DEFENSE RESTS ON HAUPTMANN TRIAL TODAY

By United Press
FLEMINGTON, Feb. 8.—Bruno Hauptmann's defense against charges he murdered the Lindbergh baby ended today and the state of New Jersey opened a vigorous attack on the defendant's alibi witnesses.

Two alibi stories were hit by negating state's evidence. Benjamin Heir, who said he saw a man resembling Isador Fisch over the St. Raymond's cemetery fence on the night the ransom was paid, was eight miles from that spot at about that time, the state's first rebuttal was declared.

Evert Carlstrom, the young Swedish boy who said he saw Hauptmann in Frederick's hank on the night of the kidnapping, actually in New Jersey at night and never left his home, according to another witness.

J. J. Farber, an insurance man, let down Heir's story. He said the night of April 2, 1932 he and an automobile accident in which Heir's car was involved and at the accident occurred in the town section of New York, far from the Bronx cemetery. He said the time of the accident at 15 p. m. Heir had testified he parked his car at the cemetery at 8:30 until nearly 11 p. m. This Larson, a friend of Carlstrom testified that he and Carlstrom slept all night on March 1, 1932, in a vacant house in Dunellen, N. J., of which Carlstrom was caretaker.

Hauptmann's attorneys closed the case after two young women had given testimony negating findings of the state's expert, Arthur Koehler.

To the Public:

In selling to the Times Publishing Company the good will, subscription list, etc., of the Eastland County News, The Loud Speaker and The Olden Spokesman, we believe that it will create a closer cooperation among the business interests of Ranger, from the fact that it will be a matter of economy to the business interests in the maintaining of only one newspaper in Ranger, also that Ranger is large enough to support a daily newspaper.

We also wish to announce that this deal in no way affects the commercial printing department of the Prompt Printing Company, as we will continue to do commercial printing, the deal only affecting the publications mentioned above.

We wish to express our appreciation to our readers, our advertisers and to the public in general for the wonderful cooperation they have given us during the nine years that we have published The Eastland County News, and ask that you give the Times Publishing Company the same hearty cooperation in the future that you have given us in the past.

ALLRED WILL FORM POLICY FOR PARDONS

By United Press
AUSTIN, Feb. 8.—Pardons secured after money was placed in escrow with prison employees to pay lawyers, were being investigated today by Gov. James Allred.

A life of correspondence brought from the prison was on his desk.

Prison employees will not hold such money now, Allred said, but it is being placed in certain banks, which he would not reveal at this stage of the investigation.

Allred said he did not know if there is a law to forbid the practice. If there is none he will recommend one.

Meantime he issued warnings that no clemency will be granted by him if he discovers the convict has made a contract to pay an attorney or anyone else conditional on his release.

Court Dismisses Case Reversed by 11th Appeal Court

By United Press
ABILENE, Feb. 8.—Dismissing application of the appellant for want of jurisdiction in the case of the Great A. & P. company et al vs. G. C. Harris, the state supreme court Thursday, in effect, returned the case to district court here.

The A. & P. company's appeal was the outgrowth of suit brought by Harris against the company and tried early in 1933. Harris, charging defamation of character when he was discharged as manager of one of the A. & P. stores here obtained judgment of several thousand dollars.

Appeal was made by the A. & P. company to the court of civil appeals at Eastland, which reversed the case, but held the plaintiff had cause of action. Subsequent appeal to the state supreme court was based on the contention that the plaintiff had no cause of action.

Refuse Application For Error Writ In Court On Wednesday

Application for writ of error by H. C. Graham vs. City of Fort Worth et al was refused Wednesday by the Supreme Court at Austin.

The case when heard in the 11th Court of Civil Appeals at Eastland early in October resulted in an opinion for the City of Ft. Worth. Later Graham made application for rehearing in the Eastland court, but that was refused.

Graham has sued for an injunction to restrain the City of Fort Worth from collecting taxes on his homestead up to $5,000 valuation.

He had contended that, under the laws which exempt homesteads from state taxation, they also were exempt from city and school taxation.

The Eastland court opinion, however, upheld the Fort Worth district court in denying the injunction. In October testimony was heard by District Judge Ben Boyd of Denton, who sat as special judge in the case.

Graham's appeal at first was transferred to Eastland because justices of the Second Court of Civil Appeals, all being residents of Fort Worth, were considered disqualified.

First Week Of The Bicycle Contest Finds Boys Busy

The Ranger Times Bicycle Contest is under full swing—the boys' efforts to win the fine Ringby bicycle now on display at Killingsworth, Cox & Co., in their show window.

The boys are working hard and Saturday every home in Ranger will be solicited by one of the carriers. There are a number of ways the boys secure points.

The Times carriers operate under what is known as the "Little Merchant Plan"—the papers belong to the boys, they handle the collections and are responsible for same—thus it is readily understood how interested these boys are and how hard they are working. The plan was worked out to teach the boys how to contact the public and how to become business men.

The Times is indeed grateful for the splendid cooperation the boys have received and join with them in expressing appreciation.

The contest will continue thru the month. Next week the boys will make a concerted drive between the hours of 7:30 and 9 in the evenings.

Official announcement of the standing of the several contestants will appear in Sunday's issue of The Times.

COMMITTEE ON CRIME CLAIMS ACTION NEEDED

Urges Shackles Be Removed From State Courts By Statute.

By United Press
AUSTIN, Feb. 8.—Courageous action against "commercialized crime" in Texas was urged on legislators today by the senate crime committee.

It recommended the shackles be struck from state courts, that officials who fail or refuse to enforce the laws be removed, that a modern centralized state police system be created.

The senate's crime investigators have proceeded their formal reports with bills to accomplish the recommendations.

"There can be seen today on every hand a general revolt against governmental authority. Cold, cool crime has been reorganized and commercialized in Texas. It is now one of the established industries of the state. It lifts its head against the broken bulwarks of the law. It is struggling for social and political recognition" the report said.

A Romantic Footnote To War's Mysteries

History would be a great deal more interesting if we could get at its insignificant footnotes. It is forever hinting at absorbing little stories that would make much better reading than the really important things which get all the space—but in most cases it does no more than hint. The anecdotes and romances which would make history real to us get lost in the shuffle.

Here's a sample. A few days ago some relief workers were excavating Indian mounds on the edge of the famous battlefield of Shiloh, in Tennessee. They accidentally drove their picks into a grave in which had been buried nine unknown Union soldiers killed in that battle. And one of the skeletons turned out to be that of a girl!

Skeletons, of course, were about all that remained. Each was encased in the remnants of a blue uniform, clearly identifiable as such by the tarnished brass buttons. The girl had apparently been some 17 or 18 years of age. The Confederate bullet which killed her was found inside her skeleton.

And that's all there is to the story—just that tantalizing little fragment, which tells us almost nothing, but which sets the imagination to work frantically.

Where did this girl come from? How did she get there, on one of the bloodiest battlefields of all the bloody wars?

Was she one of those luckless girls who wish they were boys, and masquerade as boys whenever possible? If so, how did she get in the army, in view of the fact that Civil War recruits had to undergo physical examinations just as present-day soldiers do?

Or was she, perhaps, the sweetheart of one of the soldiers, who had obtained a uniform in some manner, disguised herself in it, crept into camp by some hook or crook to be near her lover, and had been caught with him when the unexpected swirl of battle broke over Grant's army?

Has he one of the eight who were buried with her? Or did they get separated in the heat of battle, so that he never knew what happened to her?

These are questions that cannot possibly be answered; but who can read the little story without wishing earnestly that they could be?

These relief workers dug up one of history's most fascinating fragments—but it can never be anything more than a fragment, a footnote to a tale of battle, hinting at much that we would like to see revealed.

The nine skeletons have been buried in a new grave in Shiloh Cemetery, now. The only marker is a tablet, inscribed "Nine Unknown Union Soldiers."

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. — The American-owned Las Rucias ranch near Matamoros, Mex., has been subdivided, in accordance with Mexican law, and has been given to Agrarians who moved onto the land several months ago. Last steps of the distribution of 2,800 acres of the 4,000 acre ranch, owned by J. J. Fernandez estate of Brownsville, were completed recently when the "ceremonies" of actual occupation were carried out by the Agrarians. The land was distributed despite repeated protests by the owners and by Consul H. G. Goforth of the United States embassy in Mexico and the United States Department of State.

FOR VARIETY, SOW ANNUALS

For Variety, Sow Annuals If variety is the spice of life, surely annuals must occupy the same place in our gardens. We have our trees, lawns, perennials, and shrubs always with us, but the annuals, different in shape, size, color and fragrance, lend an atmosphere of diversity, which is but a few short steps to diversion. Annuals, then, give that perpetual newness to gardens which is the basis of all recreation. Like m'lady's hats, they change with the season, and provoke as much interest and conversation. With the hundreds of species and varieties to choose from, no garden need be without a continuous yearly change of color, appearance and fragrance, and with such a change a renewed interest in the home surroundings. They may be used for almost any purpose. Annuals for bedding, edging, border or rockery are in perfect taste. They are particularly useful in out of the way places where spring bulbs have withered away, to fill gaps in the perennial border, to complete a color arrangement which has gone awry. There are annuals for shady spots, dry spots, wet spots, for early spring, mid-summer fall and late fall. Get out your seed catalog these cold winter days and pick out a half dozen varieties new to you. Study their characteristics and habits and plan to use them in some location where their size and color will blend into your garden picture. The ordinary run of annuals need little care. For the most part, they will grow abundantly if planted in good soil and given sufficient moisture. The one precaution is to sow them sparingly, and thin out when the seedlings are still small. Many gardeners find that specializing in one or two annuals gives them much pleasure. In this way they really get acquainted with a certain family and when new varieties are developed are avidly interested in giving them a try, thus bringing into the garden the variety of contacts which is so important where confined interest is desired.

SILKEN SPINDLES

By Lewis Lu Brockner © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Gale Henderson, pretty and 23, works in a silk mill. She and her 19-year-old brother, Phil, support their invalid father.

Steven Meyers who also works in the mill asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give an answer in a few days.

Gale goes skating, breaks thru the ice and is rescued by Brian Westmore whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian has gone home after two years in Paris to enter the mill. Gale disappears before he learns her name.

Vicky Thatcher, daughter of Robert Thatcher, general manager of the mill, schemes to captivate Brian.

Leota Boller, another employee, tells Gale the mill workers are planning to organize and demand their rights. She asks Gale to come to a meeting and Gale agrees. Later she hears that Leota is a company spy.

Steve brings Gale some roses, apologizes and asks her to forget that they quarrel. She agrees.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XX

Brian Westmore skated slowly, hands in pockets, the tip of his cigarette glowing in the darkness. As far as the bend in the river where the big cottonwood hung over the ice he went, then turned back. He had made the trip three times within the last half hour.

Brian skated close to the riverbank, in the shadows. Now and then he looked back, but there was no one in sight. He had the river to himself until he drew near the boat house. There were other skaters there—a number of boys playing hockey, half a dozen young girls, several couples and a dark youth cutting figures on the ice.

One of the hockey players went down and there were shrill cries and laughter. Brian circled the edge of the crowd, keeping his eyes on the place where the road came down past the boat house to a sort of wharf. That was where most of the skaters sat to put on their skates. He watched the place and suddenly a girl in a short, dark jacket and scarlet cap appeared.

Brian moved forward—and then swung back. There was another figure behind the girl, the figure of a man. A minute later the two started across the ice and Brian saw that the girl was not so tall as he had thought, nor so slender.

"She isn't coming," he told himself.

No, Gale Henderson wasn't coming. He's been telling himself that for 15 minutes and yet he waited. Brian tossed his cigarette aside, turned and made his way up the river again.

The wind was cold and for a while he skated briskly to warm himself. He reached the turn in the river and once more doubled back. This time would be the last, if he didn't see her this time.

All day long Brian had been looking forward to seeing Gale Henderson, saving things to tell her. He couldn't forget the girl. It wasn't that she was so pretty, though of course she was that, too. But he wanted to talk to her. He felt he could talk to her. Brian, during the past few weeks, had discovered that there were plenty of people to dictate letters to, there were plenty of people to attend conferences and to present reports and tables of figures, there were plenty to attend his mother's dinner parties but there was almost no one to talk to.

The men at the mill, heads of departments and their assistants, were all older than he was. When Brian wanted to make a suggestion he was aware of this, aware, too, that they were experienced and he was not. So he listened and, once or twice, when he spoke about something, the others were attentive and respectful but before long the discussion was going on just as it had on some other Brian's suggestions were overlooked.

He'd tried getting acquainted with some of the younger men, the assistants, but that hadn't turned out very well either. Gale Henderson was the only one about the mill who had really treated him like a human being. He wanted to tell her about that pension plan he'd worked out and see if she thought the employees would like it. He felt he knew Gale Henderson well, that they were old friends, though he'd only talked to her once a year. That was because they'd been at school together.

He passed the place where they had had their campfire the night before. The shore was dark and lonely now. And there was no slender figure wearing a short skirt and leather jacket skating toward him. There was no one at all in sight.

Brian told himself again, "She isn't coming."

This time when he reached the boat house he took off his skates and walked down the road to the place where he had left his coupe. He got inside and turned the car about and started for home. Half way there he changed his mind and turned a turn left. His mother was having some friends in, he remembered, and he didn't want to see them. He could drive to the club and see if anything was happening there or he could look up Ted Bainbridge.

Brian decided to do none of these things. A better prospect presented itself. He'd drop in at Thatchers'. If Vicky were home he'd be assured of agreeable company. Vicky was a good sort—just the one to get him out of his mopedness.

A maid in uniform answered his ring and said yes, that Vicky was in.

Brian said, "Where is she—in the living room? I'll go in—"

He turned into the large room at the left. Vicky was there, slim and picturesque in emerald velvet, with one arm stretched against the back of the davenport. Her dark hair was sleek and shining, her lips a sulky blaze of crimson.

A young man sat facing her. He was a tall young man with tawny-reddish hair and his features were pleasant enough but it was clear that the young man he was pleased about something.

"He said, 'But look, Vicky—' and then stopped, seeing Brian."

Vicky was on her feet at once. "Brian!" she exclaimed, hurrying forward. "How sweet of you! I'd begun to think you'd buried yourself in that mill. Come and tell us how the wheels of industry are turning."

Greg Harmon had risen, too, but he was not smiling. "Hello, Brian," he said rather curtly. "How're you? Hope you don't mind if I run along?"

"Oh, but see here—!" Brian began.

"Greg was just leaving," Vicky assured him. "He doesn't mind me sufficiently entertaining tonight. Really I think heaven must have sent you, Brian, to keep me from spending a poke evening alone."

She turned toward the other man, "Good night, Greg," she went on. "Give me a ring, won't you, tomorrow about 4? Don't call me earlier because I'm going shopping with Claire."

"You're sure I'm not interrupting," Brian asked.

Greg Harmon said, "No—got to be on my way. Got some thing to see about. All right, Vicky, I'll call you."

He was gone. Vicky sank back on the davenport, leaning her head against her open palm. The loose sleeve fell back, revealing a slim white arm. "Thank goodness that's over," she said dryly. "Give me a cigarette, Brian. I feel the need of one."

"You, Vicky? What on earth have you been doing?"

The girl's eyes regarded him pensively. "It's Greg," she said. "I don't know what I'm going to do about him."

"Well—?"

She shook her head. "Greg's getting to be a problem, Brian. Honestly, I don't know what to do. Just because I've gone around with him a little—playing golf and riding horseback and now and then going to parties—he seems to think I haven't any right to go with anyone else. It's ridiculous! And whenever I say anything he gets the way he was tonight—sulky and simply unbearable."

Brian shook his head, smiling. "The perils of being an irresistible charmer, my dear?"

Vicky pouted. "You can laugh," she said, "but it isn't very funny to me." Suddenly she stopped and the dark eyes grew rounded. "Oh," she said, "I've just thought of something—"

"Animal, mineral or vegetable?"

She made a deprecating little movement with one hand. "I'm serious. Really I am." She went on, her voice touched with excitement. "But I don't see why it wouldn't work! Brian, will you do something for me?"

"Maybe I'd better hear about it first."

"It's nothing that would be so terribly hard—at least I don't think it would be. Just to take me to a few parties and be seen with me places. Oh, it's the very thing! Would you, Brian? Would you do that?"

"See here, I don't know what you're getting at."

"It's about Greg," she explained. "Don't you see that if you begin taking me places and—sort of seem fond of me—it will be the best way in the world to teach Greg that he can't order me around and bully me the way he's been trying to? It's exactly what he needs. You wouldn't have to keep it up long—only until Greg comes to his senses."

"Oh," he said, "I see. You want me to step in and play the heavy lover until Greg gets the idea he's not wanted?"

Vicky nodded. There was a gleam of almost feline satisfaction in the dark eyes. "Of course," she said, "we'd only be pretending."

"Of course. Well, if all you want me to do is to be your attentive escort I don't know how I can refuse."

"You'll do it? You will?" She put both hands on his arm and drew him nearer. "Oh, Brian," she said, "you are sweet!"

She looked very pretty as she raised her face to his, eyes glowing and the red lips slightly parted. Another girl had disappointed him that evening. Brian Westmore said slowly, "Of course, I'll help you, Vicky. Of course I will." (To Be Continued)

Ohio Man's Onions Know Their Weather

WESTERVILLE, O.—Charles F. Rankey, 3-year-old retired farmer of Westerville, knows his onions—and thereby lies his uncanny ability for forecasting weather a year in advance.

Rankey's formula is: "I take an onion—three inches across—peel out 12 of the cups and set them in a row east to west. Then I place a teaspoonful of salt in each cup at midnight, New Year's Eve, allowing them to lie undisturbed for 12 hours, each hour representing a month.

"When noon comes around the condition of the onion cups indicates the type of weather we will have throughout the year, each cup representing a month.

"A dry cup forecasts a dry month, a damp cup erupting the salt a month of moderate rainfall, and one in which water gathers reveals a heavy rainfall."

How Much Would You Pay For a DOLLAR BILL?

THIS IS A TRUE STORY: It started with a half-serious wager, and it teaches a lesson.

Two business men were visiting a famous resort. One offered to bet the other that he could not sell real dollar bills for 50 cents apiece. The other accepted the challenge and went to work.

"How do you do," he said to a passing stranger. "Will you give me 50 cents for this dollar bill?" The stranger paid no attention.

The salesman tried again, and again. But nobody bought—and finally he had to admit that he'd lost his bet.

All of which suggests that people like to know who the seller is before they buy. You can trust the merchants who advertise their products in this newspapers. New Wall Paper Quota a Boon For Jaded Nerves

PARIS.—Included in the French import quota changes for the first quarter of 1935 is an item which gives a small advantage to American business and a great boon to American nerves. The uninitiated might wonder what the granting of a special wall paper quota to the United States has to do with nerves, but Americans who have lived here will understand. Small as this new quota is—a mere 40 quintals of wall paper—it may well mark the advent of a veritable aesthetic revolution. French wall paper dealers, it seems, are at last putting in stocks of American wall paper, the kind that has no yellow birds on bright green backgrounds, no giant pink roses on silver, nor even any blue and gold stripes. The color combinations, which until now have screamed at one from the walls of Paris hotel rooms and furnished apartments were famous. There even used to be mock contests among Americans on the left bank, with a prize of aspirin for the one who could produce the loudest wall paper. But slowly the world has gone around that Americans, and quite a few French folks, do not like hot-house chrysantheums on their walls. Thus the coming of American wall paper marks the beginning of a soberer age, when the contemplation of a wall before one as he lies in bed of a morning won't make him think he is still having unpleasant dreams.

New Fashions Intrigue Women At Style Show

MIAMI, Fla.—Feminine America will wear satin on the sands, beach pajamas modeled after dinner gowns, much fringe on its evening frocks, and printed all-over for spectator sports this summer, according to the dictates of the annual Sunshine Fashion show. More than 2,500 feminine fans gathered in the Roney Plaza Casino Sun Club palm gardens to see the last word in 1935 summer styles. High notes of the beach styles were satin and lace lastex swim suits, the Tahitian ensemble, the Seminole Indian suit, dressmaker bathing suits, three-quarter length pajamas and bath towel coats with monks' hoods for sun protection. Cabana Dress The cabana dress, of the new shooting line, was seen for the first time here. Styled like a summer evening frock, the dress definitely introduced the picturesque note into beach wear. Periwinkle blue, wearing the modernized name of Iris, led the color parade in popularity. One frock for active sports wear was composed entirely of imported scarves, fringed around the neck and at the bottom. Several more luxuriously typed spectator sports ensembles were trimmed with fur-dyed to match their pastel shades. Evening Fashions Evening wear fashions apparently are mindful that variety is the spice of a successful season, and models developed the widest variety in many years. There were taffeta and chiffon gowns that might have been worn by ladies in waiting at the courts of Europe. There were printed silks as severely tailored as a shirtwaist frock. There were brilliant starred chiffon gowns and beruffled net dresses. An amusing frock of peach colored lace had a tucked vestee, a boyishly round collar and wee bow tie of black grosgrain. One of the most interesting gowns was of gray chiffon over accordion-pleated chatrieuse chiffon and was accented with sapphire bracelets and clips.

Jury Helps Member Milk His 50 Cows

MT. STERLING, Ky.—Judge D. B. Caudill was in favor of excusing Clayton Ramey from jury duty in a murder trial here because Ramey told the court he had "50 cows to milk at home and no one to help." Counsel for both sides objected. Judge Caudill took the matter to his own hands. He instructed Sheriff Josh Owings to take the entire panel of 12 to the Ramey farm, where the jurors helped Ramey with his milking.

Jailbirds Break Too Many Windows

AMARILLO, Texas.—Prisoners in the Potter county jail broke the windows so often that an insurance company asked to be relieved from a policy insuring them. The cost of repeatedly replacing the windows was more than the company could stand, an official said. There's much ado over the nine-year sleep of a man in Springfield, Mass., who can still eat, drink, and smoke. What's unusual about that? Aren't so many of us?

Chief Shot Straight; Movies Were Wrong

CLEVELAND.—"If you want to shoot a guy's hat off," said Police Chief Bert Tilson, of suburban Shaker Heights, "aint at his shoestrings." "Okay," said Chief Herbert Giesler of Beachwood, another suburb "I gotcha. Keep your eye on the bulls-eye." Chief Giesler had come over to the Shaker Heights city hall for a bit of target practice with Chief Tilson. They were trying out the Shaker police department's new sub-machine gun. "I've never shot a machine gun before," said Chief Giesler. "But I know how to do it. I've seen these guys in the movies." He loaded a belt of cartridges, pulled back for a full automatic blast. One bullet crashed into the wall where the bull's tail might have been and the rest of the slugs tore through the asbestos covering on the steam pipes running along under the ceiling overhead. Dust fell for five minutes. "Now," said charged Chief Giesler, "that guy I saw in the movies—"

CUB NAMED REPORTER

CLEVELAND, O.—Omar Ramey, Cleveland newspaper reporter, has had a leopard cub named for him. Parks Director A. J. Kurdziel named the "boy" leopard Omar because Ramey had written so many news stories on development of the Cleveland Zoo. Capt. Curley Wilson, zoo superintendent, had to wait eight days to find out the sex of the cub. Mother leopards, he explained, are likely to kill their young if disturbed too soon following birth.

Madrid-Paris Airline Will Start May 15th

By LESTER ZIFFREN United Press Staff Correspondent MADRID.—The inauguration of the projected Madrid Paris airline, scheduled for May 15, literally will remove Spain from its isolated position in western Europe. Up to now Madrid's communication with western and central Europe was confined to a 24-hour railroad trip to Paris, while Madrid and Barcelona were connected with southern Europe by an aerial line to Rome. The new airline will leave Paris only four hours from Madrid, instead of 24. Fourteen passenger Douglas

Rev. L. B. Gray Is Speaker At Lions Meeting Thursday

The Ranger Lions were treated to a most unusual and highly entertaining program Thursday when Lion J. J. Kelly presented Rev. L. B. Gray who told of his visit a few years ago to the Holy Land.

Reverend Gray said that when his ship dropped anchor there in the Mediterranean the dream of a lifetime came true for him and that he truly realized the meaning of the old, old saying: "The object of all travel is to arrive at the Holy Land." He told of the trip overland to Damascus by train and of his enjoyment of the quaint customs encountered and especially of the scenes visited with their connection and association of the time and life of Christ. Then he told of the trip over to Jerusalem and of the intense pleasure it was to go to the places of world-wide interest, historical and religious. A thing that will live long in his memory, he said, was the visit he made to a shrine wherein were kept things said to have been used by the Lord, one thing he mentioned by way of illustration was one of the great earthenware jugs in which the water was turned to wine in a miracle performed by Christ.

A trip out upon the sea of Galilee and a storm encountered while there brought home to him the fullness of the stories in the Bible of storms upon that sea. A picture made in Solomons Quarries and a piece of the marble taken from there, which is identical to that in the historic Solomon's Temple and of the walls of Jerusalem, were assed around the table for each Lion to see. Rev.

Wants $100,000 to Heal Heart

He was her "dearest utas" and her pet "tumblebug," she was his little "salami herring," but she canceled their marriage plans, Robert Isaacson, economist turned liquor jobber, shown here in Chicago court, sadly declared in his $100,000 bail suit against Mrs. Mary B. Alexander, Harvester magnate's widow. Mrs. Alexander, in Florida, is ignoring the suit.

Gray ended his wonderful talk by saying that he got a distinct pleasure from telling his story and the story of the Holy Land and of Christ to Lions and similar organizations for their work was greatly like that of Jesus as the object of both was "Service".

Lion Dr. W. L. Jackson presented as his guest Mr. Goodrich of Wichita Falls, a representative of Parke-Davis & Co. and Lion Dr. Harry A. Logsdon was responsible for the attendance of Mr. Lee F. Newton a former Ranger Lion and now of Wichita Falls, Texas. Lion President Col. Brashier appointed several committees to work up plans, ways and means and information to present the club and to start action on the projects selected at a recent meeting to be actively pushed by the Lions. The Committees appointed were: Civic Improvement, a Standing Committee; Dr. Harry A. Logsdon, J. J. Kelly and E. V. Galloway; Home Talent Play Committee; W. B. Crossley, Floyd Killingsworth, Dr. D. T. Wier, Boy Scouts Committee; Otis Moore, Calvin Brown, P. A. Tankley.

Arkansas Set Speed Records For Legislation

By United Press
LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—The two legislative records were set by Arkansas' 50th General Assembly the first week of its current session.

The first bill introduced was not the salary appropriation bill for the legislators, an unprecedented thing in Arkansas law-making. There were 187 bills introduced the first week—120 in the house and 67 in the senate—to set an all time record.

All major problems scheduled to come before the General Assembly during the 1934 session were introduced the first week. They included legalization of horse racing and pari-mutuel betting, legalization and control of liquor, a sales tax, care of unemployables, sterilization of habitual criminals and incompetents, old age pensions and a state police system.

Ranking with these major considerations are a half dozen or more fox and squirrel hunting bills. State officials from Gov. J. M. Futrell to office clerks are ardent sportsmen.

There is some rivalry among legislators over their fox and squirrel bills. Some of the measures were introduced to divert attention from conservation moves which sponsors of the new bills opposed. Some are obviously ridiculous.

Rep. G. B. Colvin, somewhat of an authority on banking legislation, has asked for a bill that would require squirrels to back up trees so they could see hunters, thereby reducing the detach rate and acting as a conservation measure.

Experts Eliminate Craftsman Nemesis

By United Press
WASHINGTON.—Sap stains no longer will be the nemesis of furniture manufacturers.

The Agriculture Department, in co-operation with Southern lumbermen, has developed a method of preventing discoloration of unseasoned logs and lumber by sap-staining fungi.

In recent years, it was pointed out, consumers have turned thumbs down on discolored wood. This resulted in increased costs and marketing difficulties for both manufacturers and lumber dealers.

Although sap stains only slightly affect the strength of the wood, a good natural finish is rendered impossible.

More than 200 chemicals or chemical combinations were tested by the Division of Forest Pathology.

Two treatments—one a water solution of organic mercury compounds, and the other a mixture of chlorinated phenols at relatively low concentrations — were found to control stains in either pine or hardwoods. A third, borax in saturated solution, was found to be effective solely on hardwoods.

Board report, disclosed that each period of marked lack of rainfall coincided with a period of economic depression.

Says Administration Heads U. S. To War

AKRON, O.—America is being headed directly toward another World War by the Roosevelt administration, J. B. Matthews, of New York, author and traveler, told a lecture audience here.

"CCC camps, mobilization measures and the entire FERA will bring us a world war far more devastating than the last one," he said. "No administration was ever more prepared for war than the present one, which has had six times as many war plans on the fire for two years as the Wilson regime had."

"Bell" Writes Once Too Often; Is Caught
By United Press
CLEVELAND.—"Bell," a self-appointed Paul Revere, has been located finally by police.
About 60 and "obviously a mental case," according to Detective Chief James Gill, of suburban Cleveland Heights, "Bell" is "under observation" by officers.
For months, Bell, who signed no other name, had deluged financial institutions, individuals and Chamber of Commerce with letters darkly warning of some impending bank robbery and surreptitious plots by politicians.
The one who may suffer most from Bell's capture is Postmaster-General James A. Farley. Bell was no tightwad with his stamps.

Will Rogers To Top Week's Film Feature

IS POLITICIAN IN REAL LIFE AND IN FILM

His Latest Film "The County Chairman" Is Right: Down His Alley.

Will Rogers is non-partisan; likewise non-entertainer, also neutral in many other things. The famous comedian, writing for so many newspapers of opposite political complexion, takes a middle-of-the-road course, and steers straight. He never takes sides and is proud of his neutrality.

Rogers has laid claim to being a Democrat, but always in a more or less whimsical vein, as nobody has ever been able to put the political finger on him.

One of the times when he confessed to being a Democrat was the occasion of the premiere of Fox Film's "The Big Trail" at the Chinese theatre in Hollywood, where, in introducing the late Governor Rolph, guest of honor, to the audience, Rogers described him as California's outstanding Republican, adding: "So far as I'm concerned, I'm not a member of any political organization. I'm a Democrat."

"This sally drew a big laugh. It went over much better at that time than it might have done following the recent election."

Rogers, in his writings, on radio broadcasts and in public speeches, gives all political parties, but always in a peculiar vein. He is the friend of all big men of the two major political organizations and regularly visits the White House. No matter who occupies it, he has always been welcome.

In his latest Fox Film production, "The County Chairman," which will arrive at the Arcadia Theatre on Saturday, Rogers portrays the title role, but it is never revealed of which party he is the chairman.

The cast supporting the star is an unusually large and notable one, including Louise Dresser, Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor, Bertton Churchill, Stepin Fetchit, Frank Melton, Charles Middleton, Jan Duggan, Mickey Rooney, Russell Simpson, William V. Mong and Gay Sealbrook.

Drive Out the Poisons When regular bowel movements stop, souring waste matter clogs the bowels and soon begins to poison the entire system. When you feel bad on this account, take Theford's Black-Draught to get rid of constipation. Refreshing relief follows.

I take Theford's Black-Draught for dizziness, headaches, bad taste in the mouth, a dull, tired feeling and for any bad feeling that comes from a clogged system," writes Mr. D. M. Minton, of Cheviot, Fla. "Soon I am feeling good as new. I only take a dose once in a while."

REPTILE TRACKS PUZZLE

LOS ANGELES.—Footprints of what scientists believe was a reptile with hoofs like a deer have been found by a crew tunneling 250 feet underground along the banks of the Colorado River. Puzzled paleontologists are unable to identify the creature which made the three-inch tracks an estimated 58 million years ago. The tunnel crossed apparently what was an ancient game trail long since covered by the rock deposits of subsequent ages.

"ALL-BRAN FORMS MAJOR PORTION OF MY BREAKFAST"

Delicious Cereal Relieved His Constipation

Read Mr. Huyghe's voluntary letter: "After suffering for years, I happened to notice in the grocery a box of ALL-BRAN. I determined to give it a fair trial.

"Today it forms the major portion of my breakfast. I cannot say enough for its effect, as I am a man 58 years of age, at the time in life when one needs just what ALL-BRAN does for you."—Mr. Robt. A. Huyghe, 810 Union St., New Orleans, La.

"Constipation due to insufficient 'bulk' in meals.

Research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" to exercise the intestines. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. With each meal, in serious cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN resists digestion better than the "bulk" in leafy vegetables. How much better to use this gentle food in place of patent medicines.

At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.
