MAN HELD IN THE JUNE ROBLES KIDNAP CASE

MAN IS KILLED AS HE HOPPED FREIGHT TRAIN

T. G. Sanders of Fort Worth was instantly killed in Ranger about 4:30 Tuesday afternoon when he attempted to board a fast-moving Texas & Pacific freight train at the Main street crossing.

The man apparently missed his footing and slipped under the train, which ran over his body, cutting him completely in two near the waist.

A man who was with Sanders was reported to have been heard by witnesses of the accident to tell him not to try to board the train, as it was moving too fast, but he paid no attention and made a run for the freight as it pulled out of the Ranger yards.

Funeral services for the decedent are to be held Thursday morning at Kopperl, in Bosque county. The accident victim is survived by his widow, Mrs. T. G. Sanders of Fort Worth; his mother, Mrs. T. Sanders of Fort Worth; two others, W. F. Sanders of Tyler and G. L. Sanders of Fort Worth, and two sisters, Mrs. A. G. McCullars of Fort Worth and Mrs. Mary McDowell of Fort Worth.

Funeral Is Held For John Franklin Hall

Funeral services for John Franklin Hall, 63, who died at a Ranger hospital Tuesday afternoon, were conducted at the First Christian church of Ranger Wednesday afternoon, with Rev. H. B. Johnson in charge, assisted by Rev. K. C. Edmonds. Interment was in the Straun cemetery following the church services in Ranger.

SAYS ROBINSON SHOT SELF AS SHE LOOKED ON

Weeps As She Tells Of The Shooting of Gorman Man Last Year.

Choking back tears, wiping her eyes, clogged with tears, Mrs. Mae King today in 91st district court told jurors that Leon Robinson shot himself and that she shot herself twice after the former had killed himself. Mrs. King is charged with the murder of Leon Robinson, allegedly shot and killed in Gorman on the night of Nov. 13.

When questioned today by defense attorney Judkins she related that she had come to Desdemona from Ohio in 1919 and met Robinson in 1924 when she was returning from a trip to Fort Worth. She said she arrived at the station late and that Robinson offered to take her home because otherwise she would have had to wait several hours for a train to her destination. She stated that it "was a case of love at first sight."

Once the woman said, Robinson was mad at her because he considered she was trifling with him. He came to Desdemona and the pair drove off. He showed her a new rope with which he claimed he was to use in hanging himself, the woman said. When they got to a field out of Desdemona she claimed that when Robinson was in the car, she noticed him acting differently, made another and chased her when she ran. She fainted, and woke up in the man's lap several hours later, she claimed. A reconciliation was made between them after that, Mrs. King stated.

Her husband, R. A. King, was in attendance at the trial and sat beside her during court hours. On Armistice night of 1933 Mrs. King stated on the stand, she was arrested by Robinson, dragged through the streets, her clothing was torn, shoe left on the street, and finally taken to jail. After several hours, she stated, she was released.

On the night of Nov. 13, she came to town, Mrs. King said, with the intention of seeing other officers and the mayor of Gorman in order to see what could be done about Robinson's cruel treatment toward her.

Defeating Depression Is Complicated Task

Getting Bill Smith through the depression does more than any other single government undertaking to reveal the astounding and perplexing contradictions involved in our effort to get back to good times.

Bill Smith, let us say, is an Arkansas cotton grower; a tenant farmer who has always rented his land. Last year the depression got him right down to the bottom of the barrel. He couldn't rent his farm any more and he couldn't get a job.

He had a wife and five children. The sum total of his worldly goods was a flock of 17 chickens.

Like others in such circumstances, he went on relief. The other day, his family was one of 15 similar families established on a tract of 16,500 acres of government land in northeast Arkansas.

There was a house all ready for Bill Smith; a nice, attractive little cottage, with electric lights, running water, and so on. Back of it and the other houses stretched the 16,500 acres of government land, all grown up with trees.

The scheme is this: Thirty acres are allotted to Bill Smith. He will clear them this winter, the relief administration furnishing him with anything he lacks. Some of this he will pay for with his labor, helping to grade the roads, build a community house, erect bridges, etc.

He spent the summer on a tract the government rented for him, and raised enough foodstuffs to live on all winter until he gets his new land cleared and planted.

He also earned enough to buy a mule, a cow, some more chickens, and a few other things he needed. Now consider what is being done here.

A very worthy end is being attained. Bill Smith, together with hundreds like him, is being made self-supporting. He is regaining his hope and happiness.

There may be some victims of the depression who would like to see our government torn down and replaced by some ism or other, but he isn't one of them.

But look at the contradictions. At a time when the government pays men to reduce cotton production, here is new land being put into the growing of cotton. Marginal farm land is being retired—and here is a new stretch being opened. Forest conservation is being stressed—and here a forest is being cut down.

What's the answer? Heaven only knows. It is contradictory and illogical—and we can't help doing it.

We must get Bill Smith through the depression—even if, by doing so, we raise questions for which we have not the shadow of answer.

'Dusting the Covers of Texas History'

Gold miners swept down on the Spaniards from the snow-capped mountains at Tigra that winter of 1540-1541 when Coronado and his men were encamped there. The small houses of mud and stones seemed as though they would be blown apart by the next mad gale. Sleet fell, and dreary days of drizzling rain came. Added to the misery of the climate was the diminishing food supply, the Indians revolted.

Coronado had feared that it would be difficult to keep on peaceful terms with the Indians, and he was not greatly surprised when suppressed anger finally broke out in warfare. The fight was rather severe. Some of the Indians were shot by Spanish; some were drowned in the icy waters of the Rio Grande as it swirled on its downward course.

The one terrible blot of Spanish explorations happened during the uprising. A captive Indian had been promised freedom, but the captain of the attacking party was not aware of the promise. Therefore, cruel as it was, for punishment the captive was ordered to die at the stake as a warning to neighboring tribes not to begin any quarrels. Although Coronado tried to reconcile himself and his men with the Indians through various gestures of friendship, he never again had their complete trust and understanding.

Toward the spring tides of gold and silver once more reached the willing ears of the Spanish. "The Turk," captive Plains Indian at Cicou, gave encouraging stories of the land of Quivira. Probably wishing for freedom, and thinking to gain it by the desire of the Spanish, he was clever enough to know what they wanted him to say. He told them of great wealth and riches in cities to the East, in the far-away land of Quivira. Regardless of protests by Indians who knew the land and knew that the Turk was not telling the truth, Coronado made plans for the trip to Quivira in the spring.

It was with fresh hope and gleeful spirits that the men left Tigra that sunshiny, balmy spring morning in April 1541. It was well that they did not know disappointment was again in store for them, for their burdens seemed light, and the pathway easy.

him that I wasn't here for nothing else but to see what could be done about the way he treated me," Mrs. King said.

"He got a .38 pistol out of his pocket, raised his hand, I tried to stop him, and then I saw him fall," Mrs. King said. "When I saw him on the ground, rolling and vomiting, I took a gun out of my purse, shot myself," Mrs. King added. "I went over to where he was and shot myself again," Mrs. King said, Tuesday afternoon the state rested at 2:30.

B. J. Jones, Gorman cafe operator, told jurors that once Mrs. King stated, "I've given him the best eight years of my life—he can't trifle now."

1934 Champagne Crop to Be One Of France's Finest

By United Press
PARIS.—Great bunches of black and white grapes weigh down the vines in the region of Rheims and Epernay so the 1934 champagne crop promises to be the finest since 1893, the most celebrated of champagne years in the history of France.

Experts, who have inspected the hillside vineyards, estimate that production this year will amount to more than 15,000,000 gallons. Sun and rain seemed to cooperate throughout the summer to make the present harvest the best in 41 years. It never was too hot during the critical period, and there were showers at regular intervals without any heavy down-pours.

The various types of grapes used in the blending of champagne include the white grapes of the Ozer, Cramant, Aviz and du Mesnil vineyards and black grapes from the Ay, Mareuil, Bouzy and Treppail vineyards, all ripened perfectly.

Connoisseurs, however, will not be able to sample the 1934 champagne for at least another five years as it must be bottled and put in underground warehouses to ac-

Working Toys to Weigh Down Santa

By United Press
NEW YORK.—If you want to make your child happy, put him to work.

That's the new deal in toys for Christmas, 1934. The latest models for Santa's pack, assembled from 32 states for display at the Toy Association, feature educational playthings that exactly reproduce every adult business and housekeeping activity in workable miniature.

Among the new thrills Santa Claus will bring: Electric trains with extreme stream lines and real chuggers. A metal loom which reproduces the perfection of industrial weaving for the first time.

An adaptation of the electric eye for playroom use. A mirror device by which you can draw your own pictures even if you have five thumbs. Streamlined doll carriages that have a trunk for doll wardrobes included in the body. Toy autos that set new speed records by running 100 feet a minute. Riveting for playroom builders—without the noise of adult construction, however.

There are a hundred types of building sets for youngsters. They can build every type of modern airplane and boat. A new cardboard boat can be built which will stay in the water for three months. Juvenile wheel goods are streamlined and geared for transformation tricks. A fireman's hook and ladder can be changed into a dump truck or an ambulance. Sidewalk autos have rumble seats and dump truck attachments.

A new soda jerking set will turn the playroom into an efficient drug store fountain. Grocery stores come complete with counters, scales, dial phones, a safe with a combination, a cash register and an efficient dial typewriter, all in the lowest price ranges. Children's books combine drawing and painting activities with the mastering of the alphabet.

German storm troopers must prove their families since 1800, excepting perhaps the blood of their forefathers might have spilled.

The Clew of the Forgotten Murder

By CHARLETON KENDRICK

BEGIN HERE TODAY
When CHARLES MORDEN, reporter for The Blade, in found dead DAN BLEEKER, publisher, was a victim of a mysterious murder.

Griff and Bleeker go to the apartment occupied by KENNETH BOONE, friend of Morden. There, Griff tells Bleeker she is Cathay's daughter. He secures the pair of killing needles, and calls police headquarters.

SIDNEY GRIFF emerged from the row of telephone booths and waited impatiently until Bleeker came from an adjoining booth.

"Have you found out anything?" he asked.

Bleeker nodded, his face grimly purposeful.

"Hacine," he said, "the detective, that is, we think it's the Malone woman, although she's not going under that name right at present. She's located at 922 East Elm street and is going under the name of Blanche Stanway. Evidently Har-

Griff frowned meditatively.

"We'll go there first," he said. "Detectives who are working for me have located Mary Briggs, the hitch-hiker. Naturally, she's important, but she's not as important as the Malone woman."

"Just who," asked Bleeker, "do you figure this Malone woman is?"

"That," Griff told him, "is some thing that remains to be determined. So far, I am working in this case on a theory and only on a theory."

"But you think it's going to check out?"

"In every case," Griff said, "I'm not sure, but I think I can get to a destination quicker by moving around and doing things than I can by sitting down and waiting for things to happen. Morden was a newspaper man. He was a good one. He had a knowledge of crime and of criminals which he had obtained by first-hand observation. He was murdered. I want to prosecute those murderers. You've got the newspaper standing squarely behind you."

"What is that?" Bleeker inquired.

is not a crook. I say that he was a counterfeit crook.

"He gave a very fair imitation of Cathay's signature at the police station. He gave a fairly accurate imitation of Cathay's signature when he registered at the hotel."

"He might have been a forger," Bleeker pointed out.

"Those things," Griff said, "take practice. But mark you, here is the most significant thing of all. He cashes a check at the hotel where he is registered under the name of Frank B. Cathay, and that check passed through the bank at Riverside. Moreover, he went to the hotel to keep an appointment with Harry Fancher, an inventor. That appointment had been made in advance."

"Therefore, this pocket-picking was no casual lifting of a purse. It was a part of a carefully planned scheme, a scheme which would have worked to perfection if the man hadn't taken a couple of drinks. He was stopped for a minor traffic violation. The officer smelled liquor on his breath and found that his description checked with that of a man who had been holding up several stations. The officer took him to the station for examination."

"However, we're wasting valuable time talking over clews while there's work to be done. So let's get to work."

"But look here," Bleeker demanded, "you don't have any doubt that Kenneth Boone and the girl, between them, were the ones who killed Morden, do you?"

"As to that, Griff said, "we are going to make some interesting and I think some rather startling discoveries. Come, let's see if we can't get to 922 East Elm street before the conference breaks up. It may be a conference that is worthy of our careful attention."

MUCH puzzled, Bleeker followed the criminologist to a taxicab.

"Remember," he said, when the cab was swaying through the streets, making speed toward the destination where the detective and the widow of the Riverside financier had been located, "that I'm running a newspaper. I'm a man of action. I don't go in for a lot of refined theories; I go in for action. The faster the action, the better I like it. I'm inclined to go ahead and do what I want to first and check up on the mistakes afterwards. I find that I can get to a destination quicker by moving around and doing things than I can by sitting down and waiting for things to happen. Morden was a newspaper man. He was a good one. He had a knowledge of crime and of criminals which he had obtained by first-hand observation. He was murdered. I want to prosecute those murderers. You've got the newspaper standing squarely behind you."

They rode for a minute or two in silence and then Griff said, "It will be one of my greatest regrets that in solving this case there is one thing which we shall probably never discover."

"What is that?" Bleeker inquired.

"That is whether Morden merely blundered upon the discovery which led to his death, or whether he figured it out by a process of reasoning that was at least brilliant."

"He was not a brilliant man," Bleeker said.

Griff closed his eyes. Slowly he shook his head from side to side.

"I am not certain," he said. "At times I feel that he must have been brilliant. It is, perhaps, something we shall never discover."

"What are you referring to?" Bleeker asked.

"Not that," Griff said. "Do you think that he knew she was Cathay's daughter?"

"As to that, we cannot say, but I am inclined to think he did not," Griff said.

"How," asked Bleeker, "did you know that she was Cathay's daughter?"

"I didn't know," Griff said. "I watched her lips when she spoke. I knew that she was nervous and that she was lying. I knew, also, that her lies were not the swift, extemporaneous lies of one who has been unexpectedly cornered, but that they had been carefully rehearsed. They were lies which they had been given to her to use for the purpose of delaying investigation until a certain thing could be accomplished."

"And that certain thing?" asked Bleeker.

Griff shrugged his shoulders. "It may already have been accomplished," he said. "Who can tell?"

"Don't you think you're all wet on that business?" Bleeker insisted. "Morden wasn't such a brainy man. He was a newspaper man. He was a good one. He had a knowledge of crime and of criminals which he had obtained by first-hand observation. He was murdered. I want to prosecute those murderers. You've got the newspaper standing squarely behind you."

They rode for a minute or two in silence and then Griff said, "It will be one of my greatest regrets that in solving this case there is one thing which we shall probably never discover."

"What is that?" Bleeker inquired.

Griff and Bleeker entered a conference in the next installment—and face an angry woman.

Doctor Says Care Should Be Taken After An Illness

AUSTIN.—Speaking of the precautions that should be taken in households, during and at the close of an illness from any of the "catching" diseases, which are prevalent at all seasons, Dr. John W. Brown, state health officer, said recently: "Any plan for the prevention or control of this sort, depends upon the intelligent co-operation of individuals and communities with the medical profession and the health authorities for its success."

"Those who are in charge of persons suffering from influenza, pneumonia, tuberculosis, scarlet fever, measles, infantile paralysis or any other of the diseases spread by discharges from the nose or throat, are warned that these discharges are sources of great danger, and are urged to have the patient use paper handkerchiefs or soft cheesecloth, that can be disinfected or burned or otherwise safely disposed of.

"The sterilization of dishes and utensils used in the sick room, by boiling after each use of them, and of the patient's clothing, sheets, towels, and pillow cases, are equally necessary. Then, at the close of the illness, a thorough cleaning of the room, bedding and personal belongings of the patient, scrubbing the floors and woodwork, and opening the place to the fresh air and sunlight, are urged as a final precautionary measure.

"Fortunately, the best disinfectants yet discovered are within the reach of everybody. They are plenty of hot water and soap, fresh air and sunshine."

MAYOR TO RUN AGAIN

CLEVELAND, O.—Though the next mayoralty primary is 12 months away, Mayor Harry L. Davis, Republican, has announced he will seek another term. Davis, thrice mayor before his present term, served one term as governor of Ohio also. His previous terms were nearly a decade ago, his present one representing a political comeback.

"What is this 'liquid test' they talk about?" ask mothers. Just this: a simple way of finding out if any boy or girl with irregular or insufficient bowel movements is in need of relief, or is getting the wrong treatment.

Doctors urge a liquid laxative for children. The child who has been convalescing in a hospital will often come out with bowels working like a well-regulated watch. Hospitals give children a liquid laxative of suitable ingredients, suitable strength, and in suitable amount.

Give that sluggish child a liquid laxative containing senna (a natural laxative). California Syrup of Figs has the right amount for children's use, and this rich, fruity syrup does not upset them.

Just give any headache, bilious child a little of this gentle laxative when constipated, and a little less if dose is repeated until the bowels seem to be moving regularly and thoroughly without need of help.

How to Begin
Stop all use of mineral drugs, whether they are salts, pills, tablets, or "candy" form. Even once a month is too often to give any child a cathartic strong enough for adults.

It is not wise to give laxatives of adult strength to a child, just because you give them less frequently or in less amounts.

So, get a bottle of California Syrup of Figs from your druggist, and start tonight, if your child is constipated, giving a good, cleansing dose. Repeat if necessary, giving a little less each time. That's the secret of this treatment—gradually reduced dosage.

When you change to California Syrup of Figs instead of harsh medicines, you'll risk no more violence to your child's appetite, digestion, and general physical condition. You'll have a safer and more satisfactory result, too.

THE "LIQUID TEST"

This is the way to relieve occasional sluggishness, or constipation in a child of any age:

First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age, and condition. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is California Syrup of Figs which every druggist keeps in stock. Be certain that it is the genuine product, with "California" blown in the bottle.

Dr. Logsdon to Address Class Next Sunday
 A most interesting session is in prospect for the members of the Young Peoples class of the First Methodist church when, next Sunday, they hear Dr. Harry A. Logsdon, who has accepted the invitation of the regular teacher, John D. Hamilton, to teach the lesson, "Christian Citizenship," and talk on the vital application to Armistice Day and the youth of our nation in 1934.

Dr. Logsdon is especially well fitted to bring the class a message they will long remember due to his long service "Over There" in the Medical Corps during the hectic days of the World War.

Mrs. Alice True Is Married to Citrus Grower of McAllen

Mrs. Alice D. True, who has lived in Ranger since August, 1918, was married a few weeks ago to James A. Le Lachour of McAllen, and has moved to that city to make her home.

Since June, 1922, Mrs. True has been connected with the Ranger Retail Merchants association, and Mr. Le Lachour has for the past 15 years been owner and manager of a large citrus orchard near McAllen. He also has other interests there.

Miss Vates Lola Will Be Here With Schell Bros. Circus

University co-ed and a member of the social elite becomes movie star!

After graduating from the University of Minnesota, Miss Vates Lola, who was a horse fancier and an outstanding athlete, who was looking for thrills surely found them in great numbers when she became a member of circus. After traveling with a circus for a few short years, and was wintering in Hollywood, Calif., at that time there were several producers of motion pictures making circus pictures and as talent was somewhat scarce among performers who would really fill the requirements in the circus field, circus performers were interviewed and of all outstanding members of the tan bark, Miss Vates Lola was selected to try out for the movies. After doubling in some of the productions, she was given a major part and was later starred in certain well known productions, and her name became a household word in Hollywood as to her very versatile manner in which she did her parts that were cast for her.

Miss Lola is one of the most darling of all aerial artists and is an accomplished horsewoman. Today in the main show performance of Schell Brothers Wild Animal Circus you may see her in several numbers as a featured performer. While a jungle picture was in the making last winter, the producers required the services of a lady to handle a large herd of large elephants without the help of any attendants or trainers, so Miss Lola found some additional thrills and today is considered the only lady in all the world that actually trains and works a herd of elephants without the help of additional trainers. She in reality, has earned the name as Hollywood's Sweetheart and movie star. Through a special arrangement with producers, Miss Vates Lola has been sub-contracted to the Schell Brothers Circus for this season and they take great pride in presenting her twice daily in the main show performance which will be here for two performances at 2 p. m. and 8 p. m., Friday, Nov. 9.

Personally Speaking
 Mr. and Mrs. Ed Dixon were visitors yesterday at Mrs. Dixon's brother, T. S. Carr of Dublin. Mrs. Garland Powell is visiting in Fort Worth today.

Bonnie Barton, employe of Montgomery Ward, spent a pleasant day in Fort Worth yesterday.

P. W. Cloud is visiting with B. E. Garner and Coach "Red" Moore for two or three days. Mr. Cloud is from Snyder.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jones, former Ranger residents, paid this city a short visit today. They were en route to their home in Kilgore following a trip to West Texas.

Mrs. Odessa Elliott has returned to her home after several months stay with her friends, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Ezzell.

Mrs. Ed Lee has been very ill for the past several days but her condition is reported to be improving.

Pentecostal Revival Will Start Nov. 11
 A revival meeting is to be conducted at the Pentecostal church, Caddo road, beginning on Nov. 11 and continuing for two weeks, or longer, it has been announced.

The services will be conducted by Rev. Oscar Vougs, from Idaho, who is said to be a gifted and forceful speaker. Mrs. Vougs will have charge of special singing during the revival. All are cordially invited to attend.

Legion Auxiliary Will Sell Poppies Monday
 The ladies of the Auxiliary of the Carl Barnes Post No. 69, will sell poppies on the streets of Range Monday, Nov. 12th.

The proceeds from the sale of these poppies go for the benefit of disabled soldiers who are in hospitals.

According to Mrs. J. D. McClister, these unfortunate do not get any compensation from the government and the poppies are made by them and sold for their benefit.

Be sure you have a poppy in your coat buttonhole Monday and thereby help the disabled veterans of the World War. The price will be from 10 cents to $50.00.

HOLLY MOVIE STAR WITH CIRCUS

Miss Vates Lola, Hollywood movie star, who is presenting Schell Brothers Circus' herd of elephants when the circus shows in Ranger on the afternoon and night of Friday, Nov. 9.

Alameda School News

Friday, Nov. 3, Miss Champion entertained both high school and grammar school with a very interesting program. Among the numbers were a song by Dealva Fox, Edith Dewalt and Laverne Echols entitled, "Moonlight and Stars." A piano solo by Dorothy King, a song by Florence Rogers, and Miss Champion entitled "Long Long Ago." A song by Dorothy King, Bartie Lou Cameron and Miss Champion entitled "Love in Bloom" and a reading by Jack Bishop. A very good time was enjoyed by all who attended. We welcome all visitors. The program will be held from 1:30 till 2:15 next Friday and Mr. Hodges has charge. Every one is invited to attend.

Miss Edith Cameron visited school last Friday. We were all glad to see Edith, since she was once a member of Alameda High, but finished last year.

Last week a meeting was held electing editors and reporters for the paper. They were as follows: Junior Hart, editor in chief; Inez Horn, associate editor; Dorothy King, sports editor; Bartie Lou Cameron, 11th reporter; Billie Horn, 9th reporter; Myrtle Vaughn 8th reporter and Deola Perrin, 7th reporter. This work is supervised by Miss Champion.

In keeping with our program of the improvement of our library, this week a number of new books have been added to it. About 25 or 30 new books arrived this week. Among them are books to be used in history and English.

The boys and girls of Alameda High school have started basketball practice this week. The boys have turned their attention from football and are now devoting their time and interest to the preparation of a strong, efficient team.

Turns New Leaf In Fashion Book

A one-leaf costume to win the O. K. of the strictest censor is this one, worn quite becomingly by Miss Lowell Winter, dancer, on a sunny bench at San Francisco. Lowell's all dressed up in a blend of modern imperials leaf that pleases or does it?—epaulets with a spilt skirt.

The Alameda girls and boys teams will play the Colony basketball teams at Alameda Friday evening, Nov. 3, at 3 o'clock.

The players of the Alameda main team of girls are: Ellen Tucker, Billie Horn, centers; Florence Rodgers, Delta Lee, forwards; Dorothy King, Luzelle Sims, guards; Captain, Billie Horn; sub-captain, Ellen Tucker. The subs are: Katy Thurman, Myrtle Vaughn, Laverne Echols and Myrdelle Thomas.

There have been a bit of improvements made on the school building at Alameda this year.

They have added a study hall which reaches more than the width of the rest of the building. They put in 42 new seats, also a new stage in the study hall.

They have added a laboratory which will make the study of science more interesting. They have put the equipment into the laboratory that is necessary for making the experiments demanded in the course of science. They are now piping water into the laboratory.

SACRIFICE FOR PUPILS
 IRONTON, O.—Public school teachers here gave up a vacation-with-pay to attend a district teachers' meeting and stayed in their schoolrooms because "we deemed it advisable to give the time to the children." They said they made the sacrifice on account of uncertainty of school finances and doubt as to the length of this year's term.

Old People's Sunday Held at a Church

By United Press
 STONEHAM, Mass.—The 59th annual observance of Old People's Sunday was held at the First Congregational church here.

The Rev. D. Augustine Newton, 89, who preached the sermon, was one of the youngest of the 65 members attending the special service.

Among those present were Mrs. Ethel Lathan, 96; Henry Wallace, 94, a G. A. R. veteran; Mrs. Addie Farnham, 93, Mrs. Amina Munger, 92, and three others more than 91 years old. All persons invited to the service were more than 80 years of age.

More Safety For Children on Streets Is Being Stressed
 Through the medium of a league for children between the ages of 6 and 16 years, it is hoped to set up a standard of safe practice for those who indulge in these sports. Merchants who sell roller skates and bicycles, including goods and hardware dealers, have taken the initiative in local campaigns to protect boy and girl pedalists and skaters. It is expected that about 45,000 such stores in the United States will become recruiting centers for members of the children's safety league.

Members of the league are required to pass simple safety tests for bicycling and roller skating and are awarded the three Cs emblem—the three Cs standing for—Caution-Courtesy-Cooperation. The organization is known as the Three-In-One Safety League. The safety test and application blanks are provided by the local merchant. There is no charge or fee of any kind for membership.

Increasing traffic presents a greater problem to the safety of these sports—especially bicycling, which has been revived to occupy the prominence it enjoyed some 30 years ago. It is felt that not enough training has been given children to cope with the increased hazards especially in metropolitan areas where play at best is difficult. The crusade for proper instruction involves appeals to parents and to schools where safety work is carried on to see that children are taught to ride bicycles as they would be to drive motor cars. It involves a general understanding of traffic rules and ultimately OCCASIONALLY we housekeepers find time to add a course that makes a meal an event even for the cook. A perfect cake with a perfect frosting is something more than a sweet course with which to finish the dinner. It's the expression of the cook's devotion to her art and of her eagerness to give pleasure to others.

A simple, homey meal finds an ideal dessert in a layer cake. There's a touch of lavishness about a glittering frosted cake that adds glamor to the simplest meal.

When you plan to have a cake dessert, the rest of the dinner should be low in starch and sugar, for a cake is rich in these two properties. Baked or broiled fish, spinach timbales, buttered carrots, fruit salad and layer cake form a well-balanced menu.

A cake is always good for Sunday night lunch, too. Precede it with stuffed tomato salad or tomato aspic ring filled with salad, and coffee and toasted sandwiches.

Ribbon Cake
 Here's the ribbon cake, a favorite with men: Three cups sifted sugar, 2/3 cup butter or other shortening, 1-2 cups sugar, 2 eggs, 1 cup milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 3-4 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-8 teaspoon cloves, 1-4 teaspoon mace, 1-4 teaspoon nutmeg, 1-2 tablespoon molasses, 1-3 cup finely cut raisins, 1-3 cup finely cut figs.

Sift flour once, measure, add salt and baking powder and sift together three times. Separate yolks from whites of eggs and beat yolks until thick and lemon colored. Cream shortening and gradually beat in sugar. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Fold in the whites of egg which have been beaten until stiff. Fill two oiled and floured nine-inch layer pans with two-thirds of the mixture. To remaining mixture, add spices, molasses and fruit and pour into one prepared nine-inch layer pan. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 25 minutes. Arrange spice layer between light layers. Spread fluffy frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake.

Fluffy Frosting
 Three egg whites, 2-1/4 cups sugar, 1-2 cup water, 2 teaspoons light corn syrup, 1 teaspoon vanilla, few drops pink coloring.

Combine egg whites, sugar, water and corn syrup in top of double-boiler, heating with a rotary beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water, beat constantly with rotary beater and cook 10 minutes or until frosting will stand up in peaks. Remove from fire, add vanilla and beat until thick enough to spread. Add coloring to frosting to turn it a delicate pink.

This cake is very good put together with apple jelly and then covered with the frosting. Apple jelly is chosen because it is delicately flavored.
