ALLIED TALKS TO EASTLAND COUNTY CROWD

Attorney General James V. Allred, candidate for governor, addressed the voters of Eastland county Wednesday night in the interest of his campaign.

Mr. Allred's address was along the same lines of addresses delivered at other places in the State. He said that it was being told over and over again that the big oil interests were supporting him when as a matter of fact Hunter was the one they are supporting.

Mr. Allred criticized his opponent's tax plans and said that the blended tax Mr. Hunter talks about is nothing more nor less than a general sales tax.

Hunter's proposal to abolish the ad valorem tax was criticized by Allred who stated that it would help only such people as enter and not the little fellow who really needed relief from heavy tax burdens.

Allred issued a challenge to enter to make a public announcement of the amount he wanted to raise for the county.

All activity is again being shown in the Cross-Cut Plains field, according to word received here today, with drilling being started in that area.

The Beddingfield and associates have taken a location this week on the western margin property, five miles south of Cross Plains.

Dr. Butler had long been a member of the Methodist church. He was a Mason and Shriner.

The messenger boy who thwarted robbery was seen by a patrolman on the highway near the intersection of the highway and the main highway.

When the thief, posing as an actor, walked into the Greenville Union office and asked for money orders, the patrolman, Hicks, decided to keep an eye on him.

BOY KILLED AS SOLDIERS PUT ON SHOW

A boy was killed and three other persons were wounded when a troop of cavalry from Fort Reilly, Kan., ended a wild west rodeo with a burst of gunfire here last night.

Blanks were supposed to have been used. Army and county authorities opened an investigation today.

Appearance of the army troop came at the end of the rodeo. Lights in the big arena were lowered and thousands watched as the army, in mock battle, rode in with guns flashing, to break up the Indian siege of the beleaguered whites.

When the lights flashed on, Billy Snyder, 7, was slumped in his seat beside his father. He had been shot through the head. He died two hours later. Three others, two of them boys, were wounded slightly.

Officers were unable to explain the fatal mixup. They said the blanks for the rifles were checked and re-checked before being issued to the soldiers.

Breckenridge to Play In Ranger Sunday Afternoon

A good baseball game has been arranged for Sunday afternoon in Ranger when Breckenridge and Ranger will play on the baseball diamond on Eastland road.

The regular team for Ranger will be out, it was announced today, which consists of the best baseball talent available, along with good pitching, which should make the contest an interesting one.

The Breckenridge team is one of the best in this section of the country, having won many of its games this year, while the Ranger team has defeated some of the better teams to be found in this section of the country and has some good material from which to select its lineup Sunday.

Because of protests that dust was ruining the furnishings in nearby houses, the soft ball game scheduled between the Elks and Lone Star will be played this afternoon at the regular time at the baseball diamond on Eastland road.

A meeting of managers is being held this afternoon to take up the problem of finding a new field, and in the meantime the game today is to be played on the Eastland road diamond.

Mr. Pace, who has the land on which the diamond is located under lease, volunteered to donate the site to the soft ball league for use during the remainder of the season, which lasts but about two weeks more, and his offer has been tentatively accepted, pending action by the managers in meeting today.

Miss Sue Mann, state school supervisor of this district, after a recent inspection of the Eastland schools, recommended to the board that the minimum marks be paid Eastland teachers.

Removal of the Eastland zone relief office to the general offices on Lamar and Patterson streets, will be made within the next week, H. E. Driscoll announced Thursday.

Unique Program Is Enjoyed By Lions Club Today

The Lions club was favored today with a most enjoyable and unique entertainment, presented by Program Chairman Charles J. Moore, in the person of Mrs. Lee Galley who, dressed as a negro boy, strolled from an ante-room to the center of the floor singing "Cook Dat Chicken Pie," and accompanying herself on an accordion.

The song was one composed by Mrs. Galley and was a hilarious bit of comedy with semi-serious reference to various Lions. An encore she played and sang, in negro dialect, a parody on "Annie Laurie."

Before the entertainment, the club heard various reports from committee and took action on a matter presented by Dr. Harry A. Logsdon, who, as chairman of the finance committee, recommended that the club not employ any out-of-town director for a play this year. While the club made a profit last year it was deemed best to either not have a play or if one is decided upon later, to let it be home talent throughout, director, cast and all.

The membership attendance contest ended this week with the group captained by Lion Calvin Brown winner by two points over the group captained by Lion T. J. Anderson, who will furnish watermelons and swim tickets at the Willows Friday night at 7:30 o'clock for the whole group of 20-odd Lions.

Lion B. E. McGlamery of Eastland was a visitor in the club today as was Mr. Elkins of Temple, a young man who finished high school last year and who came before the club to present the proposition of the two service clubs sponsoring and aiding in the organizing and chartering of a Hi-Y club in Ranger high school next year.

$75 and $90 Set As Salaries For Eastland Tutors

State minimum teachers salary marks of $75 for elementary and $90 for high school pedagogues were this week set for Eastland teachers by the Eastland school board.

The salaries will be paid in a twelve month period basis. It is understood the new figures are considerably larger than those paid previously.

Miss Sue Mann, state school supervisor of this district, after a recent inspection of the Eastland schools, recommended to the board that the minimum marks be paid Eastland teachers.

Removal of the Eastland zone relief office to the general offices on Lamar and Patterson streets, will be made within the next week, H. E. Driscoll announced Thursday.

The move will make for a more efficient method of handling the work Driscoll says. No change of personnel or let-outs will be encountered in the change.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The government bond market today became one of Wall Street's chief media of expression on the silver nationalization plan and $21,760,000 worth of such securities were traded in the five hour session.

The bond market fluctuated widely as Wall Street attempted to place a proper interpretation on the program with government bonds closing irregular after dropping as much as one-half a point.

Stocks advanced one to almost five points. The dollar dropped sharply in foreign exchange. Wheat advanced 70 to 95 cents a bale after having a loss of 75 cents a bale prior to the silver announcement.

ROOSEVELT IN TALK DEFIES HIS CRITICS

GREEN BAY, Wis., Aug. 9.—President Roosevelt projected the new deal to great objectives today in a challenging defiance to his critics, pledging a multiplication of national wealth in which all may share.

Thousands of farmers, business men and their families whooped an enthusiastic response to Mr. Roosevelt's words. He said that the old economy of tooth and claw is gone; that all who read the times might know this country has seen the last of the old order.

Mr. Roosevelt counseled his political and economic opponents to look in the minds of the average man and woman for confidence in the future.

"There is no lack of confidence," the president said, "on the part of those business men, farmers and workers who clearly read the signs of the times. Sound economic improvement comes from improved conditions of the whole population and not the small fraction thereof."

"Those who measure confidence in this country in the future must look first to the average citizen."

But, the president said, the methods employed in seeking social justice would not "rub salt in the wound."

Distance Fliers Are Down In England

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Leonard Reid and J. R. Ayling, attempting a non-stop flight from Ontario to Bagdad, landed at Heston airdrome at noon (C.S.T.) today.

The fliers completed a successful crossing of the Atlantic in 31 hours, but their attempt to set a new world's non-stop distance record was spoiled.

After landing at Heston, near London, the fliers flew to Hatfield airdrome, about 20 miles northwest of here.

MAN IS HELD IN SLAYING OF A YOUTH

GOOSE CREEK, Texas, Aug. 9.—A 36-year-old Goose Creek man, arrested here as a suspect in connection with the mysterious hanging of Charles Cox, 14, was hurried out of town for safe-keeping today when a group of about 50 men gathered near the jail.

The man, himself the father of a 14-year-old boy, was arrested shortly after he had taken a friend to where the clothing of the slain boy was found.

Officers said the piece where the clothing was found was searched minutely yesterday. They said it was apparent that the clothing, missing since the boy was found hanging in a lumber shed Tuesday, had been placed there during the night.

The suspect said he had received a tip as to where the clothes were. He refused to tell who furnished the information.

The boy had been strangled to death by his belt which was fastened to a rope and tied to the rafters. Fingerprints on the belt were too blurred to be identified, fingerprint experts said.

Lotief Wants An Expression From Voters on Bonds

Cecil Lotief, representative from the 107th district composed of Eastland and Callahan counties, is desirous of knowing the people's wishes in the matter of issuing relief bonds, a matter to be dealt with in the coming session of the Legislature, and has addressed the following letter to his constituents:

Cross Plains, Tex., August 6, 1934. My Dear Editor: As you know the Governor has called the Legislature into special session, to convene August 27 for the purpose of issuing the balance of unsold relief bonds. The amount of these bonds is nine million, five hundred thousand dollars.

The Governor seems to favor the issuing of the entire amount at one time in order to adequately take care of the needy and distressed of our state. Now, as your representative in the law making body, I wish to ask each and every citizen of the 107th District to advise me of his views on this important subject, as it is your wish that I desire to carry out with my vote in the Legislature.

This money belongs to the tax payers of Texas and it is they who will repay it in the future. Therefore, I feel that this question merits each citizen and tax payer expressing his conscientious opinion to his State Representative. Assuring you that I shall ever be guided by your wishes in the future as I was in the past, I am, Very truly yours, Cecil A. Lotief, State Representative.

Silver Reserves To Be Built Up To A Ratio of Three To One Soon.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—President Roosevelt today nationalized silver in a dramatic monetary policy move which is the government's complete ownership of gold and silver, the precious metals backing the nation's currency.

The order does not give the government control of silver coins in circulation or household silver such as knives, forks and spoons, nor does it mean the government will seize or confiscate such silver.

By executive order and proclamation all silver in the nation with certain exceptions, was ordered turned over to the mints. Gold already in government vaults under a similar nationalization order.

The move permits the government to save money in its silver purchase plan under the requirements of the silver policy act of the last congress, requiring that silver reserves be built up to a one to three ratio with gold.

Silver nationalization immediately was applauded by congressional monetary leaders who warned that the move was in no sense a currency inflation maneuver. Silver was nationalized at 50.01 cents an ounce. Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. explained the fixed price will save the government money by not requiring it to buy silver at rising speculative market prices.

Silver, under the order, must be turned over to government mints within 90 days. Payment will be made in standard silver dollars silver certificates or in other currency.

Financial circles here attributed the move to control silver the same as is already in effect for gold as an important step toward what President Roosevelt terms the organization of a currency system that will be "sound and adequate" and which contemplates a large issuance of currency.

'GRAND OLD LADY OF THE STATE AND SCREEN'

Marie Dressler has passed on to her reward. She was 65. She was known as the "grand old lady of the stage and screen." She was one of the most remarkable women that the stage and screen has known. She made her first bow to the public more than 50 years ago. She was known to stage goers of many years. She was one of the most popular entertainers. She was ever clean and courageous and no scandal ever blackened her life or cast a stain upon her career as a favorite of the theatre going public. She made several fortunes. Her purse was open at all times not only to the down and outers of her own profession but to the down and outers beyond its pale. She scored a comeback after the road show had passed out and her fortune had disappeared. On the screen she became one of the best drawing cards in the history of the playhouse, accumulated another fortune, was acclaimed the most popular of living screen favorites and carried on professionally an activity almost to the day that the angel of death gave final warning and the marvelous womanly woman of stage and screen history passed out of the living picture.

Men who are gray and facing the setting sun today long years ago bowed at the shrine of Marie Dressler as one of the most delightful and one of the cleanest as well most fearless of all those who trod the stage and set an example for the boys and girls who came after her in the playhouse. She had a code and she lived it. While in the land of the living she won the admiration as well as the love of the theatre going public. When death came to her the theatre and the screen world mourned and the millions of patrons of the film world more than regretted the passing of a noble woman who had cast glory upon her profession and honor upon her name and career.

FRENCH MILLERS DEFEY GOVERNMENT

France is a wheat growing country—on a limited scale. The French government regulates the price of wheat. It protects its wheat growers by levying a heavy import tax. Now the millers of France have openly defied their government's efforts to regulate the price. In a letter addressed to the prime minister of the French republic the national association of millers said it will refuse to abide by the law which fixes the price of harvested wheat at $2.35 a bushel and the coming crop at $1.95.

Price fixing has been functioning in France in recent years. There is a heavy protective tariff and the growers are the beneficiaries. Now it is the millers and not the growers who are in open defiance of the recent price schedule fixed by the powers that be.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NRA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The weekly Blue Eagle is now in its seventh issue, has gained a circulation of 65,000, and long ago jumped from four tabloid-size pages to eight.

This NRA house organ is so well edited as to offer NRA critics little chance for ridicule—which is too bad, because I would like to poke a little fun at it myself.

Of course a prominent business man or trade association executive doesn't have much trouble crushing "The Blue Eagle." Just let him throw an armful of pesos at NRA and its effect on his industry and he'll be quoted with his name and correct middle initial.

Six Counties In State Completed Cotton Applications

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Aug. 9.—First counties to send in to the state allotment board applications for tax exemptions under the Bankhead act, complete for the entire county, were DeWitt, Jim Wells, Lavaca, San Patricio, Fort Bend and Refugio. The board expects to clear exemption certificates for 90 per cent allotments for three of these counties Tuesday in time for farmers to begin Wednesday getting the certificates from the adjustment assistants' offices in the county seats of those counties. To date the board has received 30,000 applications for certificates from 25 counties.

set a 'deadline date' after which no applications may be taken in the county must be careful to ask for a date far enough ahead so that notice of it may be published in the local paper prior to closing the period of taking applications. Mr. Eudaly said. He urged farmers to remember that this is "like a train passing through a station. If you don't get on the train when it stops at your station, you will be left behind, and no one can make the train return for you."

OLDEN

The Olden Methodist church revival services will begin Sunday, Aug. 12. Everyone is cordially invited to attend these meetings. Friends here are sorry to learn that Mrs. Guy Pledger, formerly of Olden but now of Ranger, is quite ill at this time. Jean Adams left Sunday afternoon to accompany her grandmother, Mrs. Cora Adams, and her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Anderson, all of Waurika, Okla., on a vacation trip through South and East Texas. They expected to visit San Angelo, San Antonio, Austin, the lower Rio Grande valley and gulf coast towns before returning to Waurika, where Jean will visit with them until school starts. Mr. and Mrs. Dixie Tade of Stephenville visited the Jack Stephens family here Sunday. Mrs. Will Stephens, who had been visiting here, returned to her home at Stephenville with them. Mary Ford, who has been visiting in Graham, returned last week. Carvis Fuller is on furlough from Randolph Field and is visiting his mother here. Jack Stanton returned from

BEACH CLUB GIRL

CHAPTER I. THE day was gloriously hot. As far as the eye could see baby white clouds scudded across the sky, and the sun shined down on the shaded streets of Larchneck. The houses along the shaded streets of Larchneck were picked out in glare and shadow. Like toy houses out of Bristol board and posed against a back drop in a theater set. Like a girl strolling upon a stage, too, Boots Raeburn seemed so dazzlingly white from her tennis dress to her low-heeled shoes, she came out of the door of No. 88 Poppy Lane and dawdled gracefully toward a roadster waiting under the drooping maple tree.

Even the most casual passerby might have noticed that the girl in the ratty roadster was rarely lovely. The pearl quality of her skin, the depth and setting of her limpid brown eyes, velvet textured, flecked with amber lights, the way her soft fair hair grew and glistened about her brow—all these things marked Boots (christened Barbara) exceptional in a world of beautiful young things. Larchneck's younger set admitted Boots was lovely.

Boots Raeburn

Boots Raeburn was on the platform as she toiled the big, shabby car into place. He climbed in, his old Panama in his hand, and pecked his voice, with its nearest inflections, could be heard from the hallway. "Terrible day!" "Terrible!" Boots agreed brightly. "Want to get in a swim before dinner?" "I don't think so. Too tired." He sighed deeply. Boots was conscious of a momentary and instantly qualified feeling of impatience. Daddy was always tired. If he'd make an effort and go down to the beach, he'd feel better. Thus it observes it.

Boots tossed her golden mane usually, her brown eyes sparkled. She said she was all right. How was he? She climbed into the seat beside him and the motor rumbled alarmingly as the driver shifted into gear. Even the most casual passerby might have noticed that the girl in the ratty roadster was rarely lovely. The pearl quality of her skin, the depth and setting of her limpid brown eyes, velvet textured, flecked with amber lights, the way her soft fair hair grew and glistened about her brow—all these things marked Boots (christened Barbara) exceptional in a world of beautiful young things. Larchneck's younger set admitted Boots was lovely.

and to run the vacuum cleaner, was idly thinking about the future. What should she do when autumn came? Sylvia was going to Bryn Mawr—that was all right. She knew that the family finances would never stand the strain of college. "What's on your mind?" asked the young man in the blue pullover, wheeling his car into a shaded drive where, under drooping maps, a dozen motors of varying shapes and sizes were already parked. Boots smiled, leaping out nimbly. It was not the thing in the crowd to get into the water," she trilled on a merry note. This particular club, the newest and least exclusive of all such organizations bordering the Sound, was a long, low stucco building crowing on the sand. The red roof threw back-dazzling heat rays. Boots and her escort, Johnny Wells, passed through the unpretentious foyer, Johnny throwing a casual "Hiyah!" to the girl at the desk. They crossed a bare and narrow room with a scoured upright piano braced against one wall, went up a brief flight of stairs and nodded to a shock-headed boy in a bathing suit, lifted back in a kitchen chair against a wall board studded with brass-checked keys. "See you later, Boots!"

Johnny took his key and disappeared. Boots her near striped bag under her arm, wandered down the narrow corridor to 101. It was stiflingly hot in the cubicle. All the heat of the July mid-afternoon seemed to be concentrated in this single spot and the girl lost no time divesting herself of her few garments, wriggling into a slender tube of black jersey. Good luck!

BEACH CLUB GIRL

CHAPTER I-A. JOHNNY drove her home again. She found her mother a limp, unattractive woman, early graying hair pulled back from her brow, setting the table. "Didn't Linda come?" "That no-account creature!" Mrs. Raeburn frowned intently, putting a butter knife on a flowered plate. "She called to say she had the backache. But there's a wedding on at the colored church this afternoon. I saw it when I was driving over to the farm for eggs. That's where she is."

Boots dawdled into the kitchen, touching things idly, carrying in a plate of bread dreamily. She had never been taught to do anything around the house. There had been a succession of maids, fat, lean, energetic, lazy, all through her childhood and young girlhood. She knew how to make sandwiches for her tea parties, how to make iced lemonade. Beyond that she spent little time in the kitchen. "Daddy late tonight?" "I don't know. He said he'd call when he got to the station." The Raeburns had an ancient sedan which served as station wagon. "Well, I suppose he'll be fagged out. It must be hot in town," commented the girl absently, choosing a celery tidbit from the relish tray and munching it. "Barbara! You'll ruin your dinner."

Boots, scarcely knowing what she did, extended her hand.

Mrs. Raeburn shrugged shoulders which had once been pretty. "I'm sure I can't imagine." "I don't care how you might wait till we finished. All this rushing about—" He sighed as his wife removed plates, bringing in a crusty, dimpled strawberry shortcake. Boots could be heard from the hallway. "Delighted. So nice of you to want me. At 7:30." She came back, a creature transformed, all her languor gone. "What do you suppose?" She's giving a dinner party at the Yacht Club tomorrow night and wants me. Can't imagine why. "Somebody disappointed at the last minute probably," surmised the mother shrewdly. Boots smiled. "I don't care how or why." She prouetted. "I've been dying to go..." "Your plaid organdie needs pressing," Mrs. Raeburn said mildly. "And your slippers..." "Oh I ought to have new ones," Boots lamented, with a side glance at her father. He was grimly eating the white pyramidal, but seeming to enjoy it. Her mother threw her an alert, warning glance. "Later, as the two women washed up the supper things Mrs. Raeburn said, lower tones: "Better not bother Daddy about new slippers. He's troubled about bills this month. The mortgage payment comes due the 27th, you know."

Boots lifted her brows. Heaven, a person couldn't even mention such a trifle as new shoes in this house without starting something. "It doesn't matter." But she said it moodily. The brown and yellow plaid organdie cried out for new bronze slippers. She had seen the very ones in a shop down in New Martin last week. Only four dollars... at one of the cheap stores. Oh, well. Her old satin ones would simply have to do. SHE wiped the flowered dishes dreamily, staring out over the clipped green of the lawn. Mr. Raeburn had settled himself in his porch rocker by this time. She could hear the pages rattling could hear the squeak of the rockers as he went back and forth. Why was life like this she wondered. Sylvia Rivers had everything—she had only to stretch out her hand and the world was hers. Tomorrow night she, Boots Raeburn, would have to take her dancing steps in old, shabby shoes, while Sylvia quipped it over them all. Hardy included—dressed in the most elegant and expensive raiment. It wasn't fair! "That's all, lovey." Her mother's sympathetic voice showed that the older woman's mood fitted into hers. Boots felt an instant's compunction. Mother worked hard. Things never seemed to break. Just right for her. Daddy was grumpy; there were always money worries. "I'll finish up here," Boots said. She took the slim shoulder, pushed her mother bodily out of the kitchen. Feeling work an outlet for her mood, she switched water in the big pan, wrung out tea towels slotted the old clipped drabboard. Her task completed, she hung the dishcloth upon its hook and put down a saucer of scraps for the big yellow cat that came siddling at that moment through the door opening into the back screened entry. "Nice kitty! Good Timmy!" The cat, arching his back, rubbed

She would marry him. Boots dreamed sitting on the loupotein tray of the kitchen table. She would go to Europe. When she came back one day she would be riding along Beechtree Drive in her second best Lincoln. It would be winter. She would be swathed in fur—rich fur, sleek black cashmere. Her face rosy above a silver mesh collar. She would make a man rather bedraggled young man pushing a perambulator along the walk. Sylvia Rivers! Sylvia married and widowed, penniless now working in the library between whites, to eke out a living. She (Boots) would bow graciously, driving on. "Barbara... Barbara!" Her mother's voice. She came back to reality with a start. "Yes, I'm out here. What is it?" "Daddy and I are going to ride down to the shore and sit on the rocks for a while. It'll be cooler there. Want to come along?" She relinquished her dream. "I think," she said slowly. "I'll wait over to Abby Jane's after a while. You go along." The house was still, dark. Every one else in Larchneck, Boots reflected was out playing; it would never do to let anyone (even the uncritical Abby Jane) know she was "undated" for the evening. In Larchneck, even the youngest and prettiest girls kept up a wild struggle for an appearance of popularity. If you weren't dated you pretended you were to keep face. But Boots was lonely. Abby Jane would be better than no one. But Abby Jane was not at home. The Meriwether house was dark. Next door, at Dr. Harris's, lights burned hospitably in the big, wide windowed rooms. On a sudden impulse Boots turned up the flagged walk. Young Mrs. Hart was very often alone, the doctor out on night calls. She wanted to talk to someone. Lois Hart, tall, red-blond, rather gushing in manner, answered the bell. "Oh come in, dear. I was just poring myself with a detective story out on the side porch—" A roadster cut in out of the gloom just as the two women seated themselves. Lois Hart rose quickly. "That'll be my cousin. Stay and meet him, Boots. He's..." What she said was lost in the sound of steps on the veranda. Boots felt embarrassed. She thought she ought to go. But before she could take flight Lois appeared, a tall stranger at her side. Boots glanced at him curiously. He was surfered a deep brown, his eyes were startlingly deep blue. Boots felt abashed, felt terribly young. "My cousin, Denis Fenway." Boots, scarcely knowing what she did, extended her hand. (To Be Continued)

Louisiana Guard Seizes Vote Roll

Louisiana national guardmen are shown here as they entered the New Orleans vote registration office, seizing the registry rolls, in the war declared by Gov. O. K. Allen and Senator Huey Long on Mayor T. Semmes Walmaley. With martial law in the city, the mayor called out an army of 400 policemen to guard city hall and to repel further militia attacks. Both factions hurl charges of political plotting.

MARATHON WON BUT LOST IN A CLOSE CONTEST

The Marathon team of the Twilight league was unable to put a full team on the field in their game with Magnolia Wednesday afternoon and had to put in several substitutes and forfeit the game. The make-shift team played excellent ball, making but three errors and defeating Magnolia by a score of 5 to 3. Since league rules call for an automatic forfeit in case a team cannot put a full quota of eligible players on the field at gametime, the official score of the game was 7 to 0 in favor of Magnolia.

This is the first time a game had to be forfeited under these conditions, though several teams have had to forfeit at the beginning of a game, but the team to which they forfeited won in the exhibition game and the score as played was counted as the official score of the game.

A break in a pipeline near Gordon, which called out most of the Marathon players, was the reason Marathon was unable to put its team on the field.
