A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

RIGHTEOUSNESS BRINGS REJOICING: When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice; but when the wicked beareth rule, the people mourn.—Proverbs 29: 2.

WHY THE RETURN OF SAMUEL INSULL TO AMERICA?

Illinois state officials are on their way to Greece to seek the return of Samuel Insull to face indictments returned by a grand jury. Why seek his return? Republican administrations have dominated legislation in the nation since the passing of Woodrow Wilson. Not a law was enacted for the regulation of holding companies. Not a thing in 11 years was accomplished to restrict the operations of such companies. No effort was made to stop private interests from exploiting the water power resources of the republic. Every proposal was junked by a republican president and his advisers. Now where does Franklin D. Roosevelt stand? Squarely on the democratic platform for federal regulation of holding companies and utilities operating across state boundaries; for full and continuous publicity of the management and financing of such corporations. Also, he holds that 7 to 8 per cent on actual cash investments is a fair deal to stockholders of privately owned utilities. Moreover although he by no means advocates universal public ownership and operation, he believes that communities have the right to manufacture power if they choose; further, that at certain natural power sites the state or federal government should develop, produce and transmit electric power as "yardsticks" to measure the fairness of private charges. To this end he has vigorously promoted the St. Lawrence power development, creating the commission to draft plans for state control. His predecessor as governor, Alfred E. Smith, was a powerful advocate of the program which Roosevelt has carried on. Samuel Insull created a $3,000,000,000 power empire. His holding companies were not regulated by federal law. Now what will happen should he be dragged back to Illinois to face the indictments returned by a Cooke county grand jury? He will be given a clean bill of health. At least, this is the prediction made in these columns. There is a lot of bunk carried on the wires in the closing hours of a very bitter campaign for control of the government.

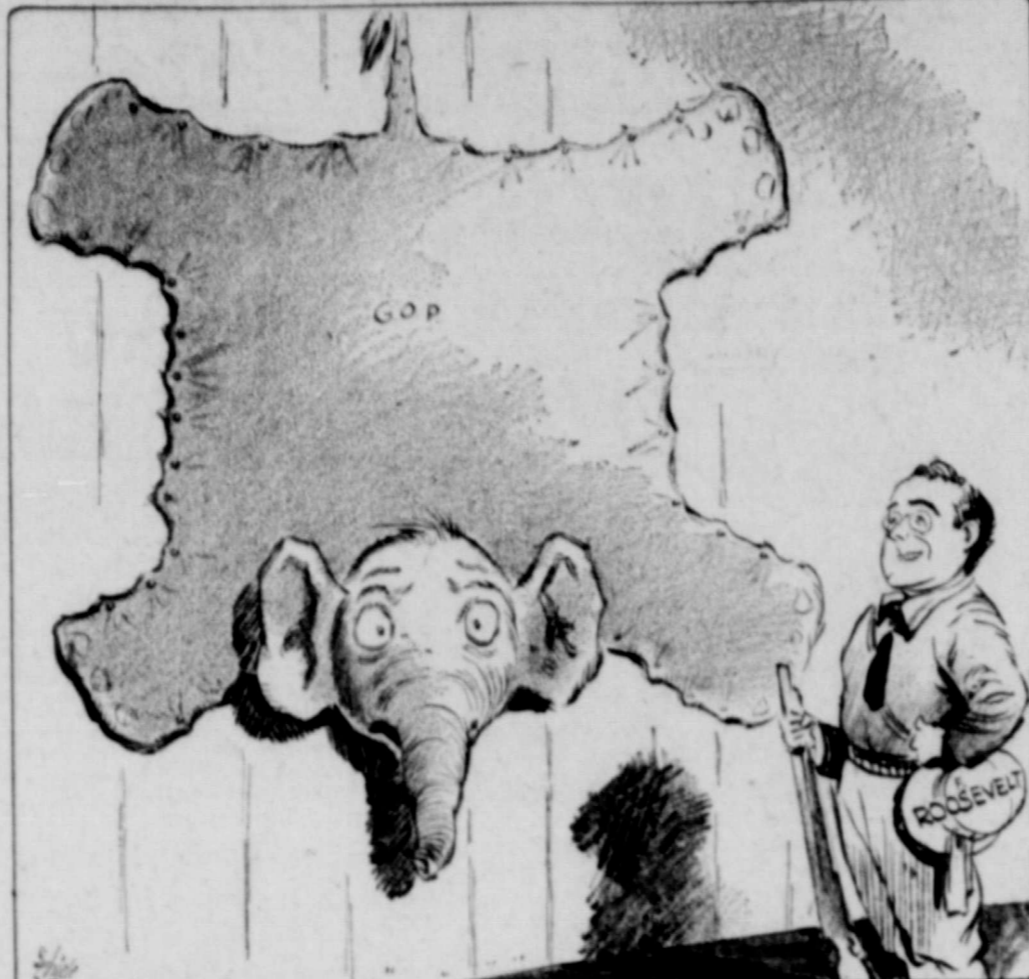

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

WILLIAM LINTON ANDREWS, editor of the Leeds (England) Mercury, says:
"Sometimes when I listen to windy talk about marketing plans, I want to get up and remind the speaker that markets are simply people. Some of the experts get entangled in forests of formulas. They ought to make it their job to get right through to the people.
"Those who make goods are shortsighted if they look upon their goods as sold when they have deposited them in the warehouse of a wholesaler or upon the shelves of a retailer. No article is truly sold until it has reached the hands of the man or woman who actually intends to use it.
"The manufacturer, in order to sell the right people the right article at the right price in the right place at the right time, must not leave his marketing to be haphazard channels by which so many excellent commodities today reach the consumer. Marketing must advance step by step with making. The methods employed must sell more goods at less cost to informed customers who demand them.
"The modern factor in this business which alone can secure the cooperation of distributors, can find markets, can inform customers, and can reduce the cost of the whole operation, is advertising.
"The United States was the first country to discover that selling is made easier by the creation of 'pull' from the customer than by the exclusive use of 'push' from the manufacturer.
"One of the effects of the advance of popular education has been to make the reading of newspapers a universal habit. This in turn has built up the very large aggregate sales of newspaper today, and has placed at the very large aggregate sales of newspapers today, and has placed at the disposal of advertisers the most economical producer of 'pull' so far discovered.
"Markets, I say, are only people, and newspaper advertising is demonstrably the most certain and economical and the simplest method of placing a sales message before the people. As an Englishman I take off my hat to those Americans who have led the way in sales publicity. We in Britain are benefiting by their example. We try to get right through to the people."

It is said that Americans are born for action and initiative, and if there is none handy they will create it. Now is the time to get busy.
Business comes where it is invited and stays where it is well treated.

National Golf Stars Beginning Trek Southward

MIAMI, Fla.—The nation's leading golfers are ready for the long money campaign of the 1932-33 season and some are hitting the trail to Miami, where the $10,000 Miami Biltmore Open, starts late this month.
The tournament takes precedence this year, not only in cash value but in actual play, over all the other tournaments on the resort circuit which extends from Florida to California and back. Moreover, the rich event is to be decided this season fully four months in advance of the dates formerly scheduled in Florida for so important a sports event.
Announcements indicate none of the great stars will be missing from the fray. The course, said by many authorities to be the most difficult in the South, is reported in good shape. A majority of the big name players will arrive shortly to begin preliminary practice round over the course where a year ago, Gene Sarazen, holding grimly to a one stroke lead, took first money and marched on to a string of victories topped by his winning of the United States and British open titles.
Tournament officials this year will adhere to the custom of the P. G. A. in dividing the $10,000 into 44 cash prizes as was the case last year.
Because of the advance of the tournament from Mach to November it is expected that Miami's entire sports program will be revised. This would not, however, affect the racing dates at Miami's two tracks for these openings already have been scheduled by the Florida State Racing Commission.
The lay-out over which the stars will travel for championship honors offers a par of 71 and a yardage of 6,538. The course includes four par 3 holes, three par 5 holes and eleven par 4's.

Summer Storm Providing Work

Box In Barnyard Aids Midget Calf

OXFORD, Miss.—A cow and her midget calf showed intelligence, or instinct, when they cooperated in staving off the pangs of hunger of the calf.
The midget Jersey, weighing 14 1/2 pounds and measuring 14 1/2 inches in height, was too short to reach its mother's udder. So the cow instinctively stood beside a small box in the barnyard, the calf climbed atop the box and gained the needed altitude.

"Tom! The poor old dog! Where is she?" His jaw set. "Where you won't see her, Linda. Sorry, but you make 'em—oh, good morning, Mr. Statlander! I hope you rested well last night. Glad we have such clear weather for the Fourth."

He was talking, Linda knew, to give her time to recover herself and in a moment she was able to echo mechanically his pleasant banalities.

"I think breakfast is ready," she said. "If you men will excuse me a moment, I'll see. Take Mr. Statlander into the breakfast room, Tom. I'll just pop into the kitchen—"

Are You Hesitating About Buying the Things You Need and Can Really Afford?

Does timidity or fear of criticism keep you from doing a real service to the country and to the unemployed?

It is true that many people have been hard hit by the depression and are struggling to make both ends meet. We all know it is difficult for them to make many purchases beyond the bare needs of existence.

There are many thousands of men and women, however, who are still receiving a fair income and who could be of tremendous help in aiding the business revival. All you need to do is to buy the things you need and can actually afford.

That doesn't mean that you should buy extravagantly, wastefully, or recklessly. It simply means buying what you need when you need it in a normal, natural way.

Have you been hesitating about buying because of timidity or a fear that you might be criticized? Exactly the reverse should be true.

You are doing a real service to the country, to the unemployed and to yourself when you purchase the things you need and can afford to buy. Every purchase that you make now—large or small—helps to create work and wages for those less fortunate than yourself.

When you buy a new dress or a new pair of shoes or a new radio or a new refrigerator or a new car you help to give work and wages to people in many sections of the country. When you have the house repainted, rooms repapered or the roof fixed you directly assist other deserving workmen—perhaps in your very neighborhood.

Nothing you could possibly do for those who need help could be more helpful or resultful than this. Sincere, honest, deserving people everywhere would rather have work than charity. That's the big, broad humanitarian side of it. The other side is what it means to you personally to buy the things you need and can afford to purchase now. Never were such bargains available. Never were prices so low.

But price isn't everything. Today, as always, quality is the important thing to look for. It pays to buy standard, trade-marked merchandise from firms you can depend on. You're almost always disappointed when you experiment with some unknown brand just because it is cheap.

From day to day in this newspaper are advertisements featuring many unusual values. Read them and take advantage of the opportunities they offer. Business revival will be speeded up if people will again buy the useful, necessary things they need and can afford to purchase.

The Newfangles (Mom 'n' Pop) By Cowen

A smartly appointed director's room on LaSalle street, Chicago's financial center, was the operating base for the rebuilt Capone crime syndicate, police claimed, after a raid on the office had resulted in arrest of almost all the old Capone leaders. Disguised as an engineer's office, police claim the office was an operating base for gigantic industrial and labor rackets. Among those arrested were numerous former Capone henchmen who aspire to the over-lord title which Capone held for years before going to Atlanta prison. It was the greatest number of gang leaders ever to be in a Chicago jail at one time. Above are six of the leaders at police show up. Left to right, Murray Humphries, the man who hopes to succeed Capone; William "Three Finger Jack" White, labor racketeer and gangster; Sam Alex, alleged safe blowier; Charles Fischetti, former Capone chauffeur; William "Klondike" O'Donnell, labor racketeer and West Side gang leader; Joseph Moreno, who described him-self as a cartage contractor.

"Washington Merry-Go-Round," a Behind-the-Scenes Expose

Never before in our national history has the American public been so critical of its political representatives as it is today, and now, with a stirring Presidential election very much in the forefront, Columbia comes along with "Washington Merry-Go-Round," advertised in advance reports from Hollywood as a daring expose of what goes on behind the scenes in the national capital. It is coming to the Arcadia Theatre, Ranger, tomorrow.

Lee Tracy in "Washington Merry-Go-Round" A Columbia Picture

The picture was directed by James Cruze, the man who made "The Covered Wagon," "Old Ironsides" and other splendid American films. The trend of "Washington Merry-Go-Round," it is said, is the Americanism of today—that critical brand which aims to right the wrongs which all intelligent citizens recognize as part of our political system. Lee Tracy, that brilliant young actor who startled Broadway with his performances in those hit plays, "Broadway" and "The Front Page" and who scored similar successes on the screen in "Hessed Event," "Night Mayor," "Lover X," "The Strange Love of Molly Muiraid" and other films, plays the principal role in "Washington Merry-Go-Round," that of a young Congressman, Constance Cummings, who appeared in "American Madness," "Movie Crazy," "The Last Man," and other films, is the heroine. A splendid cast of Broadway stage actors plays the other principal roles, Walter Connolly, Alan Dinehart, Arthur Vinton, Clarence Muse, Wallis Clark, Frank Sheridan, Samuel Godfrey and Ernest Woods.

The powerful, realistic and dramatic story of the film was written by Maxwell Anderson, co-author of "What Price Glory." The picture was adapted by Jo Swerling. Eugene Thackeray, former Washington correspondent of the New York World, helped to prepare the story, as well as being technical adviser. Timeless is stressed in this film, the Soldiers Bonus Army encampment at Anacostia Flats furnishing one of the atmospheric scenes of the capital. Interesting shots of the White House and historic Washington buildings and monuments are included in the film.

See You Later Tonight

Tonight is the night of the three-act musical comedy, "See You Later," which will be on the boards of the Eastland high school auditorium at 8 o'clock, and will be set in rhythmic music, snappy choruses and pretty dancing, to the tune of a group of charming young high school girls and a big bunch of smaller girls, in specialty songs and dances, between acts.

Miss Maurine Davenport is pianist for performance, a musical extravaganza, with a real plot, a Chinese idol's eye, and very much mystery.

The play is under the auspices of the Order of the Eastern Star, and the proceeds will be devoted to the charity and co-operative work of the order.

Magician Presents Splendid Show At Arcadia In Ranger

One of the best shows presented in Ranger in some time was shown at the Arcadia Theatre Sunday afternoon and night when Willard, the Wizard, was an added attraction.

The magician mystified his audience with a number of "escape" tricks and many feats of magic that held the attention of the large crowd and afforded them excellent entertainment. In addition the magician on the stage, a good screen show was presented in "The Night Club Lady" a mystery picture that is entirely different inasmuch as the murder victim met death with eight men sitting around her in a circle and another standing at her side, yet not a one of them knew how she was killed.

Tonight Willard will present a show in which he exposes the table rapping and other tricks of the so-called mediums and will show how they fool the public in order to get their money.

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT.
United Press Staff Correspondent.
PARIS—Your fall coat is a great little idea giver to your friends of what your sartorial winter is going to be like. In other words, choose well, this item in your wardrobe for upon its smartness may depend many important matters in your social life.

In the first place, be very careful to choose a color that you, as well as everybody else, won't be tired to death of after the first few weeks. Nobody ever went wrong on black, either in fur or fabric, but black isn't by any means the only smart selection.

For the elder women of fashion we would suggest black first, then dark gray, dull green and deep wines. Fur collars that are removable and enhance the gown beneath are as desirable as they are original, and many accessories of varying degrees of tone and design are permissible with these particular colors.

For the "sweet young things," with pep, poise, personality, beauty, brains and "it," we nominate the more bubbly burgundies, greens like expensive emeralds—even a royal purple—for the girl with striking features.

HERE-- AND THERE

By ELVIE R. JACKSON

The little Dresden-China Swiss peasant girl smiled over the room from her place on the mantelpiece, and eyed with grave concern, the child sitting before the fireplace, who was nodding half drowsily over the story book on her knee, as the late evening shadows met with creeping fingers the dancing firelight's gleam.

The little peasant girl marched quietly forward with her skirts blown in a stiff fixed breeze and her "sandalized" feet cradling sturdily over the rough ground.

From her arm hung a wicker-plaited basket swung by its rope handle and ready for the faggots, she would gather from the mountain side for the goat-herd's fire, who was leading the sheep on that cool wind-swept slope of that Alpine mountain in Switzerland.

The child looked drowsy eyes, and fell fast asleep. The little peasant girl on the mantel, gradually wakened into life, and as the clock struck midnight, and the child still slept. The little peasant girl murmured to herself, and called "O'ee! O'ee! Where are you, Wilhelm? Answer me!"

"I have been dreaming, Wilhelm, that I was in some far country, which we reached in a dark boat, brought over water, where I could hear a fearful roaring and feel the tumbling, just as we see the waters fall from our Swiss Mountain precipice and join the great rivers that flow to the sea. I've dreamed of a queer place, Wilhelm, where there are no mountains, no snows, and where there are no great flocks of sheep such as we have on our Alpine pastures. And there are no little kirks, with their bells tolling from the tall white steeples for the evening prayer.

"And there are no canton dances, and the air is flat, and there is no beautiful vision of snow-capped peaks, like our Alps, and our great Mont Blanc.

"I cannot find you Wilhelm! Where are you? What has become of you?" But alas, there was no answer. The sleeping child awakened, rubbed her eyes and looked down at her little hands, and the little china figure that stood on the mantel looking down at her with a fixed smile, and holding her basket by its rope handling that hung against her skirts standing out in a breeze that never stirred.

And the child thought, "Surely, that little girl called to me, or someone I heard her, I know she misses her sweetheart, that dear little peasant boy my mamma told me about, and who stands on the mantle in my uncle's home far, far away.

"That little boy who wears such a cunning jacket, and has little skirts, trimmed with black buttons, and who carries a shepherd's crook. I said to him that he can't stand by his sweetheart, and smile at her! I surely must have been dreaming."

The firelight died, the room grew still, and shadowy forms of peasant men and girls came creeping out and danced with the little peasant girl until the wee small hours and sunshine broke and all grew still.

National children's Book Week has brought in its wake, many thoughts of happy children, who are playing days of joy before the old marble mantle piece on which stood a little Alsatian peasant boy and girl, who smiled at each other in happy contentment. Little Dresden china figures in fixed grace and ease.

DERRICK SHADOWS

This column is used as a feature and should not be construed as representing the editorial views of the paper. The expressions contained in the column are the views of one individual and do not reflect the policy of the paper.

There is a strange interlude in every boy's life when his interests begin winding away from tops and marbles and worms and frogs, and he finds himself thinking about Mary's eyes and Jenny's smile and Kate's hair . . . and he becomes a man and learns to borrow Dad's razor on the sly. It is a period of reluctance and eagerness; letting dogs and strings and overalls and fishing poles go somewhat sadly, and reaching out swift hands for hair oil and harmonious ties and socks and nail files . . . trying to forget and learn and adjust himself. It is the beginning and the end, the Alpha and Omega of life; the brief space between youth and manhood. And, somehow, looking back, man fails to remember that period of adjustment and recalls only the little boy days; forgetting the most difficult time.

Souvenirs! Oh, think of the dollars and days spent gathering together dozens of spoons and plates and flags and pencils . . . to be put away in obscure drawers and forgotten. I ran across a number the other day, tucked away with score of photographs and notes to help me remember where they were from and what they represented. Isn't it too bad we can't clip a little souvenir off every happy day we spend and put it aside with bits of smile and fragments of laughter? And someday, looking back over a lifetime of such instances, we might weave the pieces together into a patchwork quilt of things that have been and will forever be for memory's sake.

Souvenirs! A heart touched by a tear, a rose sent with a smile, the sympathy of an understanding friend . . . souvenirs of the soul, far more real and dear than material spoons and plates and flags and pencils.

I walked the frontier land with Willa Cather today in a Canadian romance of adventure and history, "Shadows on the Rock." The author dipped into the distant centuries of French religion, weaving a child's life and love around them. The description is very good, though somewhat dazzling in its intensity. One feels almost numb when the book is read. It is impossible to assimilate the contents without the aid of some definite thought . . . the novel is neither heavy nor light. It strikes a very happy medium. The use of French is quite interesting to a student of the language, though I should think the book would be rather difficult without some knowledge of it. Willa Cather is a most unusual modern writer. Her historical-romantic combination is quite good, her style very distinct.

Sticky plasters and slick medicine are not pleasant, and shuffling noses and crying eyes are not beautiful . . . avoid them all by avoiding a cold.

Travel Club Attends Party
After the pep rally downtown Thursday night Nov. 10, the members of the Travel club, with their guests, met in front of the high school building to go to the party that was to be given by the club at the home of Forrest Lyon.

At 8 o'clock the party was in full swing. At one table there was a game of bridge, at another table a game of rummy, stockyard, rummy, dominos, "42" and almost any good game one would want to play
