KEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

with BILL MAYES

He often thought that too credit is given to the pitcher and the quarterback in ball if his team wins. We heard several arguments on this line recently, too. For instance, in baseball, the pitcher tosses the ball and puts a line over the heart of the plate. Joe McSwatt, that he intended to go over the outside corner, is Joe's weakness. It was a mistake. Joe gets a toehold on what probably should have been a triple. But Joe is in center field, makes a running, one-handed catch, convert into an out. Then he Bingle slaps out what he is a single. Bill Snatch, at the plate, makes a beautiful play, goes up another almost impossible and shoots it to first all the same motion and catches it by inches. Then up comes Slugg. He hits out a line that the right fielder catches and the pitcher is praised for a hitless inning and gets graphs in the writup of the men, in football, John Speed, quarterback, takes the ball on an 40-yard line, cuts through the secondary and slips by the goal line for the going touchdown. But what actually happened. He took the play. Then the line got so hard it jarred them back their heels. But they kept driving. They opened up a hole that Sanda Squere, despite his 80-odd years, could have run through for four or five yards. He goes through and takes one of the secondary defense. The other end does something about the same way, and there is no one to stop the quarter. He just has to carry the ball and run 60 yards, which is great feat. He doesn't have any pound tackle to knock out of way, he doesn't even have a pound halfback to jar clear of the play. All he has to do to carry a ball, weighing practically nothing, and let the rest of the team do the heavy work.

Yet the quarter who made the gets all the glory, does little, any of the work, while the ones who really made the play possible almost unnoticed. We say almost, because the coach and some of the fans who have played football, especially in the line, know what really happened. Even on a field goal the same is true. The kicker gets the praise. But the center had to take a perfect passback. The line had to hold, and then hold some. The man holding the ball had to get it at exactly the right angle. The other backs had to get out any ends, tackles or what you call that might rush the kicker. All the kicker has to do is kick a gentle kick, right on the line, and let it sail through the uprights. Let a quarterback try to run 60 yards without any help and where would he go? Or just give the kicker the ball and let the opposition try to keep him from kicking the goal and where would he get the answer is obvious, but that the quarterback who made the run and

GLAMOROUS NOME LAID DESOLATE BY FIRE

A picture of utter desolation is Nome, Alaska, once thriving and colorful center of the Yukon gold rush, now laid waste by a fire which took a toll variously estimated at from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000. This picture shows all that is left of the once prosperous town. Nearly the entire business section is gone, only the government wireless station, a hotel, a hospital, a warehouse and scattered homes remain. With winter closing in, the few remaining inhabitants are threatened with lack of food and shelter.

Carl Jansing, New Montgomery Ward Manager On Job

Carl Jansing from Huntsville, Ala., arrived in Ranger late Saturday and Monday morning took over his new duties as manager of the Montgomery Ward local store in Ranger. Mrs. Jansing and the infant son of the new store manager accompanied Mr. Jansing on the overland trip to Ranger and will establish their home as soon as possible. At present they are staying in a local hotel until they can secure a suitable home.

Mr. Jansing, who has been manager of the local Ward store for the past two years. Mr. Fesmire was transferred Monday morning to take over his duties as manager of the store.

Mr. Jansing, when interviewed today, said that he had been in Fort Worth for a few days some time ago, and that he had a short stay there and his reception in Ranger had thoroughly convinced him that he was going to like Texas, and especially Ranger.

"I have known several people in Huntsville," Mr. Jansing said, "who had lived in Texas. They were unanimous in their opinion that I would like it here right from the start, and that the longer I remained the better I would like it. Mr. Fesmire also assured me that I would find Ranger a wonderful place to live, because the people are so friendly, and said that should I be transferred I would likely hate to leave just as badly as he did."

Before leaving for Sherman Mr. Fesmire said that he never hated to leave a town as badly as he hated to leave Ranger, but that he was glad to get an opportunity of advancement.

T. H. Chaffin, an employee of the local store, is expecting to leave Friday for Corpus Christi, which will be his headquarters for a time, at least, as he has been promoted to the position of merchandise checker over a large district.

MAN ADMITS BURNING GIRL IN A FURNACE

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Oct. 15.—Lawrence Stone, 24, today signed a confession that he killed five-year-old Jean Costigan in the basement of a fashionable apartment house and stuffed her body into the white-hot firebox of the furnace.

The child's body was found yesterday. It had been reduced to charred bones and would have been consumed entirely if the discovery had been delayed five minutes.

After nine hours of questioning, Stone confessed he had put the child's body in the furnace, believing her dead at the time. He had been playing with her rubber ball in the basement he said. He threw it and it struck her head. He said she dropped heavily, her head hitting the concrete floor. Panic-stricken, he took her, he carried the body around several minutes, then thought of the furnace.

Bruno Hauptmann Claims An Alibi

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Bruno Hauptmann, pale but composed, swore in supreme court today that he was with his wife in Bronx county on the night of the Lindbergh kidnaping and murder.

The suspect in the Lindbergh case, fighting extradition to New Jersey on murder charges, spoke in a thin, sometimes quavering voice when he appeared as his own star alibi witness.

His wife, Anna, a few minutes earlier, had sworn that Hauptmann took her home from the Bronx bakery, where she worked, on the night of the kidnaping.

The miners, demanding higher wages, threatened to cut off the ventilating fans and kill themselves, or stop the pumps and drown.

HOPES HELD FOR SAFETY OF MRS. A. STOLL

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 15.—Hopes for the safety of Mrs. Alice Stoll, kidnaped society beauty, were revived today as the "zero hour" for word from her abductor approached.

George Stoll, brother of the 30-year-old millionaire husband of the victim, appeared more hopeful today than at any time since the young wife was taken from a sick bed last Wednesday, beaten and carried away.

He spoke eagerly of the approaching "zero hour" which will be reached at 4:20 p. m. today. At that time the five-day period mentioned in the ransom note will have elapsed.

Harold Nathan, in charge of the force of federal agents searching the Kentucky hills, spoke of "when she is returned."

The restored spirits of the Stoll family and authorities, contrasted with their despair of yesterday, gave rise to the report that a new contact had been established with the kidnapers.

There were no statements to support the conclusion, however.

The original ransom note, a typewritten message left in the Stoll home Wednesday, said the kidnapers would contact Mrs. Stoll's husband in five days.

Former Premier of France Is Dead

PARIS, France, Oct. 15.—Raymond Poincaré, France's wartime president, died today.

He had been in ill health since he resigned his third tenure of office as premier in 1929, but death came swiftly. It was announced yesterday he was slightly ill. Last night he slept fitfully, became worse around midnight, and died at 4 a. m. today.

The death of Poincaré, called the savior of the franc for his stabilization of the currency when he was called as prime minister for the third time in 1926, deprived France of a second great statesman within a week.

Youth Has Its Day In Court

"You'd scarce expect one of my age to speak in public..." in court. But there were Billy Lee Schencker and Virginia Weidler, big as life, clutching their new movie contracts. Judge Marshall F. McComb of Los Angeles superior court had just given his judicial approval of their contracts, which accounts for the proud and triumphant pose of the youngsters.

ANALYSIS OF RANGER WATER SHOWS IT IS STILL GOOD

Because of persistent rumors which have been heard around Ranger concerning the condition of the city water and the water supply on hand in Hagaman lake, the city commission sent two samples of water to the state department of health at Austin for analysis, in order to have a thorough check on the other reports received when the water has been analyzed.

One sample sent out was of raw water, as taken directly from the lake, and the other was of treated water, taken from the water supply system of the city.

After the analysis was completed the report was sent back to the city secretary from the state chemist, stating that both samples of water were free from bacteria. Both cards, containing the reports, were stamped "Good. No contamination."

These two cards, which show the report on the condition of the water, are in the office of the city secretary, and the public is invited to stop by the office and see them at any time.

A check on the amount of water being used at this time shows that less water is now being consumed than during the summer months, and based on the present consumption the water supply in the lake is enough to last until April 1, 1935, Roy Jamison, city secretary, stated today, even if there was not a single rain on the watershed.

Group Asks Hearing On Bread Request From Control Board

AUSTIN, Oct. 15.—A crowd of 125 men and women demanding "bread" from the state board of control surged into the state capitol this afternoon.

Others kept arriving singly and by small groups. By 2 p. m. it was estimated more than 200 were in the corridor leading to the board of control office.

M. A. Gary, Baptist pastor, became spokesman for the group. He with two others, was admitted to the board of control office for a conference with board members.

Rangers and capitol watchmen took up places about the corridor. "Don't worry. We are not going to start a disturbance," group leaders said. "We just want a hearing."

PROPOSAL IS MADE TO LIMIT SESSION TIME

Only One Committee Report on Bills Is Ready For Session Monday Morning

AUSTIN, Oct. 15.—The 1936 Texas centennial hung in the balance today as legislators raised the question if it should not be postponed.

In the senate a proposal to limit the time was denounced by centennial advocates as an indirect attempt to delay centennial action until the Alfred administration begins.

The house heard a direct proposal to postpone the centennial until a more proper time. The proposal, offered by resolution, was referred to the state affairs committee without debate. The house cut short a proposal to limit the session by tabling the adjournment resolution. The senate also voted down a resolution to adjourn Oct. 25.

A bill to appropriate $8,792,174 for the centennial celebration was offered in the senate by George Fari of Dallas.

In the house the Brazos river bill was found to be the only one reported out by a committee. It could not be taken up because it has not been on members' desks long enough, so with only a half hour session the house adjourned until Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Al Capone today lost probably his last plea for liberty from the federal penitentiary, where he is serving 10 years of the 11 years of sentence imposed on him in Chicago for failing to pay his income taxes.

The supreme court, to which the premier of Chicago gangdom carried his fight for release, turned a deaf ear to his habeas corpus fight which was begun while Capone was still in Atlanta penitentiary and which he lost in two lower courts.

MANY ARE BOUND DOWN BY A VICIOUS SYSTEM

One of the hardest things to do, in trying to assess the rights and wrongs of a tangled social order, is to apportion the blame properly between individuals and the system under which they live.

It is hard to stay indignant at an abstraction. We like to personalize our antagonisms. A human target is the first thing our anger requires.

If things are going badly, it is much easier to take it out on John Jones or Bill Smith than it is to center our wrath on society as a whole.

You get an illustration of this in a paragraph in a recent issue of "Advance," the national weekly of the Congregational and Christian churches.

In this magazine a correspondent suggests that the church too often fails to make its criticism of current ills specific. Why, he asks, should not the church put aside its fine statements of general principles and come out, for instance, in open denunciation of a vestryman who hires girls in his factory for $10 a week?

And the editor of the magazine suggests that this question is not quite as simple as it looks.

"There are circumstances," he remarks, "where the employer and the manufacturer are the victims of a competitive system quite as much as the worker."

"It is one thing to demand that Mr. X, a vestryman, should pay his employes a living wage. It is another thing to enable him to do so against the competition of unscrupulous employers who have no ideals, either decently pagan or Christian, in their business enterprises."

Now this point, it seems to us, is worth emphasizing.

It is too easy to forget that under any competitive system all players are bound by the general rules of the game. These rules, the pressure of competition being what it is, frequently lead to bad conditions.

Our respected vestryman may indeed pay his employes less than a living wage—but all too often his sole alternative is to go out of business altogether, in which case his employes would get no wages whatever.

In such case it is worse than useless to get vexed at Mr. X. If we are going to insist that even the humblest worker is entitled to a living wage, our proper point of attack is the system which makes low wages necessary—not the individual through whom the system must operate.

Every corporation requires an annual or semi-annual audit of its books and sends a copy to its stockholders. Every well managed city should have an audit of its books at least once a year and publish it in local newspapers so the citizens may know the condition of their city.

The man who knocks his own home city is a pest. He should either become a home town booster or be boosted out.

Some men wear long suffering faces all the time.

Young Frenchman Not Sure Whether It Was a Holdup

DALLAS, Oct. 15.—Claud Rigo, 19-year-old Frenchman from Lille, didn't know whether it was southern hospitality or a holdup. He didn't like it, though, whatever it was. Two men grabbed hold of his arms as he strolled along a lonely street here on the evening of his arrival and tried to pull him off into a vacant lot. "Maybe they were just trying to be friendly," he said, "but I took no chances. I just took a swing at one of the fellows, and both of them took to their heels." The aggressive young Frenchman was making a trip through North and South America with Hubert Fauchille, a cotton importer of Lille. They visited all the important cities in the United States and Canada and were en route to South America when Rigo was introduced to America's twilight profession of handistry. Once in Africa and once in England, he had similar experiences, Rigo recalled. He did not say whether he "swung" then. Rigo, whose parents are in the printing business, was educated in England but found the "King's English" was confined largely to the king's domain. "Chicago English is the worst of all for me to understand," he said. "I had to bally well scam trout suits." Wonder at the congestion of American cities when so much open country lay idle was expressed by Rigo. "I should think you would welcome the chance to scatter to the rural districts," he commented.

Breckenridge School Girl Gets Big Thrill

By United Press BRECKENRIDGE, Texas, Oct. 15.—Betty June Hickey, fifth grade student, has had the thrill of a lifetime—riding to school in a big limousine with the famous screen star, Mary Pickford. And it came about in a most surprising and unusual manner. Betty June was walking to school one day when a large automobile stopped beside her. Despite the forewarnings of her father, Deputy Sheriff Ray Hickey, the girl could not resist the temptation to get into the shining car. "I don't suppose you know what I am," said a beautiful lady beside whom Betty June sat. "Well, you look like Mary Pickford," Betty June replied. "Well, I am," the screen star told the bewildered but fascinated school girl. Miss Pickford was en route to the Pacific coast by automobile. The cost of living took a drop for a short while recently, so ask your wife what she did with the money she saved by it.

The Clew of the Forgotten Murder

BEGIN HERE TODAY
When DAN BLEEKER, junior publisher of The Blade, learns that CHARLES MORDEN, police reporter, has been mysteriously killed he determines to employ SHIRLEY GRIFF, famous criminologist, to solve the murder. Morden had been assigned to learn all he could about FRANK B. CATHAY, wealthy and prominent, who had threatened to sue The Blade because the newspaper reported Cathay had been arrested. Later it was proven that the man arrested, giving the name of Cathay and accompanied by a girl called MARY BRIGGS, was an impostor. MRS. CATHAY assures Bleeker her husband will drop the charges if The Blade publishes a retraction, and this is done.

Mary Briggs, "mystery gal," wanted for questioning concerning the death of Charles Morden.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER X
BLEEKER looked across at Griff. "Well," he said, "you've got quite a reputation for getting results. I'm not going to worry about methods, those are up to you. What you want us to do is to try to find Mary Briggs—which we're already doing—and on the disappearance cases involving some woman who has disappeared within the last 48 hours." "Correct," said Griff. "The first thing to do is to locate the girl. And in the meantime I will see the doctor in Riverview who thinks it's a poison case and will also interview Mrs. Cathay." Bleeker showed some surprise. "I thought you wanted us to make all the contacts," he said. "No," Griff told him. "I want you to get the facts. I'm a criminalologist, not a detective. I don't go out and gather facts but I want to contact the principals. I want to watch them talk." Bleeker smiled and said, "You mean listen to them talk." "No," Griff replied. "I want to watch them talk. I've found out you can learn more about a person's character by watching his lips than by talking than in any other way." Bleeker looked thoughtful, slowly nodded his head. Griff scribbled a number on a sheet of paper which he tore from his notebook. "That," he said handing the paper to Bleeker, "is the private, unlisted telephone number which is assigned to you for the life of this case. Give that number only to the man who are in your closest confidence. Don't ever try to call me on any other telephone. When this case is over that number will be changed." Bleeker folded the paper thoughtfully. "There's something I'd like to ask you about." "What is it?" "Around 12 o'clock on Monday night, the night our newspaper pulled its honor by mistaking the impostor for Cathay—a detective by the name of Shillingby was murdered. A man by the name of Decker was apparently the only eyewitness to that murder. He told his story to the police officer who first appeared on the scene and promised that he would be available whenever he was needed as a witness. There was a lot of confusion. Decker took advantage of it and disappeared. Later on you telephoned the police that Decker had come to you."

"The death of Mr. Frank B. Cathay. He died yesterday afternoon, I believe." "That is correct. May I ask just what is the nature of your interest in the case Mr. Griff?" "I am investigating it." "You said that before." "I am seeking information." "For whom?" Griff smiled and shook his head. Dr. Cooper's eyes became more thoughtful. "I can tell you," said Sidney Griff, "what I want to find out and that's all." "And I," Dr. Cooper said, "can tell you nothing." "Even in the interests of justice, Doctor, you cannot discuss a case?" "When I have been employed to treat a person," Dr. Cooper said, "I can tell no one what I have discovered in connection with my treatment, save the properly constituted authorities, and only then when I am subpoenaed as a witness, and even under those circumstances I would not be free to divulge any matters of professional confidence that is any communications which were made to me by my patient." GRUFF watched the man narrowly, his eyes level-lidded in thoughtful concentration and focused upon Dr. Cooper's mouth. "Only Doctor, matters which were necessarily communicated to you in connection with the diagnosis and treatment, isn't that correct?" "That is technically correct. Such matters as were communicated to me by my patient, for the purpose of assisting me in making a diagnosis, or giving treatment. But you will understand my own judgment upon those matters is final. In other words, the law allows my own conscience to be the sole judge of what is and what is not a professional confidence." "The best might be removed from your lips by the surviving representatives of the dead man?" asked Griff. "I believe not. It is a personal and privileged communication." Griff extended his hand, and after a moment's doubtful delay, Dr. Cooper took it. "I am," said Griff, "very pleased to have made your acquaintance and very grateful for the information you have given me." Dr. Cooper's eyes widened in surprise. "But I have given you none," he said. "Griff's smile was one of calm amusement. "Oh, yes you have, Doctor. You've told me, not in so many words, but in between the lines, so to speak, a very important fact." "What fact?" Dr. Cooper demanded truculently. "That competent legal counsel has seen fit to see to it you were properly and forcefully coached upon the law of privileged communications made by a patient to a physician. Good morning, Doctor." And the criminologist left a slightly confused, very much annoyed doctor staring at him. (To Be Continued)

They will wrestle for the best two-out of three falls, with a two-hour time limit.

The second set to will see Jimmie Murphy, 155-pound wild Irishman from Detroit, pitted against Buck Carroll of Santa Fe, N. M. Both these men have appeared in the local arena, and both made good impressions on the fans. They will be well matched and the outcome of the match is considered a toss-up.

Natural Resources Of State to Attract Centennial Visitors

DALLAS, Tex.—The tremendous natural resources of Texas, generally, even in sections other than those immediately adjacent to such points as San Antonio, Houston, Galveston, Brenham, Nacogdoches, Huntsville and Dallas, which are planning co-ordinated celebrations of the State's Centennial of independence will attract attention of visitors to those events in 1936. Texans themselves realize that a hundred years has given much to the understanding of men, relatives to the visible and the unrevealed natural resources of this or any other State.

About 1850, a party of some eight or ten United States soldiers became lost on the high plains above the cap rock in West Texas, and died of thirst at a point southwest of Lubbock. The location has been designated as being on the New Mexico-Texas boundary line, not far from Brownfield.

At the spot where these soldiers are reported to have died—in a sandy and shinnery-spotted region—they could have excavated with their own hands for no more than ten feet into the sand to tap an inexhaustible supply of pure artesian water.

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

Which all leads up to this: The game is not written up as it should be, nor is it likely to be on many occasions, because the sports writers have to watch the ball more than the line. They have to chronicle what transpired, but they can't see it all, by any means. Things get in a muddle in the line, but everyone can see the man carrying the ball and a good part of the blocking, if he looks for it closely enough, but the line work and the blocking is so fast it is often almost impossible to tell just what did happen.

There was never a one-man football team, and never will be. But there have been many 11-man teams, with one getting all the glory.

The line, therefore, is probably more important than the backfield, because without a line even an All-American halfback could gain little against a Class B high school team.

Did some coach say, or did we just imagine it, that if he was given a good line he could produce a good team? If any coach didn't say that he overlooked a good bet.
