4,000 Vehicles To Register by April 15 Deadline

Less than thirty per cent of the registered vehicles in this area have been safety inspected for 1962 according to Patrolman Joe McLaren Motor Vehicle Inspection Service of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

With the April 15 deadline, for having the vehicles checked, rapidly approaching, this means there are approximately 4,000 vehicles in Castro County remaining to be inspected by the seven approved inspection stations available. Those official inspection stations in Castro County are:

- DIMITT
Dimmitt Motor Co., Inc.
Haynes Machinery Motor Co.
Palmer's Garage
Taylor's Garage

- NAZARETH
Warren Motor Co.

- HART
Bailey Motor Service
Ed's Garage

Many motorists are going to find long lines awaiting them as the deadline draws nearer, due to the inspection stations not being able to cope with this large number.

The patrolman urged drivers to have their vehicles inspected as soon as possible to avoid this last minute rush. In addition, he reminded drivers that this time of the year is noted for adverse weather conditions which prevents the inspection stations from checking the vehicles.

Passenger cars are inspected for brakes, lights, reflectors, horn and windshield wipers; while commercial vehicles are inspected for the above plus additional items required by law. Patrolman McLaren said, "All motorists not displaying a valid 1962 inspection sticker by April 15 will be in violation of state law."

VISITS RELATIVES

Minister Bedford W. Smith was away from Dimmitt last week between Monday and Saturday visiting his brother and sister who live at Grand Prairie and Orange, Texas and other relatives in Temple and Knox City.

Mrs. Hooper Shaw of Dimmitt and Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Richburg and De Ann of Hart were business visitors in Plainview Monday.

Church History ...

The history of a local church, naturally, has local interest, but does not portray the complete picture of the impact of religion upon a community or country. In fact, "... the history of one church, taken by itself, may be actually misleading. To gain complete understanding it is needful to take into consideration what all the churches have done, as well as every other influence which has entered into the moral and religious life of the people."

Some have made a study of religion in a particular country. Such an investigation will have more local appeal than one broader in scope. An example of this type of research is that done by Marcus Bach in his survey of the religion of the Soviets.

Usually, however, local religious history is found interwoven with the history of a city, county, or state. An example of this is found in the history of Castro County, Texas, written by Lillie Mae Hunter. In the preface she states:

"This is the story of a County and of the people who built it; but more than that, it is the story of the men of the Plains." To write this story of a county and its builders, Hunter reviewed religious history also. She recounted the organization of the First Baptist Church, and told of the first church building erected in Dimmitt, as well as many other vital facts and observations of the religious history of the town.

To some, religious history means the history of the Church from its beginning. Schaff believed it began with the first man and has continued to the present. He says:

"The history of the Church is the rise and progress of heaven upon earth, for the glory of God and the salvation of the world. It begins with the creation of Adam, and with that promise of the serpent-bruise, which relieved the loss of the paradise of innocence by the hope of future redemption from the curse of sin."

"... This is the objective conception of church history."

"In the subjective sense of the word ... church history is the faithful and lifelike description of the origin and progress of this heavenly kingdom." Church history reveals the moral and religious development of our race. It has special value for the theologian and minister as the key to the present condition of Christendom. It has practical value for every Christian too. It serves as a warning and encouragement, consolation, and counsel.

HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

For the purpose of orientation, the writer has tried to trace briefly the history of the place and people encompassed in this thesis. Such investigations necessitated going back a few hundred years in time.

Long before the white man's history on the plains began, under Mexican rule, Texas was organized into territories. The Panhandle was a part of the Mexican state of Coahuila. After Texas independence was won, the state was divided into 23 (twenty-three) counties; Bexar, taking in the northern and western parts of the state, included 125 present day counties.

Probably, the first white man to gaze across the vast expanse which was later to be known as the Texas Panhandle, was Francisco Vasquez de Coronado. He was looking for the "Seven Cities of Cibola," which were purported to contain gold in fabulous sums. Disappointed and discouraged in New Mexico, Coronado and his band sallied forth again when they heard of the El Dorado called Gran Quivira, another legendary city across the plains to the east. The Castro County area may have been crossed by the Spanish explorers in June of the year 1541. After Coronado's exploration, the Plains remained the home of the buffalo and Indians for over three hundred years.

The Texas Panhandle was a part of what was then known as the "Great American Desert" and the Llano Estacado. It was the common belief that the climate was so arid it would always be practically worthless to the white man. Information about the area was inaccurate. In the Census Reports of 1880 it was stated by one who had "carefully explored the Panhandle and adjacent Texas" that "not more than 7000,000 Acres of the Llano Estacado within the state of Texas can be regarded as absolute desert ... There have been some seasons since when even ebullient natives have resuracted this impression."

Castro County was formed out of the "Great American Desert" in 1876. It was named for Henri Castro—a descendant of Portuguese nobility—born in France in July, 1786. Castro County was included in the first survey of Panhandle land under the supervision of John Summerfield, State Surveyor of Texas. According to The Handbook of Texas, "the county has an area of 876 square miles, an altitude from 3,500 to 4,000 feet, annual rainfall of 18 (eighteen) inches, and mean annual temperature of 59.5 degrees. The City of Dimmitt is located in the central part of Castro County. It was established in 1891 as county seat of the newly-organized county and named for W. C. Dimmitt, one of the promoters of the site. Settlers came slowly in the early years. Among the first were W. C. Dimmitt, John S. Summerfield, and T. W. Hart. Towns and communities in the county still bear their names. There were only nine people in Castro County in January, 1890. However, within two years the requirement of 150 citizens was reached, and the county was formally organized. Many names affixed to the petition for an election included those of horses and strangers as well as settlers.

denacy as that was 1912, the year that Theodore Roosevelt split the vote by organizing the Progressive Party.

Not long after the election—(so a traveling man who visited Piggott, Ark, related to my friend Herschel Potter, the druggist, and he told me the story) Bryan was in a city in Clark's Congressional district for a lecture. It was Sunday night and the silver-tongued orator was to speak on a religious subject.

A crowded house greeted him. Many were supporters of Clark and when Bryan rose to speak, someone called out in a hostile tone, "Tell us about the Baltimore convention!"

There was a murmur which meant that the heckler had struck a favorable chord. Bryan flushed and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, if you do not object to such a topic on Sunday, I will be happy to oblige the gentleman."

He then launched into a justification of his position and soon the entire audience was standing and cheering.

Patrick Henry—Webster—Prentiss Ingersoll—Grady—Bryan—such is the roll of American orators.

Heywood Broun, who chronicled the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, said that when Carpentier—older, lighter, conceded no chance—entered the ring, he was cheered but Dempsey was not. To have done so (Broun declared) would have been like cheering Niagara Falls when a man was about to go over it in a barrel.

About Your HEALTH

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health.

HENRY A. ROLLE, D. P. Commissioner of Health

Public school teachers throughout Texas face more teaching problems today than ever before.

High on the list of reasons for the situation are the difficulties involved in presenting instruction on whole subjects or portions of subjects which cannot properly be taught using normal classroom methods.

Many of the state's teachers—particularly counsellors and health and physical education teachers—have found the solution to this problem at the film library of the Texas State Department of Health in Austin.

Walter Rogers' WASHINGTON NEWSLETTER

For many years there has been great concern over the lack of information available to the Congress with regard to the fiscal requirements of the executive departments of the government.

Numerous attempts have been made to create some committee group, or staff organization to more effectively evaluate the budget requests of the several executive departments of the Federal government. At the present time the budget requests of each department must first go through the Bureau of the Budget, which is a part of the Executive office of the President of the United States.

There is no question but that a thorough and searching examination is made of these appropriation requests by the Bureau of the Budget. There is no question but that the requests of the departments are usually trimmed by the Bureau of the Budget. These appropriation requests are made up in the first instance by the particular agency or department involved, broken down as to the several divisions of that department. In creating the budget it is necessary for these people in these divisions of a department to project their thinking into the future and rely on estimates as to how much will be needed. It is generally conceded that very seldom are any estimates less than the actual needs of the department. Usually they are more than the actual requirements which explains why the Bureau of the Budget is able to trim these requests by either cutting down or deleting items. It must also be remembered that there is a large number of experts in financial matters working on these budgets, the items requested, and justification for those items.

The Bureau of the Budget, in going over these items, necessarily reflects the thinking of the Presidency as to what should or should not be included in the budget and the extent of it. Hence, the Bureau of the Budget will naturally furnish additional and further supporting data for those items of expenditure particularly favored by the Presidency. When the budget finally reaches the Congress, it has been the subject of deep and exhaustive study, both as to the suggested expenditures and as to the supporting data and justification for those expenditures, representing of course the thinking of the Executive Branch of the government. It comes to Congress for appropriation of public monies to meet the requests and demands. Congress is supposed to reflect the will of the people as to the expenditures to be made. The requests of the executive departments can be increased or decreased, or completely wiped out. Usually the budget requests are measurably but by the Congress.

The budget itself, which is sent up by the President, is usually the product of many months of work. The difficulty which Congress experiences in dealing with a budget is the fact that there is so little time between the transmittal of the budget to the Congress and the start of the fiscal year to which it is applicable. For instance, the budget presented in the month of January each year must be acted upon not later than June 30th of that same year. This means that the Congress has at most approximately five and a half months to go over the matters therein contained. It must also be remembered that the folks in the Executive Branch of the government preparing these budgets and justifying them have this as a primary duty: The Members of Congress have thousands of duties, among which is the necessity to study and act on the appropriations bills. The Appropriations Committee of the Congress has 50 members. These are divided into Subcommittees, to which are assigned different phases of the budget requests. There is a very limited number of employees assigned to each Subcommittee to work with it on the subject. The problem resolves itself to this: we in the Congress are charged with completely evaluating in five and a half months with a very minute number of employees, comparatively speaking, the appropriations request that have been studied and justified over a period of approximately 18 months by thousands of employees. You can readily see the proportion of the difficulties which we encounter in trying to do this.

I have long advocated the solution of this problem by the creation of a committee on the Budget to constantly and continuously work in complete coordination with the several executive departments and agencies in the preparation of the budget in the first instance. This will enable the representatives of the people to have full and accurate information on all subjects at a moment's notice and would, in my opinion, provide the mechanics by which Federal expenditures could be measurably cut quickly. I would dare say that savings the first year would mean the difference between a surplus and a deficit. Certainly with the experience we have had in the past, I do not see how anyone could object to giving such a method a trial.

During the past three months the library has furnished films for more than 6,000 showings to over three-quarters of a million people. All films are shipped parcel post, with the borrower paying return postage.

Many of the state's teachers—particularly counsellors and health and physical education teachers—have found the solution to this problem at the film library of the Texas State Department of Health in Austin.

The library, with its 1,600 films which are listed under 600 different titles, is said to be one of the most extensive in the Southwest. It contains films with viewing times ranging from four to 57 minutes, covering practically all phases of personal and community health.

Most of the films were produced commercially but 20 of them were written and produced for specific Texas application.

All films are aimed at a single purpose: teaching good health practices. In addition to providing Texas school teachers with films for classroom aids, the library makes films available to religious and fraternal organizations and to civic groups. Practically any club or organization may book films for general interest or educational viewing, but they are limited to use within the state.

One thing about the space program - you can no longer say what goes up must come down!

Adolescence is a time for rapid changes. Between the years of 12 and 17, a parent ages 20 years!

Teenage is when youngsters aren't bright enough to realize their parents couldn't be that stupid!

Thought for the Week

LINGERING HOPE

In the heart of any living man there is always a beat of lingering hope. No matter how wealthy he may become or what misfortune he may acquire, man always hopes for a better thing.

What is this thing called hope? Webster defines hope as a desire with expectation of obtaining what is desired, or a belief that it is obtainable. Hope is also defined as the ground source for happy expectations.

It must have been a very wise person who once said, "Hope springs eternally within the human breast; man never is but always to be blest."

We, as individuals, must never give up our hopes or our dreams. How else could we ever have a belief in a better future?

BETHEL NEWS

The monthly meeting of the Bethel Community Club will be held these young men is by training them through the passage of the GI veterans education bill. It is patended after the GI Bills of world War II and the Korean Conflict — the bills that gave the nation 450,000 more engineers, 150,000 physicists, chemists and other scientists, 180,000 more doctors, nurses and medical technicians and over 230,000 teachers. Last year Soviet Russia graduated from its colleges 190,000 scientists, engineers and scientific personnel, while we graduated only 90,000.

These World War II and Korean GI Bills provided the training of the men who are now moving into positions of leadership throughout our nation. Where would we be without them? Where will we be ten years from now without new resource of brainpower upon which to draw? The GI Bills of World War I and the Korean Conflict gave us our present lead with engineers and scientists — a lead that we must step up or lose.

Laws to educate the men who serve our country in the armed forces will go a long way to provide the know-how that will help us maintain a position of world leadership. Even now with this backlog of people trained under the GI Bills of World War II and the Korean Conflict our nation does not hold the position of leadership in space that it should hold.

We must attain such proficiency in space that we shall not miss our objectives by a mile, nor an inch nor a fraction of an inch. And we must not miscalculate by a moment in our assessment of emergency nature of the educational needs of this country in the critical years ahead.

The need for higher education in the United States goes much deeper than the obvious fact that our status in the world depends on our ability to compete with other nations. A case for a readjustment program for the veterans could rest almost entirely upon the increasing role that education plays in our domestic economy. And nowhere is the Cold War GI Bill needed more than in Texas.

We stand thirty-second among the states in the averages annual amount of money each person earns yearly. We need this bill in Texas; the nation needs this bill.

Through the GI Bill, World War II veterans have become the best educated single group of people in the history of the UNITED STATES. Because of their training they have raised their income to the point where they are now paying an extra billion dollars a year in income taxes to Uncle Sam, and at this rate, the GI Bill-trained veterans of World War II and the Korean Conflict will finish paying off the $15 Billion cost of the GI education and training program in the next eight years — so the GI training bills make money for the taxpayers of the United States. They are investment bills — not spending bills.

The state quota for Texas draft boards in March calls for 228 men, Colonel Morris S. Schwartz, state Selective Service director announce- ed Tuesday.

The state's March call of 228 com- pares with a quota of 296 for Feb- ruary and 440 for January. The March call is the state's share of a national call of 6000 men, all for the Army.

Colonel Schwartz also announced that local boards would send 650 men for pre-induction physical and mental examinations. Local board quotas for the March call already have been figured and sent to the state's 137 local boards. The March quota will be filled with men who are at least 22 years old on March 1, with the exception of volunteers or delinquents, who may be younger.
