Think of the fall of the mighty from the Alpine heights. Luke Lea was widely acclaimed as a scholar and a gentleman. He was a gallant soldier. He was a noted publisher of important newspapers. He was a United States senator. His appetite was not appeased. His ambition was to become a Napoleon of finance. He covered a lot of territory in that field. Now he is broken, his fortune has disappeared and the gates of the pen yawn to receive him. PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE with BILL MAYES

Well, well, well. Several weeks ago we promised not to write anything more about the Cisco case unless there were new developments, but it seems that developments are so numerous it just can't be kept out of the papers. The latest is that an "indignation" meeting was held in Cisco the other night—Monday we believe. Without comment of any kind we reproduce the following, clipped from a full account of the meeting. Read 'em and weep. "About 75 Cisco citizens gathered at the chamber of commerce last night in an indignation meeting voiced the city's increasing resentment at what was declared the "outrage" perpetrated on Cisco by the district committee of the Inter-scholastic league, and determined to call a larger meeting of Lobo football fans at the country club this week to decide upon further action in the Cisco suspension case. "If the citizens of these other towns knew the facts in this case they would be indignant," it was declared. "It is an outrage. "We have been very blue and dejected over the outcome of this case, and we have now concluded that the other Oil Belt towns do not want to play us and we are faced with making a new arrangement or quitting," said Forrest Wright. "Don't intend To "The manner in which the district committee has handled this matter," said A. D. Anderson, "is an outrage. We cannot continue to court such treatment and we do not intend to. If the Oil Belt district does not want to play us, we can either find another district or we can play independent football. We are fed up on this and we don't intend to be persecuted by a group of transient school men any longer. If the citizens of the other Oil Belt towns prefer to let this committee create such a situation and destroy the friendly rivalry that has existed heretofore in the Oil Belt and ultimately the district itself, we cannot hope for anything better than we are getting right now. "Appreciate Ranger. "Unanimous appreciation of efforts of Ranger citizens to bring about a settlement of the matter without cooperation from the school officials, was expressed. It was pointed out that Ranger business men had visited Cisco, learned the facts in the case and had refused to sign the supersedeas bond. Cisco fans were urged to support the Bulldogs in their games as a gesture of this appreciation. "The people in these towns and the members of the school boards themselves, are not acquainted with the true facts," it was declared. Jinx Tucker of Waco, probably the most quoted sports writer following high school football, has picked what he declares to be the ten outstanding high school football teams in the state. Among the ten he lists Ranger and Breckenridge from the Oil Belt. His list, which is not made up according to the way the ten are considered, but merely jotted down in any order, are: Amarillo, Masonic Home, Central of Fort Worth, Corsicana, Waco, Ranger, Breckenridge, Sweetwater, Port Arthur and Sam Houston of Houston. Ranger slipped into the limelight by winning one football game, defeating the former state champions by a score of 20 to 0. EL PASO—Site being secured for federal building. CALL of the WEST

By R. G. MONTGOMERY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

STAN BALL accuses ASPER of having been in the woods when he was shot. He says he will see to it that he gets the man who shot him. He says he will see to it that he gets the man who shot him. He says he will see to it that he gets the man who shot him.

STAN BALL accuses ASPER of having been in the woods when he was shot. He says he will see to it that he gets the man who shot him. He says he will see to it that he gets the man who shot him. He says he will see to it that he gets the man who shot him.

laughing outright. Asper realized that he was in a desperate corner and that Swergin would do as he said. The man was mad with power and success. Fighting for an opening, Asper went on. "How many feet of timber did you get away with?" Swergin bent forward and his thick lips parted. "Plenty to make me rich."

"The ranger, Carter, finally objected to covering you up?" Asper went on with his questions. He knew Swergin would gloat over a recital of his success.

"Carter got heavy so Ball shot him in the back," Swergin chuckled. He was enjoying the telling of his successes to his intended victim.

"You don't expect Ball back?" Asper asked without a change of expression.

Swergin's face darkened. "I hope he comes back," he growled. "I was a fool to let a woman keep me from putting him where he belongs."

"You couldn't have him blamed for what has happened since," Asper pointed out without feeling.

Swergin nodded. "Oh, it's working out just fine."

could have gotten all the knives and dirty work on Ball. Dona had showed much better judgment. If he had trusted her woman's instinct he would have saved them all from a lot of grief. Asper caught himself wondering where Ball was. There was a bare chance that the cowboy would find the cabin. He had said that he was going to shoot it out with Swergin.

Had Asper known Stan Ball's plans for the day his heart would have been swept clean of every hope, for Stan had decided that morning to ride over and straighten up his affairs at Blind River before having it out with Swergin.

THE old timber man decided to make one final attempt to break through the madness of his frenzied man. "You ought to think of my daughter and her husband. They are on their honeymoon." Asper spoke almost pleadingly.

Swergin faced about from the window and his face was twisted into a leer. "That puppy was bent riding over to see a little Spanish girl every day. They'll be borrowing your gal's car and hiking out any day now, if they haven't already gone." Feeling a look of disbelief spread over Asper's face Swergin went on, eager to tell everything.

"I trailed him the other day to make sure he was harmless and I got an earful," Swergin scowled as he remembered the scene.

Asper's mind groped back over the past week. He was sure, when he had checked all the little things that had happened, that the timber boss was telling the truth. He had been a fool not to do a little investigating himself.

SWERGIN pulled a huge sliver watch from his pocket and looked at it. He seemed to be ready to finish his plan, and stamped outside hurriedly.

Asper could hear him breaking limbs and tossing brush against the side of the cabin. He seemed to be going some distance for the materials to start the fire, and apparently wanted a large supply.

Swergin finished his piling of wood and branches and re-entered the cabin. He did not look at Asper but began piling the cowboy logs in the center of the floor. Asper cast about desperately for something to delay the tragic climax. "How did you manage about the horses?" he demanded.

Swergin paused and looked across at him as though considering the advisability of answering anywhere I can hide out a whole herd, and I got men I can trust to have that black mare ready."

Asper settled back with a sigh. He was at the end of his resources and ready to give up. Swergin got up from the pile of clothes and walked to the door. He did not glance back as he went out and did not stop until he was well around the building.

He had piled the branches and limbs in a row well back and leading up to the cabin. It was his plan to start the fire and let the smart breeze from down the slope carry it to the log walls. That would make the fire look as though it had begun away from the cabin.

HE bent and struck a match. Shielding the flame, he held it under a little pile of dry grass. The tiny blaze funneled upward and glared eagerly at a pile of twigs. Two spirals of smoke rose, followed by a tongue of flame.

Swergin backed off and watched the flames leap higher. He tried the wind and found it just right. Then he turned, and without a glance behind him, mounted his horse and rode away.

He headed down the slope toward the camp at Three Rivers. He was sure that Dona would be there. He did not worry about her being ill. He had gone mad with power and he believed he could have anything he wanted. He did not even give Dudley Winters a thought. He knew the young man's plans from listening in several times on his meetings with the little senorita.

Dudley was to stiff the car out and go after little Rosa. Swergin grinned. The whole bunch were fools who played into his hands. Even Ball was a fool for he had left when he had them in a bad way, and all because a woman asked him to. It was funny, but it made everything easy for him. Ball was the one man to be reckoned with.

Swergin had only one thing to give him any concern. He would have to take care of Malloy if the corral boss was around. Malloy was not to be trusted and he was as bad an actor with a six gun as Ball.

Swergin eased himself around in the saddle and looked back up the trail. A spiral of smoke showed against the sky above the spot where his hidden cabin stood. Then he turned his gaze ahead and urged his horse to a trot.

VERNON HAS A STRONG TEAM FOR CONFLICT

Game Will Be Field At Maverick Field At 3 o'Clock

The Mavericks will engage the Vernon Lions in a game here Friday afternoon. The starting time has been announced as 3 o'clock at Maverick field. This will be a non-conference contest, but Vernon is a high bidder for honors in District No. 5 and ought to be strong enough to give the Eastland boys a real test of their mettle.

The Mavericks have been working hard this week following their defeat at the hands of the Buckaroos last week. They are not discouraged because of their failure to win in that event and will be out in full fighting trim this afternoon, determined to make good their past deficiencies by playing some jam-up football for the benefit of the home fans. The ball epidemic has abated to some degree and the team as a whole is in better physical condition than it was last week. However, Heath's injured leg has been so bad that he has not been able to come out for practice and he will be missed from his position at guard. Barrington at end and Bailey at guard have been absent from practice most of the time this week because of injuries and will not be in the starting lineup, although they can be used if necessary.

The Lions have made a wonderful record so far this season and are said to be the outstanding favorites to win the championship in District No. 5. No opposing team has been able to score against them and they have run up a high count on each team they have met. In their conference games they defeated Wichita Falls 21-0 and Childers 13-0. In their non-conference engagements they ran up the top-heavy scores of 75-0 against Duke, Okla.; 39-0 against Grandfield, Okla.; and 21-0 against Frederick, Okla. If these teams had any strength at all, this record shows that Eastland has taken on a real assignment for this game.

Since this game probably will be the outstanding intersectional contest played in this part of the state this season, it ought to attract the attention of a large number of fans. The school authorities are expecting the largest crowd yet to see a game in Eastland this year. The reasonable prices of 50 and 25 cents will be charged for admission and every fan who can possibly do so should be out to help encourage the Mavericks to a victory over one of the strongest teams that has ever visited Eastland.

Why the Texas Centennial

A Pen Picture of Its Purposes and Benefits.

By CULLEN F. THOMAS
President Texas Centennial Committee

The most splendid conception of this generation, in behalf of a greater Texas, is the Texas Centennial.

It will celebrate 100 years of unexampled progress, from barren wilderness to modern commonwealth.

It will foregather the marvelous products of Texas' brown and brain in every field of human endeavor.

It will turn toward Texas the attention of the peoples of many tongues and lands beyond the seas. It will make the tale of Texas table-talk in ten million homes, in the two Americas, from Haffin Bay to Cape Horn.

It will repay Texas for all outlay from her treasury, from uncounted millions dropped without her borders by the unnumbered hosts who come by rail and road and plane to behold her resources and applaud her strides.

It will be an epochal event in which the nation will claim the right to share, since in succession 1836 was followed by 1845, San Jacinto by Chamizotepac and American domain and destiny pushed westward from the Sabine River to the Pacific Ocean.

It will be far more than a mammoth modern exposition, whose buildings are models of architecture, in brick and stone, housing triumphs of invention and miracles of science and the riches of Texas soil and sun.

It will testify that Texans are not unworthy the incomparable heritage left to them by martyrs and patriots, dying and ready to die, that Texas might become an Anglo-Saxon commonwealth.

It will commemorate the sacrifices of the plain pioneer men and women who first tamed the unpeopled wilds, with ox and plow and rifle and spelling book and die, that Texas might become an Anglo-Saxon commonwealth.

It will Texanize Texans.

It will teach all the sons and daughters of Texas, native-born and adopted, to know Texas better, to love Texas, more and to serve Texas with single-hearted zeal.

It will lift our eyes to the hill-tops of our history, whence cometh our help, above bug and fog, for taller thinking and nobler living.

It will seal in tighter bonds of unity, through contact and understanding, Texas citizenship of every type, from pines to plains, from the river to the Gulf.

It will rid our State of the specter of sectionalism, to the end that Texas may remain in territory, ideals and destiny forever undivided and indivisible.

It will rekindle the dying flame of patriotism, in decadent days, and as we renew our faith at Texas' sacred shrines, put to shame a leadership of noisy pretense and little deeds.

It will serve to bring to pass the poet's prayer:

Bring me men to match my mountains,
Bring me men to match my plains,
Men with empires in their purpose,
And new eras in their brains.

Rides Horseback To University Daily

AUSTIN.—Elmer Kienzie of Pittsburgh, Pa., came to the "wild west" to go to school and he does it in "wild west" fashion by riding five miles on horse each morning for his classes in the University of Texas.

Kienzie said it was the lure of new country, new experiences, that caused him to come "west" to school, and he is the only student in the school who does it up in this old-time western fashion.

ASPEN sat on the stump. Swergin had kicked over to him and a vast many things righted themselves in his mind. The timber boss was about the young but did not seem in any hurry to leave. Asper attacked him and came to the realization that Swergin was acting frantically.

"Just what do you hope to gain all this?" he demanded at last. Swergin seemed to have been sitting for the question. He leaped across the floor and loosened Asper's rope enough to allow him to face about without twisting. His eyes were blazing with a queer light and he shook a bony fist at Asper.

"You dropped in just right," Swergin grinned. "This cabin will be down and you'll be out of the way."

Asper pulled back in spite of him. The cold-blooded idea struck Asper with terrific force. He was sure that he was dealing with a madman. "You wouldn't dare do this," he said evenly, his eyes bold.

Swergin will get the blame. He's admitted the rest of the work like him make it easy for a man like me." Swergin was

ASPEN bent forward and pulled himself together for a final attempt to talk to the burly man who towered over him. "You ought to consider some other things. I have a girl who will be badly broken up over this. Her husband is a wealthy man and will run you down if it takes all his money."

Swergin snarled. "That gal of yours was willing to spend a night up on the mountain with Ball. If I hadn't stepped in on them she'd have stayed longer. I'll take care of her for you, and for that simpy Winters, too."

Asper raised up from his bench and his hands trembled under the ropes. "You wouldn't dare touch me to face about without twisting. My eyes were blazing with a queer light and he shook a bony fist at Asper.

And Now—A Steel Home Shipped to Your Lot

By NEA Service
CLEVELAND, O.—Pretty soon you may be living in a house built of steel shipped to you from the factory in parts all ready to be erected on your lot. First the first frameless steel house built in the United States has just been completed at Solon, near here, and its designers are planning to begin mass production in 1933. The wall units of this new type home illustrated above, are of 20-gauge steel sheets. They are insulated with fibre and the exterior is coated with a porcelain enamel.

The absence of a frame is an innovation in construction made possible by the steel construction. Designers say this factory-built house can be assembled for much less than the labor cost now required in building a house. The estimated cost of a seven-room house with two-car garage and solarium, like the one shown here, is about $5000.

To Fix Salaries of State Workers
By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN.—About 8,000 state officials and employes have just had it down upon them in full force that the incoming governor in January will, under the law of the last year, write down the amounts the governor is willing for each to be paid during the next two years, and that this is to be done before the legislature begins work on the appropriations bills.

That was the heritage left them by the new budget law, in which the budget-making power is taken away from the board of control and put in the hands—so far as vital control over the amounts is concerned—in the hands of the incoming budget.

The budget law requires the state auditor to report on the prospective revenues under existing statutes. It requires the board of control to make investigations and recommendations. It provides that the retiring governor shall recommend the amounts of each salary and other appropriation item. But then, it directs that the incoming governor shall write the appropriation bill to be laid before the legislature.

In that, it confers the power upon the governor to warn departments and the legislature that if the pre-expressed judgment of the governor is not complied with, the executive blue-pencil can strike out the salary or other item entirely.

The result will be that the legislature will meet without finding the state budget ready for action.

The present law authorizes the incoming governor, before inauguration, to sit in on any hearings on the budget, held by either the board of control or the retiring governor. The board of control had held its hearings this year before the governor had been chosen.

Governor Sterling has not indicated the purpose of holding supplemental hearings.

State Auditor Moore Lynn has reported on the reversions of unexpended 1931-32 appropriations, but not on the prospective revenues.

Board of control estimates were made without regard to the probable adoption of the home-stead exemption amendments. Its estimates have not been made public.

Taxes May Cause Abandonment of Church in El Paso

By United Press.
EL PASO.—Although church property is not taxed in the United States, an almost certain increase in taxes here may force the closing of the new Mexican Guadalupe chapel, completed after four years of planning and labor.

Many of the 75 residents of this Mexican colony carried stones and worked without pay to build the church. It was built on a hill after the fashion of the original Guadalupe church in Mexico City.

Now the city of El Paso proposes to pave a street through the Mexican colony. If this procedure is carried out, the colonists say, taxes and real estate values will become so high they cannot live in the vicinity and will have to move away and abandon their new chapel.

HERE--- AND THERE

By ELVIE B. JACKSON

Americans are prone to celebrate some particular and important phase of life, that affects our general interest, in a week long observance with programs for each day and local or national speakers, as well as other features that go toward a successful and outstanding celebration.

Perhaps in no other country are these week long observances recognized to such an extent as obtains in the United States. But behind his there is a well founded reason. Americans rush so in their life and business and as compared with other nations and peoples, plan and achieve with so much promptitude that less repeated attention is called to the mooted observance in question, that celebration is likely to go unheeded in the swiftly passing from business to business, and interest to interest.

We have "Better Homes Week," "Music Week," "Fire Prevention Week" in October; "Educational Week" in November; "Golden Rule Week," in December, and of course, several other worthwhile weeks, scattered through the year. These observances however, are ones of immediate recognition. Educational Week opens Monday, November 7; and this brings a serious thought.

Just what does American Educational Week mean to the child? It involves an almost incalculable field, which might be mentioned in connection with this general subject.

First, it will include the stimulation in the child of his appreciation of the privilege of free schooling, a call to the spiritual quality of the teacher, who serves the children.

Then, an appeal to the parent for a better understanding of that great adventure, parenthood; its privileges and responsibilities.

And last but not least, the awakening of the citizens to the greatest of our liberties, teaching and training of youth, sincere faith in, and support of, the school. Education Week is celebrated at same time of year which includes Armistice Day, and at this each season, parents, citizens, children and teachers are asked to join in a patriotic tribute to the nation's school.

The objective of Education Week

"Ghost House" Play Tonight.

Tonight is the night of thrills and chills for this is "Ghost House" night and the weird story of the roasting of a dead man's will at 11 o'clock at night; a cellar scene and other chilly episodes will keep the goose flesh active, at the high school auditorium, tonight, when the charity benefit play will be presented under auspices of the South Ward Parent-Teachers association.

There are happy contrasts to this detective story however, in the artistic dance, music and chorus features, between acts, that will be calculated to raise the chilled emotional thermometer to a warmer degree.

Be sure you see "Ghost House" tonight. Lots of pretty girls nirls

DERRICK SHADOWS

This column is used as a feature and should not be construed as representing the editorial views of the paper. The expressions contained in the column are the views of one individual and do not reflect the policy of the paper.

Why all the raving and tearing of hair over the approaching election? Is America so dense that she cannot go to the polls and vote intelligently without weeks of mud-slinging and false predictions preceding the action? When the platforms of both parties are thoroughly understood and the ideals of each candidate set forth cannot thinking men and women make up their minds and vote accordingly? Somehow it seems almost childish to me that men with supposed dignity take the opportunity of election time to say foolish things in a foolishly serious manner. And while such men rant around and pound a table with many fists, thousands of the country's leading citizens sit before them and cheer like little boys at a circus . . . watching the walrus and clown perform.

Offentimes passing acquaintances and chance friends prove much more interesting and sincere than those souls with whom we must necessarily be associated for a lifetime. We meet for a fleeting conversation and the smiles we give each other are free from even the faintest presence of boredom born of long acquaintance and much association. We meet, our knowledge formal introductions, comment on the uppermost topics of the day, and bid each other a regretful adieu . . . and haven't the time to discover any outstanding faults in either. Thus we are spared the agony of repeated experiences, self-born pet phrases, and grating mannerisms . . . and go on our separate ways thanking the fates that such personalities exist, never guessing that they, too, are human and surrounded with faults.

Words are the expressions of the inner self, the doorway to the soul, the window of the heart. The greatest among all artists is the man who can successfully paint pictures with simple words; the man who strikes the gold of repeated experiences, self-born pet phrases, and grating mannerisms . . . and go on our separate ways thanking the fates that such personalities exist, never guessing that they, too, are human and surrounded with faults.

Cooper School Sees Indian Show

Before a group of excitedly interested school children, Major Ted Powell and his troupe Indians performed for the patrons and children of Cooper School in a forceful manner. Major Powell revived all the instinctive love for Indian life which all children possess. As he displayed various Indian trinkets, he unfolded numerous customs concerning Indian life.

Children received a mental glimpse of Indian wars through the exhibition of war-bonnets, clubs, tomahawks and peace and war pipes. Equally interesting were all the necklaces representing various tribes, the mocassins which carried the emblems of certain clans, and the various animal skins, some of which were painted in gorgeous Indian designs.

Red Buffalo, an Indian from the Comanche tribe, was the leader in a weirdly fantastic song and dance number. Three other Indians of the Keewah tribe assisted in the song and dance.

Strangely impressive was the religious ceremonial in which the Indians enacted the rarely-shown-for-exhibition services which give proof of the Indian's realization that there is a Supreme Being.

This show was thoroughly appreciated by all who attended for their knowledge of Indian life was greatly enriched.

Around The World Trip

A most delightful and very unusual entertainment was enjoyed by about 50 young people on Halloween night when they met at the First Baptist Church for a R. Y. P. U. and Sunday school social.

The trip around the world began at the church where games and contests were enjoyed. The weird "Witch Den" which concealed the fortune teller was also a popular entertaining feature. After much merriment at the first stop of the journey the course was continued.

The destination of the second place brought the merry-makers to the pretty home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Russell. At this hospitable home the feature period of entertainment was the popping of corn later served with apples.

Again the journey was resumed and the next place of entertainment was the residence of Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Thomas. A gala entertainment was held at this time of the journey and each guest served with delicious apples dipped into taffy, making a very different and tasty refreshment.

The march continued with the route leading back to the church where three tables were found ap-

No raw tobaccos in Luckies—that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted".
