PRICE OF COTTONSEED AT LOCKHART

A Lockhart correspondent is responsible for the following news item: "One year ago cottonseed was selling at $11 a ton. This year on the same date cottonseed was selling at $33 a ton. As a result of the rise in prices paid, both cottonseed hulls and cottonseed meal with advance so that those who keep milk cows in town will be up against a problem as to whether it is cheaper to buy milk and butter or to keep the cow in town."

Milk prices are being hiked the Southwest over. They are being hiked the nation over. There is a reason for it. In Texas at least and the drouth-ridden states from the Rio Grande to North Dakota. Feed crops were almost obliterated. In some of the New England cities milk has been hiked to 14 cents a quart. In the nation over the price varies from 9 cents to 14. Jupiter Pluvius has returned from his vacation during the summer months. Magnificent showers are reported from the Dakotas all down the line to Oklahoma. Perhaps Texas will be given a wet inning in the near future. Drouths come and go just as the fleas and the flies come and go in the summertime.

DELAWARE HAS A SHEEP LAW - WHY NOT TEXAS?

There is something new under the sun. Delaware is the whipping post state. There convicted criminals are bull-whipped on their bare backs. One application is said to be sufficient. Those whipped never return. Delaware has a law requiring truck drivers "to sleep at least eight hours in each 24." Delaware has a state police. They invoked the law against 90 truck drivers in less than 24 hours. This was the punishment: "The drivers took their enforced eight hours rest at police stations."

Delaware is one of the smallest and perhaps most remarkable of all American commonwealths. Many huge as well as minor corporations invade Delaware for their charters. They boycott their own states. Delaware reaps a harvest. Now to protect the public health as well as the health of the truck drivers this sleeping law of the little commonwealth is being enforced to the letter.

In carrying out an advertising campaign it does not pay to "wobble," for if you do you may get for the straight road to success.

Constructive criticism, properly administered, should be accepted always, as it is beneficial to any city or business.

THE AWFUL MORAL EFFECT

BEACH CLUB GIRL

BEGIN HERE TODAY BOOTS BARELY IS 18 and pretty. It is openly avowed by SYLVIA RIVERS, the richest girl in Lockhart, fashionable New York number. Sylvia falls to ask Boots to go to a party at the York Club. Boots accepts a belated invitation from MISS MATHEWMAN, one of the society social lights. HARDY WHITEHEAD, one of Sylvia's guests, who had been drinking over Boots in an embarrassing situation and she is escorted home by MISS LYNX. The malicious Mrs. Fenwick takes this opportunity to hint Boots and her... BOOTS went back to her tasks in a more cheerful frame of mind. But it was lonely the next few days. The telephone rang only once or twice and then it was the cashier at the market, asking for an order. Johnny went to the mountains and Hardy called to say he would be at the family's Maine camp until August. "Oh, well," Boots said, hanging up. "I wouldn't have seen him much anyway. That was just a lark in the pan." When she went to the club she avoided "the gang" coolly. Pride held her back and she imagined slights where slights were not. Hardy wanted to talk to her one day but she brushed him with such a strained and artificial smile that her friend withdrew, feeling inexplicably hurt. She fell into the way of choosing odd hours to swim, times when only "the kids" with their surges were on the sand or old ladies, napping with their crocheting, under the awnings. In this way she came to see rather a lot of Russ. He was always there, big square-shouldered, smiling. He didn't bother her. He talked a little, fragmentary bits of idle conversation, which didn't require an answer and Boots found him oddly restful, sympathetic. His mood fitted hers. She did not realize that the man was watching her keenly, measuring her moods, adapting his stride to hers. She fell into the way of accepting him as a friend, a little something watching for his big smile and his hearty laugh. And it was summer—warm glorious, impetuous summer when young things grew and flourished under the sun and of nights the white moon shone down on a world embroiled with a tapestry of beauty. The blue stalks of delphinium in the garden were ghostly in the moonlight the roses had never seemed so luxuriant. There was sent everywhere—the good smell of earth under swift summer rains the perfume of moonflowers in the dusk. Boots felt it in the open of summer was on the land. Every open car, brimming with light frocks and lighter laughter,

Married Women In the Cities Must Help With Work

LANSING, Mich.—And now statisticians have settled that controversy about the economic need for employing married men in cities! It's simple, they say: "She's to work, or the family goes grey." That is the verdict and G. Tracy, chief statistician of the Michigan Department of Labor and Industry, predicates his answer on figures which he shows the maintenance of the average family in Michigan and the United States always has required more than the earnings of a worker. Tracy, who has just completed a six months' survey, finds that the average weekly living costs the manual worker with a wife and two children (the average American family) is $24.77, the average weekly wage here around $23.09. And these figures include only the "necessaries" life. It is a close shave, then; he says, statisticians conclude the man must either work, or the family will descend into poverty. The only other alternative, higher wages, and that quote opens up anew the whole tangle of American economic life. Tracy's analysis of the $24 weekly living costs breaks down: $7.95 for food; $3.85 for clothing; $5.55 for rent; $9.90 for fuel and light; $1.70 for furnishings; and $5.61 for sundries.

Legions Labor Day Rodeo at Abilene Gets Many Entrants

ABILENE, Tex.—Heavy representation of cowboys who competed in one of America's most famous rodeos, the Pioneer Days events held recently at Cheyenne, is anticipated at the American Legion's fourth annual three-day rodeo beginning Labor Day, Sept. 3, at West Texas Fair Park, Abilene.

Printed prize lists were mailed to the secretary of the Cheyenne show. A letter from the secretary to Harry Schienberg of the Abilene Legion post stated that the lists had been distributed among all of the scores of contestants there.

As a result, and due to the fact that the cash prizes for the three days approximate $2,000, more than double the amount offered last year here, and numerous other awards such as saddles, bridles and boots are being offered, outstanding cowboys of the country have signified their intention of entering the Abilene contests before heading out later in the month with Col. W. T. Johnson's rodeo in Missouri, New York, Boston and Indianapolis.

A further incentive to well known contestants is the signing of Leonard Stroud, former world's champion all-round cowboy and well known rodeo producer, to produce and direct the Abilene rodeo.

Stroud will furnish his entire string of rodeo stock; he likewise will provide the specialty acts, including trick ropers, two men and two women trick riders, a cowboy clown and a high school horse.

Six performances are booked for the rodeo—three afternoon and three night. A barbecue, free to everyone holding an admission ticket, is planned for the second day, Tuesday afternoon.

Contests will be held daily in bronco-riding, steer-riding, bull-dogging, calf-roping, bell calf-roping and scramble.

Telephone Alarm Brought Man a Fine

SHEPHERD, Eng.—Frederick Roadhouse was fined $25 for using the automatic telephone as an expensive alarm clock.

One of Frederick's duties was to wake his employer every morning. His method was to go into a telephone box, insert two pennies and dial his employer's number; this caused the bell in his employer's house to start ringing. Frederick let it ring for a few minutes, and then he pressed button "B," which returned him his pennies.

The police court was full of awed admirers of this simple and yet effective system, but the magistrate fined him for "fraudulently consuming electricity."

Cartier Told Tales of Seeing a Sea Serpent in River

QUEBEC.—The founder of the I-saw-a-sea-serpent club is none other, Canadian archives disclose, than the immortal Jacques Cartier, discoverer of Canada 400 years ago, who dragged the sea serpent across the trans-Atlantic trail in red herring fashion.

Cartier, who is being honored at quadri-centennial celebrations throughout this French Canadian province this summer, had a little matter of explaining to do when he returned to France without the prize he was seeking, a north-west passage to Cathay. So in his writings, a translation of which is preserved in the Canadian collection at the Manoir Richelieu, at Murray Bay, is found his version of the sea serpent he said he saw in the now famed Saguenay river of Quebec.

There are in this river several kinds of fish, shaped like a horse, which go to the land during the night and stay in the water during the day (something the Loch Ness monster has yet to learn), so we were told by our two savages, and we saw a large number of these fish. They have a good body and head like a greyhound, are white as snow, without any mark, and there are a large number in this river.

Cartier's contemporaries forgot Cathay when they sank their speculative teeth into that ancestral sea serpent.
