GOVERNMENT FIGHTING ILLEGAL LIQUOR

The federal government's blow against illegal liquor selling in Texas and other dry states, previously hinted, has fallen.

Every person who has sold, or is selling, liquor in violation of the state law, has been held liable for a $1000 federal excise tax, even though he has secured other required federal permits and paid other taxes; and may become liable also for an additional 25 per cent penalty for failing to make proper returns to the government.

Penalty for failing to pay this $1000 tax is a $100 fine or a year's imprisonment, or both.

The order was announced by the liquor tax unit of the internal revenue bureau of the U. S. treasury department. It was made under the provision of the repeal of the 18th amendment which pledged federal government cooperation to maintaining the laws of dry states.

It was obvious that but few of the numerous small hard-liquor dealers would be able to pay the $1000 excise tax levy. Since sales have been going on more or less openly for several months, it was not known how much evidence federal agents had gathered in preparation for its collection of these taxes.

The order even goes to the extent of levying the $1000 tax on the manufacturer of stills. The tax will be avoided only by showing that the sales have been confined to liquor under the beer and wine amendment, or those dispensed under the medicinal provisions of the Dean law.

SEEKING LEADERSHIP

The Texas Centennial has the opportunity, instead of remaining a $5,000,000 "gimme" grab-bag proposition, to become the sponsor and guiding spirit of a $100,000,000 public development program for the state, the creator of the state's greatest program of advancement and recovery. The suggestion comes from Gov. Ferguson.

If this be Fergusonism, Texas can stand it. Gov. Ferguson has said it will be necessary to call the legislature back to patch up the relief bill, to revive thousands of home loans, to collect taxes, and to create the great work projects of the Brazos and Colorado river development.

The Brazos and Colorado work programs, the governor's office pointed out, would so benefit the state as to make the $5,000,000 Centennial appropriation "fade into insignificance."

That was the cue to the Centennial sponsors. A great Texas development, a giant stride as the state resumes its forward march, a statewide plan of marshaling Texas resources to useful purpose, is the starting point for those who would plan a great Centennial. They must share the task of finding the way to pay for it.

Cotton Board Is Speeding Up Work

COLLEGE STATION.—That 160 Texas counties have received their tax exemption certificates under the Bankhead act was announced by the cotton allotment board after a meeting held at the end of the week. A total of 333,430 applications have been received from 216 counties. Among the counties which have already received their certificates, totaling 189,818 are all the larger cotton producing counties in the state, members of the board said.

While the board was in session a request came from one of the news wire services to estimate the probable loss to Texas if the Bankhead act is discontinued in 1935. In reply the board pointed out that the Texas 1934 quota of tax exempt cotton is 3,237,000 bales; that the bureau of crop estimates has placed the 1934 Texas crop at 2,385,000 bales, which leaves Texas with an excess of 854,000 bales for which there is tax exemption but no cotton. Such tax exemption certificates have a sale value of approximately $20 per bale, the board stated, and the total possible loss to the state, therefore, if the Bankhead act is discontinued and holders of these certificates are not allowed to realize on them is approximately $17,000,000.

This loss, the board estimated, will fall first of all on the cotton grower already hard hit by the drought, whose certificate in its sales value was a measure of crop insurance. It will fall next on the business interests of the state because the farmer would have spent his money for commodities. And in the third place it will fall proportionately on all tax payers because the hard hit man and his family will be the sooner be on public relief.

The board commented also on the falling off of the cotton market due in part, according to cotton exchange reports in current newspapers, to the conference in Washington and the published statement by Senator Bankhead in relation to suspending the operation of the act. The loss on a single day amounted to $7,500,000.

Lumberjacks" to Have a Part In Tyler Rose Festival

TYLER.—The famous "Lumberjacks Band" from the Stephen F. Austin State Teachers College at Nacogdoches will have a prominent place in the mammoth floral parade of the East Texas Rose Festival here next month, it was announced today.

The parade, which festival association officials say will be "the most spectacular event of its kind ever staged in 'East Texas'" will be on the morning of Oct. 12, second day of the festival.

The "Lumberjacks Band," made up of more than 40 musicians from the college, has built up an enviable reputation throughout the state through numerous appearances at conventions and public gatherings. Garbed in attractive uniforms, the band presents a striking appearance and invariably proves a strong drawing card on any program.

Oil Men to Hold Annual Meeting In Dallas Nov. 12

DALLAS, Oct. 2.—The American Petroleum Institute this year will hold its annual convention in Texas, home of the greatest oil field in the country and producer of 50 per cent of the nation's crude petroleum.

With the session in Dallas, Nov. 12 to 15 close by the famed East Texas pool, A. P. I. officials look for a record-breaking attendance. Already more than 1,300 hotel rooms have been reserved with promise of others to come.

Between discussions of the oil problems of today, visitors to the convention will be offered opportunity to see in person the field which produces more than 400,000 barrels of oil daily and which, if unleashed, spew forth more than 10,000,000 barrels an hour.

The exact beginning of the oil industry in Texas is a point of dispute. Existence of petroleum in the state has been known since long before the Civil war. Indians would gather at seep holes to roll in the "sour dirt" in the belief it would cure their ills. Whether wells were drilled to tap its under-surface source cannot definitely be certified.

Even among Texans there is disagreement. Tell an old settler of Nacogdoches county that the first well in Texas and the southwest was drilled at Corsicana and he will say you are still wrong.

The first Texas oil well was drilled in 1858, the old timers say, and some of them even insist on 1836, antedating the famous Drake well at Titusville, Pa., by 23 years. More evidence they will give you their word and the word of their fathers, backed by a tour of the hallow field whose existence seems always to have been known. It may be that the true birthplace of the oil industry in Texas still never be determined. Successive discoveries of oil in the state have clouded the traditional tales. Each discovery clouds them more. So much stress has been placed upon development that the beginning is erased—perhaps forever.

But Petroleum problems have not disappeared with the years. Even as half the nation's crude oil gushes from Texas wells, so many of the petroleum problems do also. It is to them, perhaps, more than to history, that the American Petroleum Institute will turn attention in November.

Twelve Arabian nautch girls have been signed for atmospheric sequences in Paramount's "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," now in production with Gary Cooper, Francis Tone and Richard Cromwell.

BEACH CLUB GIRL

MISS FLORIDA came to the dining room window. "Telephone," she called excitedly. Miss Florida expected thrills these days every time the "phone rang. "After Mrs. Raeburn's wonderful luck," she was fond of saying impulsively, "I say you never know what may happen next."

It was Edward calling. His voice sounded rather odd, Boots thought. Was she surely coming in for lunch, he wanted to know? "But I told him I'd be there," the girl murmured to herself, going on up the stairs. "Wonder what's the matter? His voice had the most curious note in it."

Miss Florida, observing her at length, told herself you couldn't figure out these modern girls. There was Barbara, cool as a cucumber and walking off with that grand catch tomorrow. And married once before, too, and widowed. Well, you just didn't know what went on inside their minds, they took everything as it came.

Boots touched her lips with a bright smile and rubbed some of it into her cheeks. She was so thin—pale, too. Edward would think he was seeing a ghost. She had a new blue taffeta frock with the primest and quaintest deep shoe collar and a blue coat of dull wool and a wide-brimmed hat to go with it. Edward wouldn't be ashamed of her.

He was waiting in the hotel foyer and rose as she approached, leaning on his cane. Why, everything was all right, she told herself, smiling back at him. She had been imagining things; his smile was just the same.

They ordered the room was crowded. Edward had nodded to half a dozen people. Curious eyes had observed the girl with him. "Tomorrow they'll know about us," Boots thought. She had insisted upon keeping the engagement secret all this time. "It will be time enough to make announcements when the marriage is a fact," she had explained to her rather surprised family.

"You look mighty sweet. Beautiful." "Thanks. How's the limp?" "Oh, I just keep the stick to get a little sympathy." He gave her his own engaging, white-toothed grin. "Look, darling, I've got something I want to show you."

Without warning, without preamble he put a square white envelope into her hands. She took it, slipped out the sheet within, read. Her eyes darkened; a slow flush crept over her face. With trembling hands she replaced it. "Which means exactly—what?"

THERE was a melancholy rallery in his smile now. It was as if his suspicions had been confirmed. "Denis left it in some books he sent me the day he left—quite by accident, I'm sure," he explained painstakingly. "I just found it yesterday."

"I don't know—I give you my word I don't know a thing about it, Edward." She was very pale now. The brief spots of rouge were like flower petals on the transparency of her cheeks. "Come closer, woman! No matter how serious he was, Edward talked the jargon of his generation. You never let anyone see you were hurt in Edward's simple code. You took your blows standing. "Honestly, honestly . . ." But

Investigations are made by case workers directly in the home of the applicant and each family on relief in rechecked every two weeks by case workers calling on a client. Each family receives relief to the extent of their budgetary needs as approved by the case worker. Whenever a person is on relief if they are on any work project the compensation is given in cash. If they are on direct relief it is in orders for groceries, clothing, and general necessities. Farmers on relief are handled in the same manner as others. A person who owns property but is out of a job is eligible for relief assistance. When workers are paid cash it is their money to do with as they will, but if they are on direct relief there is a rule that to attend places of amusement, etc., that they will be cut from the rolls. About 72 per cent of those on relief will be in position to do useful work when such is available. All efforts are being made to reduce relief expenditures Mr. Driskill stated. Based on a population of 34,100 inhabitants with 9,531 now on the relief rolls of Eastland county there is 26.24 per cent of the total now on direct and work relief Mr. Driskill concluded his remarks with an urgent appeal for all civic organizations to do everything possible to encourage and stress projects for their respective communities and especially Eastland in order that direct relief can be reduced to work relief. "Chained" One of Outstanding Films

Clarence Brown, who is known in Hollywood as the director who has never made an unsuccessful picture, comes through with flying honors again with his production of "Chained," the new Joan Crawford-Clark Gable co-starring vehicle which opened yesterday at the Arcadia theatre.

Lavishly mounted, beautifully photographed and acted to perfection, the new picture holds all the elements of skillfully thought-out screen entertainment, enhanced by the romantic excitement which a story involving the glamorous Miss Crawford and the popular Mr. Gable always gives.

The reliable Otto Kruger makes the most of his part as the unwanted man, and excellent support is given by Stuart Erwin, Una O'Connor and Marjorie Gateson. You will find "Chained" unbeatable entertainment. It is a picture that many filmgoers will want to see twice. "Chained" closes its local run at the Arcadia today.

little farther into their financial situation.

"They desire to complete the building if there is any possible way of their doing so, however, the board expressed itself that it did not want to embarrass your department in the least by being dilatory in carrying out their plans, but some matters had arisen over which they had no control and advised this office to ask you to be as lenient as possible in this matter until they can see just a little farther ahead and they will either advise you to cancel the project or will arrange their finances so as to keep the job going."

In order to aid in the project P. A. Rineold has suggested that the school board meet and call upon the entire community to help them from loaning the project entirely. It was pointed out that the delay on this project was also affecting all other projects here and that concerted action on it would be necessary in order that Ranger would not suffer.

At a recent meeting the construction committee, consisting of school workers, electricians, heating engineers and foremen met and drew up a petition in which they agreed to accept pay at the rate of 75 cents an hour and to give back one-fourth of this amount toward the completion of the auditorium.

Those who signed the petition, which contains the names of 12 carpenters, eight painters, three cement and plaster workers and one hoist engineer, one electrician and one foreman, were:

on the defense, got slugged in the eye and had one optic closed, with a big cut over it. He could not see the plays well enough from end, so was switched to tackle. Moore says he has never seen a high school tackle play like Britt did. He charged in on every play, taking out anywhere from two to five men, and leaving the ball carrier wide open for the ends or the linebackers to get. That was one reason the Lubbock backfield was having so much trouble getting away for long gains. They picked up a few yards on almost every try and the line backers would get them.

But one man cannot play all the line positions, and since the rest of the line was not playing hard and was not charging, but was waiting for the Wetteners to charge them, it was impossible to stop them.

As we have often remarked, we do not know a lot about football. We like to watch the game and usually tell who has won when the game was over, so we are not an authority by any means. But it seems to us that the Bulldogs have been woefully weak on blocking. Of course we have seen them in only one game, but in that one there was not enough blocking done to cause one to write letters home about it.

Probably these little defects, if they are such, will be ironed out before the conference season opens.

Only a small part of the squad was out for practice yesterday, with a good many of the regulars falling to show up for one reason or another. Jacoby was out, leaning on a cane, and took in the skull practice and followed the team around some. We failed to see Payton and Agnew suited out and Love was also on the sidelines, with a boil on the back of the neck. He also got in on the skull practice session. Four regulars out makes a lot of difference, too.
