SEN. DILL PULLS HIS FACE AND FLAG OUT OF THE PICTURE

Sen. Clarence C. Dill of the State of Washington has a remarkable record of achievement as one of the progressive democrats of the West. He has had three terms in his credit. Now he is out of the picture. He gave as his reason for withdrawal from public life that the State of Washington as a home appealed to him 10 times more strongly than the City of Washington as a temporary residence. He gave a second reason. He was weary of politics and politicians. He was going home to enjoy life and do his level best to pursue or rather walk in the pathway that leads to peace and happiness without giving a thought to the prosperity side of it.

Dill was the first democrat in years to represent the State of Washington in the American senate. He was a New Dealer long before the coming of a New Deal President or administration. Perhaps he is wise. But where will he find peace and happiness unalloyed? Ancient sages said that it was found in the cemetery or burial places of the departed. But life may be different in the State of Washington.

NORMAN THOMAS CALLS FOR FARM-LABOR PARTY

Norman Thomas is the chief apostle of the right wing socialists in his republic. He has been nominated by the socialists of New York as their candidate for the office of United States senator at the November election. He was a minister of the gospel before he became a socialist. He deserted the pulpit for the rostrum. He is a writer of ability, an orator of eloquence and perhaps the most outstanding leader of the followers of Kark Marx in this republic of Washington and Jefferson and Lincoln and Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Speaking through the Today magazine columns he advises the formation of a national farm-labor party for the campaign of 1936. He would "preserve the rule of democracy but he would destroy capitalism and substitute for the same co-operative commonwealth system with profit eliminated."

This is the 158th anniversary of the celebration of the declaration of American independence. Its founders gave to the people who came after them constitutional liberty and the absolute right of a free people to do their own thinking and praying, and voting and to elect their own servants and to make their own laws under a free flag; for equal opportunities open to all and the right of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness guaranteed to all.

LITTLE MAN, WHAT NEXT?

Charles Norman, 3rd, lighted a cigar from the three birthday candles on his cake during a party at his home in West Paterson, N. J. He has been smoking since he was 14 months old, but his parents now have rationed him to two cigars, one cigarette and a couple of pipes a day.

MY dear daughter," said Professor Lowe, very gently "I believe Howard's going to live. I never believed anything else. And I'll bring you some knitting things if I can find any. I'm not very good at shopping, your mother says." He went to kiss her and she clung to him for a moment. Then she was left once more alone with her fears. After a little she could not sit still, so she began to work at the disordered room, picking up papers from the floor, pulling the odd looking pieces of furniture into what seemed their usual positions, setting the cushions. At last she came to Jane's desk which was in the corner. The drawers had left it, the drawers half open, the top covered with a tossed-about litter of their contents. Amy touched it gingerly, hating it. It seemed so much a piece of Jane herself. But she forced herself to lay the paper and notebooks and letters together. Even so she had finished with this the cook came in and would Mrs. Jackson please tell her about the orders. There must she said be supper for the day nurses and a midnight lunch for the nurse who came on at night. "And M'ree and I talked it over," added the woman, "and we don't like the idea of you going out for meals. We want to serve your meals too."

AMY thought, "Howard is here—only two rooms away and I can't even be with him! What will I do if he dies?" She knew that all of them—the colonel, the doctor—were sure Howard was going to die. That was why the doctor said the consultation must be immediate. The doctor entered. "I've got Holzmann and Strake. You couldn't do better. They'll be here shortly. I've got to go out for a while but I'll be back before they get here." She stopped before Amy. "Your husband is no worse. Mrs. Jackson says. He is holding his own. And that is itself, is slightly—very slightly—encouraging. I think I may safely say that much." Professor Lowe came in at the moment and the doctor repeated what he had told Amy, and took leave. The professor was disturbed and uneasy. "Amy," he said, sitting down beside her, "this is certainly a very peculiar situation just as you came in apparently Jane went out by the back door, of all things—saying nothing what ever to the servants, leaving no orders. There's a cook and a waitress, decent women, out both slightly disgruntled by the extra work and the demands the nurses make. They were on the point of leaving but I've explained matters as far as I could, and I think they'll stay. I promised them extra wages. In fact, I gave them each $20 and told them I would pay all the maintenance bills for the nurses' meals, you know. But I don't see how we can stay here, you and I, I mean, and make any further trouble for them. I'll go out and get rooms at the nearest hotel, and we will eat there, and simply wait here the rest of the time. And I believe I'd better go to Jane's office and see her. She would be there, I suppose. I don't understand why she rushed out just as we came. It's all very peculiar. I wish your mother had some with us. I must wire your mother, and Mrs. Jackson."

HE patted Amy's hand. "I don't want to seem unfeeling, my child. I know what distress of mind you are in," he went on, "but if you could, a little adjust the practical matters here, talk with the maids yourself, you would be doing the only thing you can do now for Howard. And it will be better for you than sitting here with your fears. There is no use doing that."

"I Always Feel Safer in a Ford"

ALL-STEEL BODY AND SAFETY GLASS—The strength of steel protects you when you ride in a Ford V-8.

Around you is an all-steel body, electrically welded into one piece.

Beneath your feet is a rigid, X-type steel frame.

Out in front of you and behind you are strong steel axles, triangularly braced by steel radius-rods and supported by a steel torque tube.

You ride upon steel-spoke wheels, also electrically welded into one piece. The windshield before your eyes is safety glass. (All Ford V-8 De Luxe closed cars are equipped throughout with safety glass at no additional cost.)

Another reason why you feel safer in a Ford V-8 is something that makes every driver a better driver . . . ease of handling. There is always less strain and less likelihood of tight situations when you drive an alert, obedient car.

The Ford V-8 gives you an extra margin of safety because of its quick acceleration, eight-cylinder speed and power, ease of steering, stability on curves and rough roads, and powerful, oversize brakes.

Sheriff Halted An Auto Prank

COLEBROOK, O.—A small boy prank successfully designed to scare from seven to ten years' growth out of the average motorist, has been stopped by the county sheriff's office.

A driver on State Highway 46, north of here, would see a figure suddenly projected in front of his automobile, collapsing in the road. Horrified, the driver would act instantly. The machine would swerve, tires squealing. One car almost overturned. Others missed the ditch by inches.

His heart pounding, the driver would stop, get out and begin a search for the prostrate body. But there was no body.

People began to investigate. They found, finally, that several boys had fashioned a straw dummy, and, lying hidden along the roadside, would toss it in front of speeding machines. When the driver slowed down, or got out to search for the "person," the boys pulled the dummy to cover.

Deputy Sheriff Thomas Passula promised the dummy-makers a visit to the county detention home if he heard of any more "pranks."

Game Abundant All Over Idaho

BOISE, Idaho.—Idaho sportsmen have little cause for worry about drought damage to big game, according to State Game Warden Amos H. Eckert.

The state literally is alive with thousands of deer and elk, a plentiful supply of moose and, in the almost inaccessible mountain regions, mountain sheep, the warden declared, returning from a 10-day inspection trip into the Targhee and Caribou national forests, east of Idaho Falls.

He said that while range cattle and sheep were being moved from the forests because of the failure of water holes and springs, wild animals apparently were not seriously affected.

One of the surprises of the trip, he said, was the discovery of a band of mountain sheep, which apparently were making "headquarters" on Palisade mountain, a region formerly believed to be devoid of the species.

The elk and deer population show considerable increase, he added.

The warden said that the increase was undoubtedly due in part to the strict hunting regulations enforced by the state and the state's policy of providing feed during the winter, when deep snow and freezing temperatures make it impossible for the animals to shift for themselves.

Paper Urges A Lawyer Censorship

"Why not censor the lawyers?" asks the Cleburne Times-Review, in answer to a resolution adopted by New York attorneys to urge the national bar association to support censorship of the press in dealing with criminal cases.

The New York attorneys proposed that a censorship be enforced on sordid details of crime stories and alleged tendencies to try cases in the papers, with citations for contempt of court as the punishment for violation of censorship.

"We think the lawyers should attend to their own failings before trying to go around and tell newspapers what to do," the Times-Review said.

"The lawyers must remember that they are the ones responsible for the filthy stuff coming out in evidence. Many times their case rests on just how black they can paint the dead persons or the one who claims to be wronged.

"A contemporary says he thinks that part of the oath taken by a witness to 'tell the whole truth' should be stricken out. We agree with him. A witness can't tell the whole truth. Many lawyers won't let him. They only want their side told.

"The newspapers do what they can to tell the whole truth and give both sides of the question. Many lawyers certainly do not.

"The lawyers should attend to their own affairs and let the newspapers take care of their business."

The editorial was under the caption, "Why Not Censor the Lawyers?"

College Students Can Get Jobs To Stay In School

AUSTIN, Texas colleges and universities will be able to provide one out of every eight students enrolled this winter with jobs, presidents of the various colleges were informed in a letter from E. A. Baugh, chief engineer of the Texas Relief commission.

These jobs will pay on an average $15 per month and will last from September to June, according to present plans. The positions will be open to 12 1/2 per cent of the students at each college on full-time enrollment, an increase over last year, when funds were provided for only 10 per cent of the enrollment.

In the case of the University of Texas, it will mean part-time work for approximately 700 students, provided suitable work for that many can be found by school authorities.

Scope of the work has been broadened this year to include extension, adult education, recreation, and other work in addition to the work customarily done in the institutions by students working their way through school.

New students will get an even break with the old ones under the provision that 50 per cent of the funds allotted to a college shall be paid to students who were not regularly enrolled in any college during January, 1934.

Work will be equitably spread among men and women under the provision that jobs shall be allocated between boys and girls in proportion to the enrollment of each in the particular school.

CHIEF R.S.V.P.'S INVITATION

PARMA, O.—Police Chief Gary Burczyk received an invitation to the "grand opening" of the Moonlight Tavern. He went, with the result that his hostess, Miss Marie Stanley, 25, was charged with exhibiting an immoral picture. The picture, according to Chief Burczyk, was not a movie but a "still." It was exhibited not at the tavern, but on the invitation. "It was a fan dancer without her fan," whispered the chief.

NEW JUAREZ RECORD SET

JUAREZ, Mex.—It was an amazing record, and Juarez officials still are talking about it. A check of the police court docket on July 4 showed the name of not a single American. It was the first Fourth of July, officials said, since the advent of American prohibition 15 years ago that at least one American did not spend the day in the Juarez jail for drunkenness.

TREES LOSE LEAVES

PROVO, Utah.—Even though trees are well watered, they will lose their leaves under the relentless rays of a 100 degree sun, conditions here indicate. Carolina poplars, growing in the bank of an irrigation ditch, already are dropping their foliage. Residents believe the scorching sun is the cause of the "early autumn" for the ditch is filled with water.

HOLDS UNIQUE RECORD Marian Mansfield, Paramount actress, is the only feminine vocalist ever to sing with Guy Lombardo.

Deserted Lions Bring Fear to Ind. Town

GREENFIELD, Ind.—Two years ago Greenfield citizens made much complaint of a 'whale' left on a railroad car in local yards by defunct exhibitors.

An examination revealed that the 'whale' was made of paper mache and the odor complained of was imaginary.

But Greenfield has new worries now. A circus left two lions at the Hancock County fair grounds. Citizens are kept awake at night by their roaring and intimidated by the fear that the lions will escape.

Mrs. A. Van Fleet of New York, who is spending the summer in California, made the charge before Yosemite National Park rangers.

Mrs. Van Fleet embarrassedly explained at a park entrance that she could not pay the entrance fee because the ducks snatched her purse, containing $90, as she rested in Roeding Park on route to Yosemite.
