Kellogg Products Demonstration To Be Held In Ranger

A special demonstration of Kellogg products, particularly Kellogg's Whole Wheat Flakes, is to be conducted at the "M" System Grocery in Ranger on Saturday of this week.

While the factory representative is in charge of the demonstration a special sale is also to be conducted, at which time two packages will be sold at a bargain price and one free package donated to each purchase of the product.

This special is being offered the public in addition to the regular weekly specials on staple items offered by the "M" System.

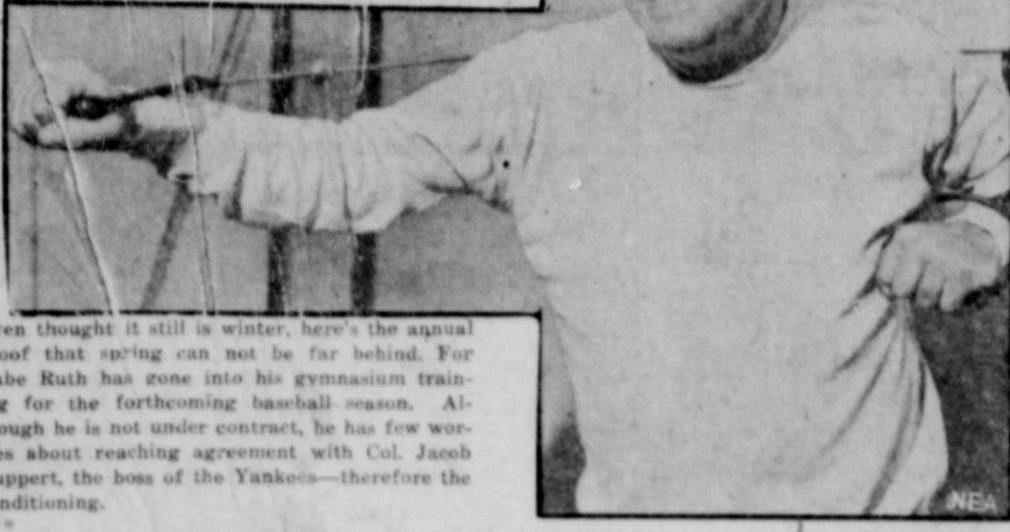

Texas Electric Has Special Offers On Electrical Goods

The Texas Electric Service company, with offices in Eastland and Ranger, is making a special offer on General Electric lamp bulbs for a short time and at the same time is offering the people electric ranges, electric food mixers and other electrical appliances at prices much cheaper than the same items bought a while back.

Earl Woody, manager of the Eastland office and A. N. Larson, manager of the Ranger office, will be glad to demonstrate to prospective customers these and many other electric labor saving devices the company has for the convenience of electric consumers.

Babe Banishes Weight In Preparing For Busy Year Of Home Run Smashing

Even though it still is winter, here's the annual proof that spring can not be far behind. For Babe Ruth has zone into his gymnasium training for the forthcoming baseball season. Although he is not under contract, he has few worries about reaching agreement with Col. Jacob Ruppert, the boss of the Yankees—therefore the conditioning.

At any rate, as Mr. Hoover would attest, technocracy can't make a fish strike when it doesn't want to.

The man who hides behind a woman's petticoat nowadays must have an awfully lonesome time of it up there in the attic.

Most comedians, says a producer, have a conviction they can play tragic roles. And so, alas, do a lot of misguided tragedians.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

JESUS AT WORK

Text: Mark 1:21-35.
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 15.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of The Congregationalist
What would we think today if in a community of well established churches, with priests and official officers holding responsible positions, and many of them trained for their task, someone in the community, outside of this official group, and on his own responsibility, should suddenly come forth as a teacher of religion, speaking entirely in his own way and without much regard for the constituted authorities or ordinary and conventional standards?

We should think it somewhat strange, and we should probably meet the newcomer with at least an attitude of questioning. If he seemed to have some specific truth to offer, if there was something in his personality or methods that impressed us with his sincerity and earnest and unselfish character, we should probably listen to him with open minds and make some response to his teaching.

Such a thing would not, of course, be altogether out of place in a modern American community where we have developed a freedom and variety of religious expression probably never before known in the history of the world. But it was not always so.

It was no wonder that when Jesus neighbors in Galilee heard his words, spoken with simple assurance, they marveled and said, "Is not this the carpenter?" It is noteworthy, of course, that Jesus chose the official places of religion to give his teaching, and the free practice of the synagogue made this possible. Jesus was not an image breaker, destroying the religion and the institutions of the times. He stated very definitely that he had not come to destroy but to fulfill.

The interesting thing was that whereas the scribes, who were the official interpreters of religion, might have been thought of as those wielding authority, the record is that Jesus "taught the people as one having authority and not as the scribes."

To them the important thing was the letter of the law and the tradition that had grown up around whatever they had to say. But Jesus brought his message in the realm of elemental truth.

When he would teach the people concerning the fatherhood of God he met them on the ground of human fatherhood, and pointed out to them that if there was any good thing in themselves they could be sure that it was in God only to a greater and supreme degree. So it was that he brought such matters as mercy and forgiveness right into the realm of human thought and human relationships.

In his very illustrations he met the people upon their own ground. He chose his object lessons from the lilies of the field, from land and sea, and sky, and from daily occupations and quests—the fisherman, the merchant seeking goodly pearls, the housewife sweeping her house and hunting for the silver that she had lost, and a hundred and one other incidents close to the lives and experiences of the people.

His power and influence were manifest in physical transformations, such as have usually accompanied remarkable spiritual manifestations—the healing of the sick, the strengthening and blessing of the weak. And all this only helped to emphasize the strange power of this man who had arisen among men. As they marveled at his teaching, they marveled no less at his wonderful works.

Actress Blamed In Girl's Death

Dorothy Burgess, above, stage and screen actress, faces preliminary hearings soon on a charge of manslaughter arising from death in a San Francisco auto accident of Louise Manfreda. Miss Burgess refused to testify at the coroner's inquest, at which the above picture was made. The dead girl's parents have already sued Miss Burgess for $25,000.

Fireman Calls On Firemen For Help

By United Press.
COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.—Fireman, call a fireman! The fireman on a Denver & Rio Grande Western railroad switch engine took one look at his engine and did just that. The engine was on fire.

The fire department rushed to the scene, but got the fire under control only after it had burned all the woodwork out of the engine cab.

WE BUY PRODUCE 'M' SYSTEM GROCERY & MARKET Ranger, Texas
An enterprising Kansas editor invites his readers to use his advertising columns to publish 'obituaries' of townsmen who still are alive and kicking 'so that they can see all the good things that are said about them before they are dead.' What a jolt for truth in advertising.

I'm working and Smoking overtime

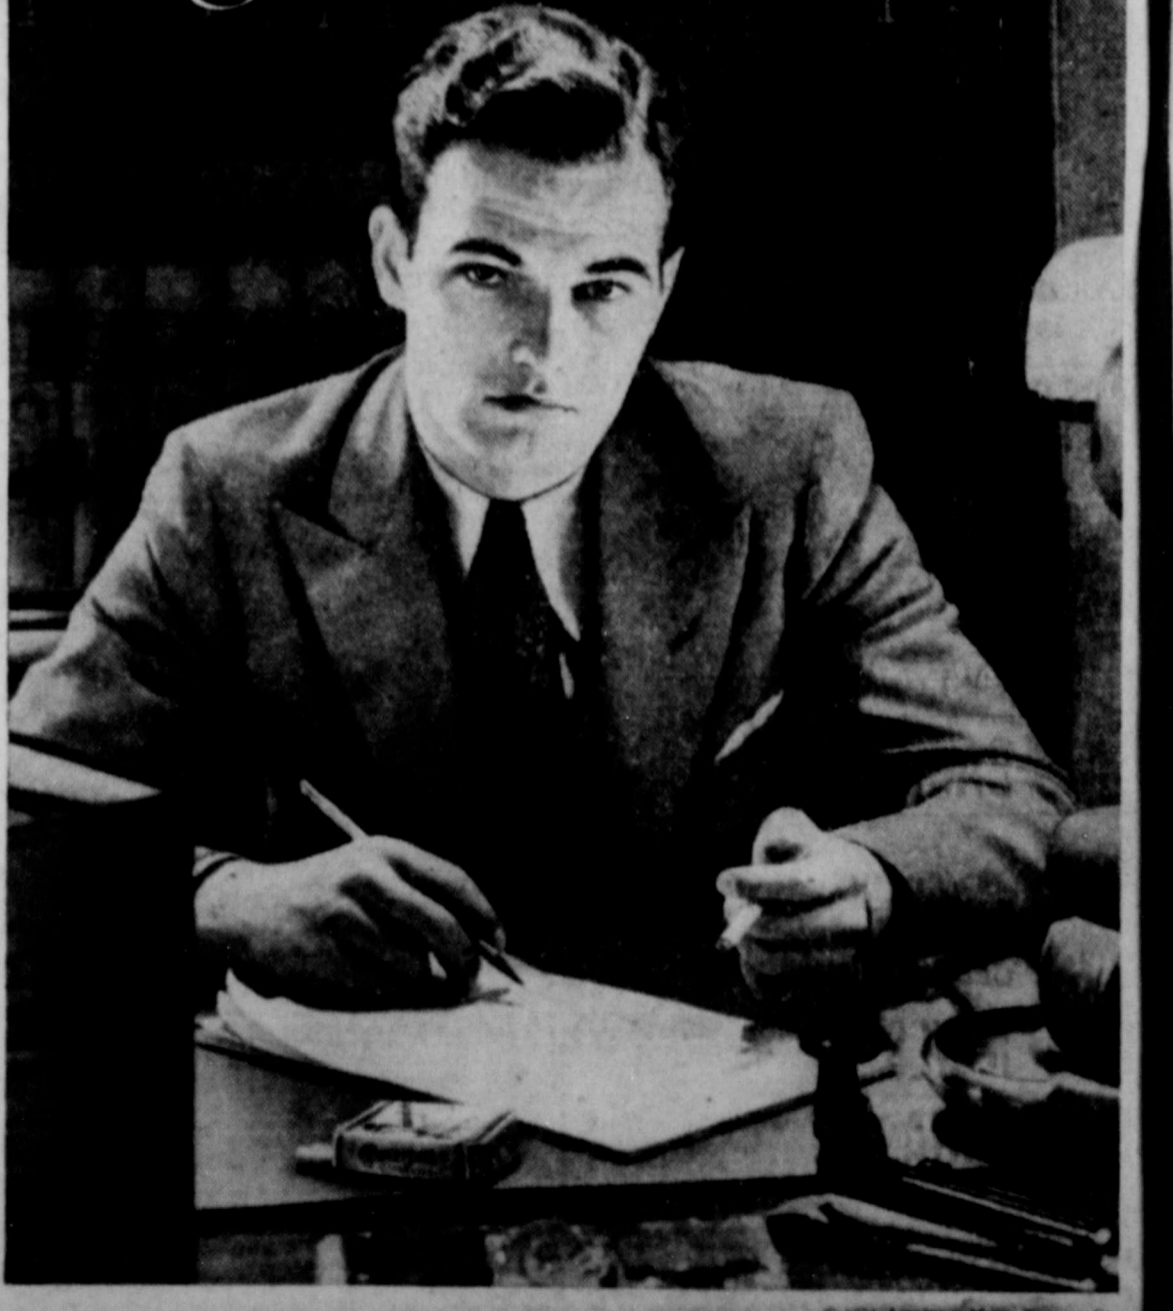

hence a Milder Cigarette

WHEN I work hard, I usually smoke more; and when I smoke more, I usually work harder—and that's why I want a cigarette that's milder.
We use in Chesterfield Cigarettes mild, ripe Domestic and Turkish tobaccos which have been aged and re-aged.

These good tobaccos in Chesterfield are used in the right proportions—that's a very important matter.
These good tobaccos in Chesterfield are blended and cross-blended—welded together; that, too, helps to make a milder cigarette with better taste.

DERRICK SHADOWS

By V. MARIE STEPHENS

"If you please," he said, "I'd not eat here. Y'see, I've got my head down by the tracks and I'm as hungry as I am. If you'll put whatever you've left in a paper sack, I believe I'll go along to him." What do you call that? Sportmanship on the road? And though I don't think that his pal was putting up some story around the corner, the idea is the 50-50 contract they made, and I admire the way they're begging game.

I knew a coach in a college two years ago who rubbed his negro boy's head for luck at all points in the game. It came as a sort of tradition on the team, with the outcome of the game depending on the darky's good days. Maybe the world needs a charm to dispel the effects of the last three years. The long drive for '33 seems to be dragging along in the old ruts. We may do something more forceful than a new year's party.

Looking back over a style magazine for '29, one is reminded that things are possible. Back in the days when tight skirts crowned the knees and tight hats pulled over bangs, red finger nails shadowed eyes just weren't in the king's society. And you have more proof that it is possible to advertise if you want a piece of the public every four days...and cash today.

Do you want what you get? Do you know what the headmaster will tell you...crime, death, misery. When the crime waves reach the highest point circulation mounts with it, and when life flows smoothly and dully the headmaster finds other amusements. All which points to the fact that the publication of sensational news has gradually lowered the headmaster's literary ideals. Giving a girl what she wants without facing her is the problem over which editors go mad, and the headmaster she buys on the newsstands in America go mad...which is pretty even break, after all.

Why phrase the bill "guaranty months school to each child"? Youngsters don't care. They're on the holidays. The teachers are ones who want the extra days more pay, and it's only fair they get both. It was never intended that the practice of education should throw the shadow of poor house across the teacher's life. It's time we begin to guarantee the instructors something worth work.

Everything being turned around these days and everybody getting what they don't want and expect, it's only natural that our adverse turn themselves around and do some worth while. With such a rolling around only once in a while, why not consider it a Friday 13?

SPOTLIGHT

BEGIN HERE TODAY
SHEILA SHAYNE, whose parents were well known vaudeville entertainers, is in New York looking for a job. Sheila is a dancer. After much discouragement she is hired to substitute for DAISY GLEASON, another dancer, who has sprained an ankle. While rehearsing at JOE PARIS' song shop Sheila meets THEYON LANE and DICK STANLEY, club and vaudeville performers. Dick urges Lane to include Sheila in the program of entertainment at a party he is giving. Sheila refuses, knowing she will be tired after a day of rehearsing and the performance that night. However, Dick comes to the theater later and persuades her to consent.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XI
IT was June. Sheila was still playing split weeks with Roscoe's act which had not been booked for a solid engagement after all. But split weeks here and there were better than nothing. Sheila solemnly agreed.

Dick Stanley approved of the arrangement because it kept her where he could see her frequently. He would call for her and take her to a late breakfast—often at the Casino in the park among the early lunchers. Then, if Sheila did not have to play a matinee, she would drive through Westchester or out on Long Island where the world swim and spend leisure hours on the beach.

Then, for days perhaps, Dick would seem to forget her. It might make a flying trip home to his family's summer cottage, a palatial affair of which he spoke in an off-hand manner as the "back." Sometimes Sheila knew had engagements with girls in Trevor's Long Island set.

But there was another side of the situation. Sheila had to add to her wardrobe considerably to appear well dressed for all these engagements with Dick. As Myrle said, it "ran into money." Of course Sheila could not compete with those rier girls. Dick would have told her that anything she wore was "lovely" but Sheila knew, just the same, that sooner or later he would begin to compare her unconsciously with the carefully groomed girls whom he met in his own set. The comparison could not help but be to Sheila's disadvantage.

So she bought dresses—picked up here and there in basements, some touch betraying their cheapness removed by Sheila's own skillful fingers, some bit of handwork added possibly. She bought hats and was fortunate that almost any hat looked well on her. She could wear a basement hat at just the right angle and make it look—well, almost Fifth Avenue.

Shoes and hose remained serious problems. Cheap ones just would not do. It was discouraging business, trying to appear in a new outfit every once in a while and at the same time to save money.

THIS morning, attired in a blue linen frock with finely embroidered collar and cuffs of bite, a small white hat pulled down over her satin hair, Dick looked up from his coffee. "You certainly made a hit with Mandrake," he said.

secure. Of course she had a job but that job was temporary. Sheila was making enough to pay her living expenses but she had been able to save almost nothing. And any day now Daisy would be back in the act and she would be through. Daisy had been strong enough to dance for a week or so but Roscoe had explained that he wanted her to have a good rest at Atlantic City where her aunt had a boarding house.

Sheila talked it over with Phil Short. "Try to get a specialty number in one of the shows opening in September," was Phil's rather impractical advice. That would be fine, of course. Anyone could have told her the same. But how was she to get such a chance?

So Sheila made the rounds of the agents' offices. A night club job presented itself with harder work and no more money than Roscoe was paying her. The club manager hinted that she would be expected to be nice to patrons—out-of-town buyers, businessmen and salesmen in New York for a good time.

"Being nice" officially meant dancing with these men during the waits in the show and eating with them. It saved dinner money but it was hard on the shoes. And frequently it meant accompanying them on further jaunts to out-of-town roadhouses with distressing and dismaying developments.

Sheila declined the offer and remained with Roscoe. She was more and more of Phil, paying her own checks when they ate together or rode on buses through Riverside Drive, for Phil was diligently saving his money. Then came the week when Phil, flush with an embarrassment, asked Sheila to shop for him in the infants' department of a certain store of which he said Mildred had read.

SHEILA shopped about, getting the best values for the money—tiny socks, adorable little gowns and sterner practical night wear. Phil's expression as they packed the things together in Ma Lowell's kitchen was so softened that Sheila was touched. Phil was going home for the great event in August, leaving the show.

"Oh, I'll get a job nearer home. In Detroit, maybe," was his confident explanation. Later he announced that he had already signed up. He was a skillful saxophonist and they were in demand.

HERE--- AND THERE
By ELVIE H. JACKSON

Even though icy blasts sweep into our faces when we open the house doors these early mornings, yet you can see the living evidence of the coming of spring all about us.

Here and there, the rose bushes are struggling into new life, and evidences of the sap creeping from the roots up through the tree and its branches are visible.

And why not? The sun is not content to rise just one day, but continues his majestic journey day after day. And the human world look forward to that new sun, and new day and everlasting promise of something better.

New Era Club Art Exhibit Lends Color To Week's Social Calendar.

A colorful panorama of artists' splendor was realistically presented Thursday afternoon from 3 until 5 o'clock in the attractive home of Mrs. O. E. Samms, when the New Era Club, of the sixth district entertained with a select and lovely art exhibit for the special entertainment of club members and friends, art lovers and other honorary guests, composing a calling personnel of some fifty guests during the delightful afternoon.

The group of twenty paintings were effectively arranged about the living-room, dining-room and bedroom of the Samms home. The color hues of the array of scenes were brought out to a degree of perfection through lighted rays afforded by softly colored bulbs.

Guests were requested to list first, second and third choice of the paintings, when assembled formed the following personal opinions. Greatest number of first choices was that of the "Water Hole," on Prude Ranch, in the Davis Mountains, painted by Louise Wood Teel, of El Paso.

Second, "Morning Mist," painted by Mrs. A. M. Carpenter, of Abilene, dean of Women at Simmons University.

Third, "Texas Blue Bonnets," a pretty production made by Emma Newton Masur, also of Abilene.

The beauty of the dining-room was further accentuated through the dining table's appointments laid with red satin and lace. The center piece was fashioned from a graceful cluster of red carnations, entwined with runners of lacy fern. Tea was poured from this table by Mrs. C. G. King, whose brunet loveliness was enhanced through a beautiful model of red crepe, cut in the new lines for Spring, which transform models into those for afternoon and evening wear.

The function is declared to be one of the most perfect happenings to have been given this season and made decidedly pleasant through the hospitality of the popular hostess.

Sunday School Class Entertained at Hicks' Home. Mrs. F. D. Hicks and daughter, Miss Louise Davis, entertained the Queen Esther Class of Central Baptist church Thursday evening at their home on Mesquite street.

A number of games filled the well-planned evening under the direction of Miss Davis and Miss Maline Goldberg. Special music was rendered by Miss Elta Marie Choate. Closing this enjoyable affair, a plate of sandwiches, potato chips, olives, cake and hot chocolate were served to the 45 members and guests by the hostess and co-hostess, who are also teachers of this active class of girls.

Ivy Leaf Study Club Elects Officers. The Ivy Leaf Study Club met in an all-day meeting at the Masonic Hall Thursday. A beautifully appointed luncheon was enjoyed during the noon hour, after which there was a business session. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Mrs. A. J. Bartrug, president; Mrs. V. G. T. Williams, vice president; Mrs. R. J. Taylor, secretary; Mrs. F. D. Hicks, reporter.

The club will meet twice a month, on second and fourth Thursdays. Those enjoying this splendid meeting were, Mesdames A. J. Bartrug, V. G. T. Williams, R. J. Taylor, B. E. Rigby, W. R. Clardy, J. W. Harmon, J. F. Donley, A. J. Baum, R. W. Gordon, Grace Younce.

National Thrift Week Observed at Study Association. National Thrift Week has proven a great advantage, and has been well observed at all study associations this week.

Thursday afternoon members of Child study association No. 2 met with Mrs. Saule Perlestein at her home, 717 Cypress street. "Character and Education," was discussed from a well prepared paper, read by Mrs. Elmer Rogers, followed with a paper on the outstanding topic, "Thrift," by Mrs. C. A. Hummell.

The program of study was drawn to a close when Mrs. W. R. Avant gave the subject taken from the assignment "Safety in the Home." During the business session plans for the district conference to be held the first week in April were discussed. It was agreed by the members that their quota of the expenses would be satisfactorily taken care of from the present plan outlined.

The hostess served a delicious refreshment plate at tea time. After adjournment of the meeting members motored in a body to the home of Mrs. O. E. Samms, where the New Era Club was entertaining with a colorful art exhibit enjoyed by some fifty guests during the open house hours.

Association members enjoying the afternoon of study and visit were Meses. Odell Cole, Onis Littlefield, Max Orr, C. A. Hummell, W. R. Avant, Elmer Rogers, J. E. Jacobs and Saule Perlestein.

JOSEPH'S General Pre-Inventory SALE NOW IN FULL SWING!

Our fiscal year ends February 1, and we will take our annual inventory the latter part of this month, but before doing this, it is our intention to clear out all Fall and Winter merchandise in every part of our big department store. It has always been our custom to clean house before Spring merchandise arrives, and we are getting in our Spring merchandise now, and do not have room for it—this is the reason we are cutting the prices so deep during our Pre-Inventory Sale. The sale is store-wide—the prices astonishingly low—and quick action on your part will mean the saving of many dollars in purchases for the entire family.
