A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

GOD'S WORD STANDS: The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: but the word of our God shall stand for ever.—Isaiah 40: 8.

MILLS MOVE SOUTH WHERE FLEECY STAPLE GROWS

For years and years after the coming of the machine age New England was the home of the American textile industry. According to The Manufacturers' Record, away back in 1875 a report showed that the South raised 3,875,000 bales of cotton, that 1,060,000 bales were consumed in the North, 130,000 bales consumed in the South and the remainder shipped to foreign lands.

Speaking of cotton production and dealing with the figures taken from The Manufacturers' Record the Northern periodical points out that cotton growing has been encouraged and developed elsewhere until the United States now produces a little more than one-third of the world's supply—merely a half of this year's production, estimated at 22,700,000 bales, the smallest in nine years and "at the same time fewer clothes of non-cotton material are worn than formerly. SO IT MAY BE THAT AS THE SOUTH WINS THE SUPREMACY OF COTTON MANUFACTURING THAT INDUSTRY HAS PASSED ITS ZENITH."

All the European countries, including Great Britain and its dominions, have banded against the industries and the staples and the wares of this republic. A republican administration gave the world the Hawley-Smoot tariff act. Retaliation followed. Now the American cotton growers as well as the grain growers of the nation, are pinched as they have never been pinched through the years and they are paying the penalty for votes cast to keep republican administrations in power in the past. Their ballots will create a change. Their verdict will be their salvation or their funeral.

WEALTH OF THE RICHEST WOMAN IN AMERICA

An inventory of the estate of the late Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, showing the "once world's richest woman" owned $1,030,408 worth of personal property at the time of her death, has been filed in probate court in the city of Chicago. No estimate was made of the McCormick real estate. Before the coming of the republican crash and the enormous shrinkage of values it was said by persons high in the business life of Chicago that the total value of her estate would exceed $40,000,000.

HIGH COST OF AMERICAN ONIONS IN AUSTRALIA

American onions are being placed on the under-supplied Australian market and are being sold at $100 a ton wholesale. Over the counter, they are 5 cents each. Record prices are being paid by the Australians because of failure of the home onion crop. Texans are large producers of onions. They are reminded that there is a big demand for the tear makers in that far-away country.

Jumping at conclusions is not a profitable exercise. Think it over first!

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

EDWIN S. RUTLEDGE, Editor of The Kenton (Ohio) News-Republican, says:

"Mr. Merchant, the newspapers from the larger cities near your community are coming into the homes of your own customers these days with advertising columns bursting with announcements of real values.

"They are drawing the dollars out of the pockets of the people who should be purchasing from you.

"These city merchants know their advertisement in their city newspaper will bring results or they wouldn't be spending good hard-earned money for that advertising.

"Your own values are just as outstanding—and even more so—than the values being offered your customers by the city merchants.

"If you are to get the dollars that are rightfully yours, you will have to inform your customers of this fact in big, bold headlines in your home town newspapers, and then back those headlines up with the price tags on your merchandise.

"If you will go to your home town newspaper advertising man he will help you with your advertising problems and make your advertising just as appealing to your customers as the 'big city' advertising is.

"Local advertising has the jump on advertising that comes in from the outside, but you, Mr. Merchant, have to keep that lead by properly utilizing the home town newspaper columns consistently and with careful attention to the preparing of copy."

JOHN McKINLAY, President of Marshall Field & Company, says:

"There are many who speak of a new economic era and some who feel that somehow business operation may be controlled in the future so that peaks of prosperity and depths of depression may be avoided.

"So far, I have not seen a program for such regulation that has interested me very much.

"Human nature will continue to be pretty much as it is now, and if we attain a new and higher degree of prosperity, the chances are that we will indulge in greater excesses than ever before and again relapse into a period of readjustment and liquidation."

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE with BILL MAYES

The election is all over except rolling peanuts and wheelbarrows to pay off election bets and we have a democratic president, a Texan for vice president, and two governors of the state, so now all that concerns us is the Maverick-Bulldog game in Ranger on Nov. 11 and the big rodeo which will follow it at Lillard field.

Tickets for the game went on sale at Eastland and in Ranger early this week and the pre-game sale indicates that there will be as large a crowd on hand as witnessed the Lobo-Bulldog game last season when the record crowd of the season attended a game in Ranger.

Fire Chief G. A. Murphy has promised that he will have the press box wired in so that it cannot be used as a passageway during the game and so sports writers can keep a fairly close track of the game. During the recent Ahilene-Ranger game it took Prexy and our wife and a couple of assistants to keep the people from standing in front of us so that we could not see the game and then, when one touchdown was made, we both had to stand on top of the desk to see if the ball went over and almost, but not quite, failed to see who carried the ball over for the score. We promised the chief that if he would do that we would run his picture right in the middle of our column some day. He has negotiated with the athletic committee or the school board or someone and has secured the wire and promises to have it up before game time. We haven't been out for a couple of days, so he may have put it up already. If so, his picture might appear in this column any day.

All the stores in Ranger will be closed on the day of the game, which should add some to the crowd. This office is to be closed up tighter than a jug and everyone will be out at the game if they can find the four bits in time. We will get out a paper early Friday morning, which will be sent out all over the trade territory, which will carry the news of the ball game and will, no doubt, cause many to come in from out of town to see the game.

ODD LICENSE REQUEST MADE BOSTON.—One of the oddest requests ever received by State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Morgan T. Ryan was from two Boston society women, who asked him to revoke the driving license of a neighbor because she had broken up their bridge club.

Arcadia Theatre Has Good Show For Rest of Week

R. E. Garner, manager of the Arcadia theatre, has announced a series of pictures which have been booked for the theatre for the rest of the week.

Rumrunners Ship Liquor 3,000 Miles

By United Press. DETROIT.—Distance is no object to rumrunners operating in the Detroit area.

They are transporting liquors made in Walkerville, Ont., 3,900 miles to distribution points less than one mile from the distillery. Arrest of two men at Dearborn, Mich., recently disclosed that the rumrunners shipped liquor from Walkerville to St. Pierre Island, in the St. Lawrence Gulf, thence to Newark, where it was trucked back to Detroit.

St. Pierre Island, a French possession, is a clearing point for smugglers along the Atlantic seaboard, because it enables them to escape the tax of $9 a gallon on liquor sold in the Dominion.

Bones Found At Abilene Believed of Pre-Glacial Men

SAN ANTONIO.—Human bones found near Abilene and believed to be evidence of pre-glacial men in Texas are being prepared for exhibition at the White Memorial museum here. The bones indicate the men, walked like chimpanzees.

The bones, found by Dr. Cyrus N. Ray, Abilene, and Col. M. L. Crimmins of the museum staff, were presented to the museum by Dr. Ray. One of the ancient skeletons was found three years ago and since then more than 10 others have been unearthed.

In many respects, said Colonel Crimmins, the bones—including a skull and parts of three skeletons—resemble those of the Neanderthal man believed to have lived more than 25,000 years ago.

They have thick skull plates, flat frontal bones and heavy, beak-like super-orbital ridges. The jaws are massive with heavy teeth worn flat and with small mental tubercles.

Colonel Crimmins said. Dr. Ray was directed to the burial places by an old man who said he unearthed a skull instead of a pot of gold for which he was digging at night about 50 years ago. The treasure-hunter said he became frightened, filled up the hole and did not mention his find for many years.

HERE--- AND THERE

Election day in Eastland brought out crowds on the streets, and at the matinees, and found the polling places very busy. Some interesting things were noted and people seen here from a distance visit to indicate their choice on the ballot.

Fitting here and there were Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Dupont of Fort Worth, in for the day to cast their vote.

Here comes a pretty young woman high school teacher, who answers determinedly, "Yes, I've lived here a long time, haven't I?" as she appealed to a bystander who replied, "At least two school years that I know."

The argument was unknown, but the pretty woman voted, "Here is my ballot said a sweet young thing." Your name, please?" and when she answered, an expression of surprise struck the judge, who hadn't realized that this little girl was of age, and could exercise the voting privilege.

W. Beall Smith was shaking hands with cronies. He had escaped from his western home long enough to make his mark on the ballot.

Someone called out the name of Miss Gretchen Overton for her ballot, and friends looked about for this pleasing young woman, who is holding down a clerical job in Houston; some of us deciding it must be an absentee vote.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Weaver returned in, Mrs. Weaver having returned from a visit in West Virginia, and looking sweet and wholesome. Joe has his usual genial smile and warm hand clasp.

Mother and daughter walk in side by side, and the later helps mother to read her ballot, a splendid sight, and shows the progress of time.

Here comes a hurrying clerk, he's telling that old lady who has lost her spectacles, the difference in the columns and what they stand for. She's willing to learn, but we will bet a dollar she voted wrong. In treacherous impulse seized the onlooker to guide her wavering pencil, when it came to the "For" and "Against" clauses concerning the amendment that would allow or kill the Texas Centennial, but the argu was nobly restrained, due to the eagle eye of several judges.

Across the street from the polls, a bright and gaudy banner told you Oreville Bullington headquarters are here. At a table heaped with reading matter the visitor was greeted by the charming and diminutive Agnes. Harwood Doyle, campaigning for Bullington, with all her tireless mite.

One enjoyed chatting with Agnes, even if her literature did not hold the desired appeal.

And on down the street to the matinee, crowded for the "Smiling Through," an artistic and beautiful production, but one with violets on its breast.

The matinee at the lower show house was well patronized and women were seen at both shows, who had stopped to shop, and went in the swinging doors laden with bundles, which were courteously cared for by the management.

Here on the corner stands Clyde L. Garrett, picking his teeth—he's putting some of that good Methodist chicken dinner out. If he hadn't enjoyed it so much, as did several others, there might have been at least a drumstick left for poor Presbyterians, who patronized the Martha Dorcas culinary triumph.

Election day is over. There are some sore heads but many happy hearts. It's all in the game of life, one fellow loses, another fellow wins—just like the pendulum of the clock, which, if in motion, —

Arcadia and Lyric Theatres Get "Blessed Event" for Owl Shows Thursday Night at 11

Lee Tracy and Mary Brian, who are featured in the widely heralded "Blessed Event," at the Arcadia in Ranger and the Lyric in Eastland at Owl Shows Thursday night at 11 p. m. The picture will be for a special showing and will not be shown at regular run. It was adapted from the Broadway stage hit and from all reports is one of the outstanding of the season's photoplays.

Lee Tracy, a Riddle Without Answer To Hollywood Studios

Broadway players who came to conquer Hollywood have always been an enigma to the hundred percent film folk; but of all the mysterious stage folk, there is none to compare with Lee Tracy. To a Hollywoodian, Tracy is a riddle without an answer.

He just will not "stay put," and the fame and fortune attendant on film success, which is the aim in life of so many show folk, does not mean a thing to him. He reached the peak of his career in the Warner Bros. picture, "Blessed Event," which comes to the Arcadia theatre Thursday night at 11 p. m., and saw a vista of glowing achievements ahead of him—but all the did was snap his fingers at it and uttered the Broadway version of "Ay tank ay go home."

Three times picture producers have put him under long term contracts, but each time the tug of Broadway has yanked him away. The last attempt collapsed upon completion of "Blessed Event," which was not only his greatest performance but also considered one of the finest pieces of screen entertainment filmed since talkies came in. Just prior to its starting, Tracy, who had always made three pictures for Warners, decided to accept a five year contract with the company and relax like a good home body into the quiet of Hollywood for that period. But even while the publicity department was announcing the signing, he came went about getting a release from his contract.

Tracy brought to Hollywood from New York, a reputation not unlike that which followed John Barrymore into stardom from years as a theatrical player.

Indifferent to rules, he has the same indifference to the rules of decorum, the same flare for devil-may-care attitude toward life and his profession that characterized the young Barrymore.

But he has the ability too, and though he keeps it a secret from his friends, he has a sincere streak in him which makes it impossible for him to give a shoddy performance, under any circumstances.

It is impossible to start an appraisal of an actor by announcing that he is good to his mother. An actor, like other human beings, is supposed to be good to his mother—albeit some of them are not.

But this does not alter the fact that Lee Tracy is particularly fond of his mother, and that it is largely because she likes Hollywood better than he does, that he even considered plans to stay there.

The mention of matrimony during a recent interview caused those blue eyes to close, and that funny Tracy face to wrinkle into a most impressive expression of distaste.

"Light," he says. "And you gather that he is not for it."

It is motherly Mrs. Tracy who keeps house for Lee. It wasn't exactly keeping house either, in Hollywood, for they lived at a hotel there.

But even in an apartment hotel, Mrs. Tracy is Lee's one tie to domesticity, which he says on his studio biographical questionnaire, he "hates."

It was Mrs. Tracy who waked him up mornings almost early enough to reach the studio on time. But it was also Mrs. Tracy, the mother, who didn't wait up nights for her boy, a thoughtful attitude which Tracy appreciated.

There's a good deal of understanding between these two, and no little tolerance on the mother's part which the actor repays with a very genuine affection.

"Say," says the subject matter of all this. "Are you trying to make out that I have a face only a mother could love?"

The fact that she does love it doesn't alter the pertinent fact that it is a funny face. But there's personality in it, and behind it, and there's the ability back of it.

William Wellman, famous director of many Warner successes, has been credited with a very apt description of Lee Tracy.

"He has," said Wellman, "a face like a baked potato, and a smile that's like a glimpse of heaven."

Which all does not as yet explain the mystery of why Lee Tracy won't listen over-long to any call from Hollywood. There is no explanation for it—it just happens.

It's an even bet that movie fans will see Lee Tracy again, for movie producers have a very persistent manner with people who have "the goods." But you can bet your new fedoras that as soon as Tracy has given in, Broadway will once again be whispering in his ear, and the back to the bright lights movement will start once again.

Tracy's restless character is best revealed in the role he plays in "Blessed Event." When you see the picture, you will know what we mean.

He is supported in this production by a marvelous cast of actors headed by Mary Brian as the leading lady, also Ned Sparks, Allen Jenkins, Isabel Jewel, Ruth Donnelly, Milton Wallace, Frank McHugh, Dick Powell, Edna Walker, Edwin Maxwell, Emma Dunn and others. The story is an adaptation by Howard Green of the great Broadway stage success by Manuel Seff and Forrest Wilson. Roy Del Ruth directed.

NEW BARTHELMESS FILM SHOWS AT ARCADIA THURSDAY

RICHARD BARTHELMESS, First National star whose latest dramatic success, "The Cabin in the Cotton," is hailed as his finest achievement since "Tol'able David." The picture, a dramatic epic of the South, was adapted to the screen by Professor Paul Green, author of last season's stage success, "The House of Connolly," and winner of the Pulitzer award for his play of a few seasons ago, "In Abraham's Bosom." Bette Davis and Dorothy Jordan, play the leading feminine roles in "The Cabin in the Cotton," which starts at the Arcadia Theatre on Thursday.

Loretta Young Has Her Best Role In "They Call It Sin"

Loretta Young, who takes the leading feminine role in "They Call It Sin," the First National feature picture which comes to the Lyric Theatre Thursday rose to fame at the age when most girls are still in school. She started her motion picture career at the age of fourteen and won distinction before she was sixteen. Now, at nineteen, she has achieved stellar rating.

She comes of a theatrical family, for two of her sisters, Polly Ann Young and Sally Blane, are both well known on the screen.

The part played by Loretta Young in "They Call It Sin," is claimed to represent the peak of her acting career. It is filled with strong dramatic situations and gripping sequences in a setting of New York life behind the scenes of the musical show world and the smart set. The story is of a young girl loved by two men desired by a third but whose emotions are torn by her love for a married man and her desire to comply with the conventions.

The theme is taken from the widely read novel of the same name by Alberta Steadman Egan and adapted for the screen by Lillie Hayward and Howard Green.

The roles of the three men are played by George Brent, David Manners and Louis Calhern. Others prominent in the cast are Una Merkel, Helen Vinson, Joe Cawthron, Nella Walker, Elizabeth Patterson and Erville Alderson.

It was directed by Thornton Freeland.

A professor says that a man applying for a job should "try to be a good listener." That must be pretty hard, however, when the only word seems to be "No."

Tracy's Reporter Role Even Fooled the Real Writers

He is an ace newspaper reporter in his particular line of work—and yet he has never written a line in his life and confesses he wouldn't know a good story if it stared him in the face.

It was as a newspaper reporter that Lee Tracy first made himself conspicuously convincing to the world at large. The stage production of "The Front Page" did this for him. He didn't really know how good he was in that role until a real newspaper editor wrote him a sarcastic, disparaging letter in which he said: "You are not any different from 20 drunken reporters I can name." That, to Lee Tracy, was the highest compliment he had ever received. He had played his role well enough to fool an editor.

Not that newspaper reporting is the only thing he portrays on stage and screen, but it is the role in which he excels. Following his nose for news into many dark and forbidding corners makes him an outstanding figure in the "Blessed Event," showing at the Arcadia in Ranger and the Lyric in Eastland Thursday night at 11 o'clock.

Past thinking and especially fast talking have put Lee Tracy where he is today. It is these qualities which act as his trade-mark that make even critical showmen believe Tracy is the sort of type he plays.

When he scored highly as the hooper in the stage production of "Broadway," a Hollywood producer wired him to play a roofing role in a picture called "Big Time." He did not dance a step in "Broadway"—just talked about it at his usual rapid rate—and it took all his powers of persuasion to convince the Hollywood producer that he really couldn't dance.

Dancing happens to be one of his pet aversions, along with people who eat oranges on trains, women with umbrellas, phone calls, women who use lipstick constantly and harsh voices.

But the proof that he acts the reporter so consummately lies in the fact that producers immediately think of a Lee Tracy type when they need a script having a reporter role in it.

Collateralization Aiding Borrowers

DALLAS.—The big majority of farmers who are collateralizing their government crop production loans with cotton on a basis of nine cents per pound are using the cotton co-operative associations' special crop production loan pool arranged for with the U. S. department of agriculture. Also considerable quantities of cotton are being collateralized through federal licensed warehouses.

Borrowers have the right to sell collateralized cotton before March 1. After that date the secretary of agriculture has authority to make sales. It is expected that the government's collateralization plan will result in several hundred thousand bales of cotton throughout the south being held off the market.

All crop production loan borrowers are being urged by Owen W. Sherrill, regional manager, crop production loan office, to pay their loans in full or fully collateralize their loans with cotton on the basis of nine cents per pound, 3/4-inch middling.
