Harry Hines New Chairman of Highway Commission

Gov. James V. Allred has named Harry Hines of Wichita Falls to be chairman of the state highway commission. He is the successor of W. R. Ely who has held the post for six years and during that time has made a magnificent record for a public servant ever loyal to his oath of office, his state and his people.

In civic affairs he has served as general chairman of the community chest and as an official in the Rotary club and chamber of commerce. He was one of the founders of the junior chamber of commerce of Wichita Falls, which is said to be one of the most enterprising community organizations in Texas.

"I consider the appointment by the governor as a call to service. It will be a pleasure to have a part in the work of further perfecting one of the finest systems of highways in this nation. I pledge my best efforts to the job of continuing to close one by one the gaps in our paved highways, the replacing of worn-out roads and the creation and the maintenance of new and better roads for the people of our state who enjoy commensurate with the resources provided for that purpose.

The surest way to get satisfactory results in any undertaking is to find the best method of doing the job and then get busy and do it.

The whole purpose of the work of the world is to supply man's wants and as the population increases slowly, so man's wants, too, increase slowly. What is needed is for man's wants to increase faster and money to circulate free so they can supply the increased wants.

A Doctor Knows!

And doctors use a liquid laxative

"Leave the rest to nature"

There's a very good reason why doctors and hospitals have always used liquid laxatives! You'd use a liquid, too, if you knew how much better it makes you feel.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Just ask your own doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help.

People who have experienced this comfort, never return to any form of help that can't be regulated! The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives, that form no habit - even in children. Its action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset. It's the ideal family laxative because it's a family doctor's prescription, and perfectly safe and effective for family use.

If you are seeking something that will relieve your occasional upsets safely and comfortably, try Syrup Pepsin. Give regulated doses until Nature restores regularity.

The cigarette industry could never have been what it is except for these modern cigarette machines...

They make good cigarettes and smokers know each individual cigarette receives the most careful inspection.

You'd hardly believe such attention to detail possible unless you could see it with your own eyes.

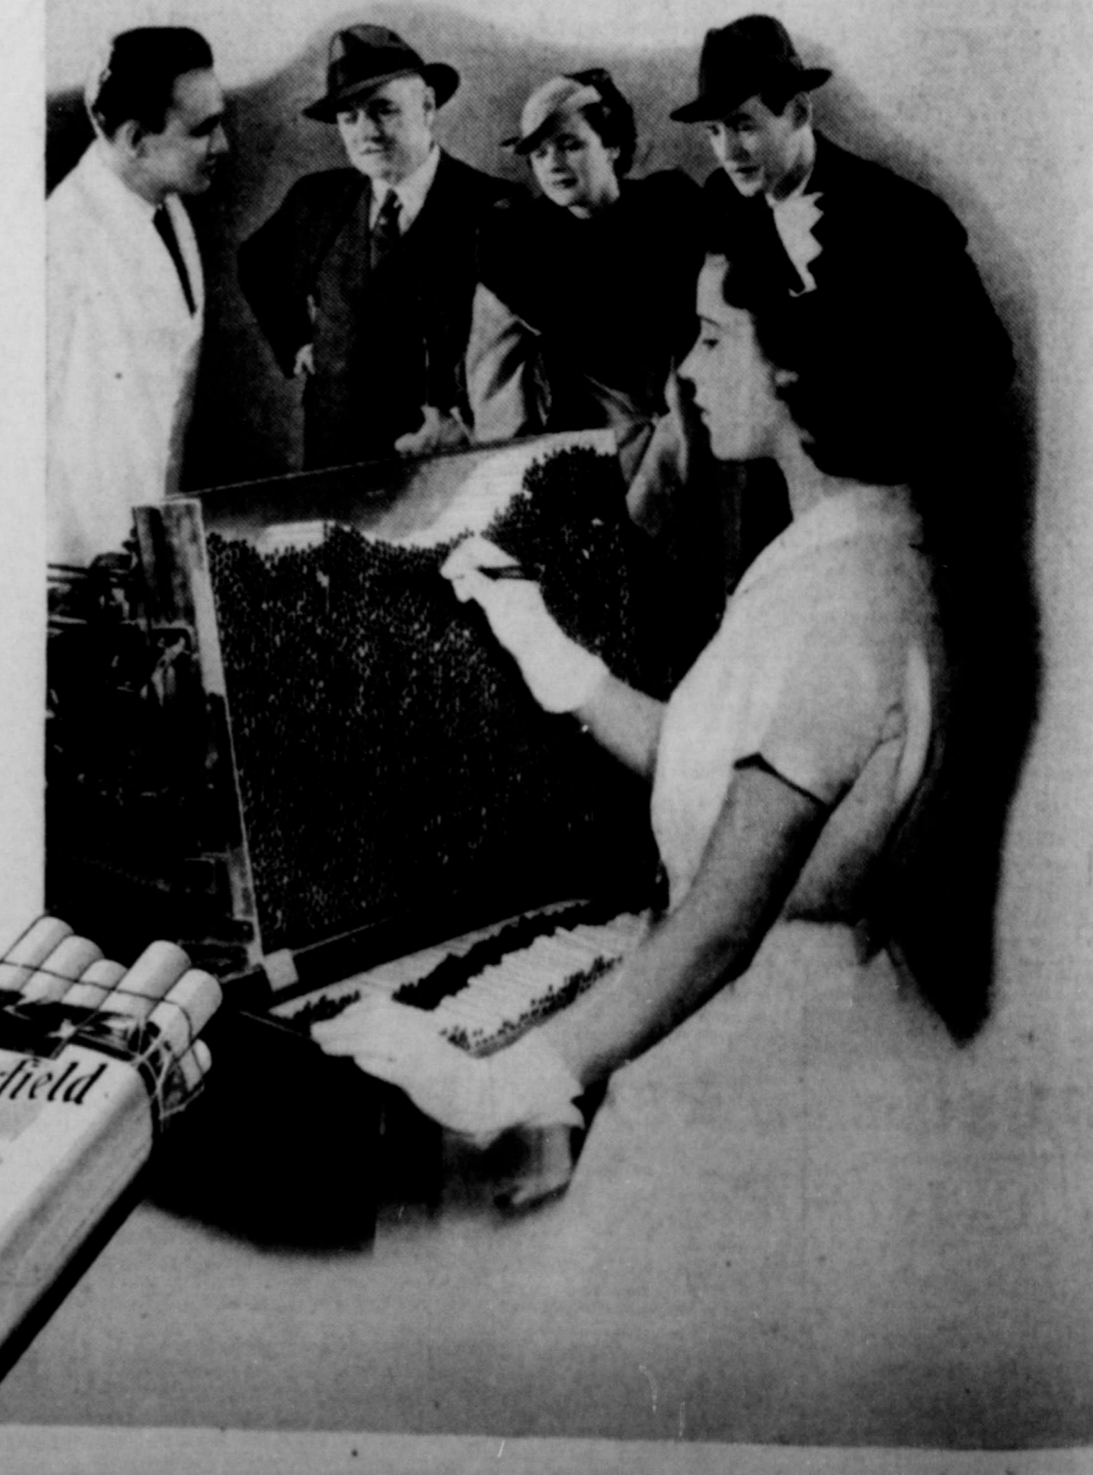

When the Chesterfield tobacco comes to the cigarette making machines it has been blended and cross-blended.

Then it is cut into long even shreds just the right size to smoke right and burn right.

Every Chesterfield Cigarette has to be perfectly made to get by our inspectors.

Until you open the package yourself the cigarettes are scarcely touched by human hands.

Mild ripe tobaccos, skilled workers and the most modern up-to-date machinery all help to make Chesterfield the cigarette that's milder, the cigarette that tastes better.

County Judges Writes On Increased Gas Tax

a letter written by Judges E. L. Pitts, president, State County Judges and Commissioners association, to Representatives A. B. Tarwater, H. Emmett Morse, Bob Alexander, George Moffett, B. L. Rogers and J. Doyle Settle, concerning the proposed increase in gasoline taxes.

"I am reliably informed that you gentlemen are among the leaders of the fight against the passage of House bills Nos. 325 and 483, introduced for the purpose of adding one-cent tax on gasoline to retire county and road district bonds incurred for the purpose of building lateral and local roads. Please be assured that we have the support of many good citizens in your efforts to defeat these bills. We have had the charge made against us of being selfish, but it occurs to me that those who favor the passage of these bills should be the last people in the world to impugn the motives of others who oppose the bills, since those who sponsor these bills cannot give any other reason for so doing than selfish reasons. It is unfortunate that some counties, during prosperous times, voted such a burden for the construction of lateral roads that have become almost unbearable during the past few years. But the attempt to lift their burden to the counties that had no voice on election day in their respective counties, is contrary to the policy of the American government and has been so recognized since the Boston Tea Party; they are trying to therefore, it would be taxation without representation." We are sorry for those counties who have such burdens; we are likewise sorry for our many friends and acquaintances who bought homes on the installment plan when times were good, but they were unable to meet their payments when the depression came; yet, our sympathy does not prompt any of us even those who are urging the passage of these bills, to dip down in our pockets and take the money we have earned for the support of our families and voluntarily contribute it to those who are losing their homes that they may save same. That is the very principle the advocates of these two bills are urging upon counties that have not seen fit to bond themselves to construct lateral roads. In my judgment, it would be proper to add an additional gasoline tax at this time, but if such is to be added, it should be equitably distributed and thus allow counties to receive a portion of it for road purposes whether they have any outstanding bonded indebtedness or not.

Some are still inclined to call the proposed plan the "County Judges' Plan," but these bills were not prepared by the County Judges' association nor did not originate with such group. They were prepared by the county auditor of Dallas county and Hon. W. P. Dallas, Dallas, Texas, one of the outstanding bond attorneys of the South, and I daresay they were prepared particularly to fit the needs of Dallas county, and incidentally they may fit the needs of several other counties, but there are many counties whose needs they do not fit.

These bills have been urged as "The Bond Assumption Bills," without any explanation as to what the one-cent additional gasoline tax is for, and without telling the origin of the bills. House Bill No. 483 has been drawn closely tied-in with the bill passed by the legislature authorizing the payment by the state of bonded indebtedness incurred by counties and road districts for the building of designated state and federal highways. It is, therefore, confusing and misleading to denominate these bills as "The Bond Assumption Bills," and I charge also that it would be more appropriate to call the "plan" the "Dallas County Plan," or "The Bond Holders' Plan," than it would to say "The County Judges' Plan."

Some have expressed surprise at me for taking the position I am when so many of the legislative committee whom I, as President of the State Association, appointed from each senatorial district in Texas, are advocates of these bills, but no committee can commit me to any legislation and not a one of them has ever challenged any statement I have made concerning the matter, so far as I know; therefore, I am at a loss to know why they are surprised unless it is because I am divulging too much of the truth about who originated the bills and where the one-cent additional gasoline tax will be spent, if levied. I have no crow to pick with them and have allowed them the privilege of proclaiming their convictions as loud and long as they may choose, but I shall take the same privilege.

I apologize for writing such a lengthy communication to you busy men, but again I express my appreciation to each of you and to all others who are opposing these unfair measures. I am confident these measures will not pass the legislature for the simple reason I believe we have too many fair-minded, aggressive men in your ranks who will see that such measures do not pass. I am not basing my hopes on the fact that I am opposed to the measures myself and that my influence will cut any figure in the matter, but upon the fact that there are too many good men among you to let such a tragedy happen. The above are my personal and deliberate convictions without any apology to any man, and any one or more of you are at liberty to use them if you choose.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Quite a few people have died painful deaths in the year since the first administration food and drug bill was licked, because they used fake patent medicines or cosmetics such as the bill was designed to banish. Others have been blinded or otherwise maimed. You'll find the record in publications of the American Medical Association. Of course it is unfair to expect politicians to be influenced by a little thing like that. The fate of this year's Copeland food and drug bill depends on whether a consumer's lobby can make things hot enough for certain senators who have been willing to sabotage the measure.

Consumers really haven't any lobby as such, but the job of rescuing the Copeland bill has been taken over by what's known here as the "female bloc," legislative representatives of a dozen or more national women's organizations. This group has been rather dead at times past. Already it has stirred up a large flow of squawk mail to senators. But the lobbyists for food companies, patent medicine companies, and insecticide companies—which want less federal regulation of use of arsenic on apples in buck-killing processes—have the edge to date.

THE bill was snatched off the Senate floor after Senators Bennett Clark and Josiah Bailey and the lobbyists had loaded it with so many amendments that Copeland felt it was worse than no bill at all.

The "female bloc" now seeks enough support to have the bill brought back to the floor with assurance that such amendments can be defeated, which means it must change eight or nine senatorial minds. (While hearings were being held this year, a beauty water operator in Florida was giving her mother a treatment with an eyelash preparation. Nine days later the mother died from the effects. She was unlucky. Most victims only go blind. The preparation has been publicly denounced by the Food and Drug Administration, but there's no law against it. It can be bought here on Pennsylvania avenue.) Well, it seemed the lobbyist for the food industries—Charles Wesley Dunn—had persuaded Copeland in effect to exempt proprietary foods from the bill's requirements for listing ingredients so people might know what they were eating—and paying for.

FOR six days the bill was debated in the Senate and Copeland was virtually the only senator who said anything about protecting consumers. The others who spoke sought to weaken the bill. Bailey had the best success. His amendment would prevent the Food and Drug Administration from seizing more than a single sample of a dangerous food or drug product without a local procedure which might require years to complete. There'll be no new food and drug act unless Bailey's amendment is killed, as it would give the government even less power to protect consumers than it has now. (Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.)

Another Beauty Won by Athlete

Beauties don't naturally seem to choose Gil Berry, former Illinois University football star and movie player, as a husband. Engagement of Berry and Miss Madeline Leonard, 21, above, is announced, two months after Winfred Hunt, beauty contest winner, divorced the ex-athlete. Miss Leonard is a talented Chicago amateur dancer.

seconds until he dashed out to the corridor, aware of the theft of the suitcase containing those precious books. Perhaps he would make for the elevator but it was far more likely that, in his haste to descend, he would dash down the corridor toward the stairs.

Millicent snatched up the suitcase and such was her excitement that she was entirely unconscious of its weight as she sped down the stairs. She had started down the last flight leading to the lower floor when she suddenly realized that she would be trapped between the lobby of the apartment house and the sidewalk, held back by the weight of the suitcase.

It would be impossible for her to walk as much as a block with that heavy weight. There was, of course, a chance that some rousing cab would stop by and pick her up as soon as she gained the sidewalk, but there was a far greater chance that Richard Gentry would overtake her at the curb if he didn't catch her in the lobby.

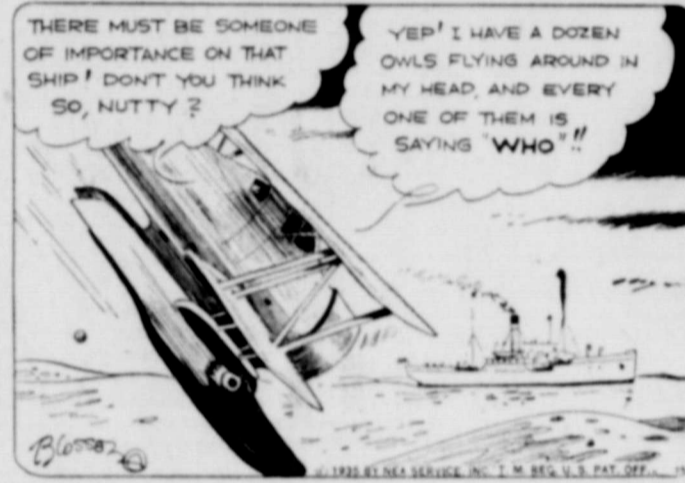

There was no time to balance the probabilities. She had to think and act fast. A window opened out to the fire escape and she flung the suitcase over the sill down to the steel-barred platform and followed it, almost before the suitcase had thudded to the steel grating.

She had barely gained the platform and adjusted her skirts about her ankles when she heard the sound of feet thudding down the staircase. She turned toward the corridor and saw Richard Gentry dashing past, running rapidly.

He shot past the window and she heard the bang of his feet on the lower stairway as he ran down toward the lobby.

Millicent looked below her and saw an alleyway, shaded and gloomy, piled with garbage cans, boxes, barrels, broken packing cases, and other bits of rubbish. She felt certain that, while perhaps an occasional truck might rumble through the alleyway, there would be but little traffic through it and few pedestrians.

With any sort of reasonable luck she seemed safe enough for the moment. It was getting out of the building which presented the real difficulty. She dared not return to the third floor, nor did she dare to descend to the lobby. She was trapped between the floors and would have to wait there until some opportunity for escape presented itself.

She turned the suitcase over on its side, used it as a seat, crossed her ankles, tucked her skirt about them, placed her elbows on her knees and waited.

After some moments she heard the thud of feet as two men laboriously climbed the stairs. One of them was talking and, while she could not catch what was said, she recognized Dick Gentry's voice and could tell that he was both angry and frightened.

The pair climbed up the stair to the third floor. She waited anxiously, but did not hear their return. The shadows lengthened, a coolness filled the air. Millicent felt cramped and weary.

Had the two men remained in the apartment on the third floor or had they returned by way of the elevator? She had no means of knowing and realized that she never could know without exposing herself to danger.

She picked up the suitcase, pushed it through the window to the corridor, stood listening for a moment but heard nothing except the distant rumble of traffic and the pounding of her own pulse in her ears.

Carrying the suitcase, she descended the stairs. The lobby was deserted. She crossed to the door, tugged it open and her heart gave a wild leap as a cruising cab driver, seeing her struggling with the door and the heavy suitcase, slid his car to the curb and flashed her an inquiring glance.

At her nod he slammed on his brakes, jumped across the intervening stretch of sidewalk, picked up the suitcase, and said, "Where to, Miss?"

She had no particular destination. She dared not go back to Jarvis Happ's house. She remembered the name of the cheap hotel where she had spent the night which followed Dringold's murder. She gave the caddy the name of the hotel and added, "I'm in a hurry. Please make it as fast as you can."

The cab lurched into motion and Millicent, flashing a glance back at the apartment house, saw a cabriolet swing around the corner and glide to a stop at the curb.

She saw Bob Caise jump from the car almost before it had come to a stop.

Millicent settled back in the cushions, too frightened to look back again, fearful that Bob Caise would see her and start in pursuit.

The cab swung into a main artery of traffic and Millicent suddenly realizing that she was a

The cab rounded a corner to the left, pulled in close to the curb. The driver jerked the door open, helped Millicent to the sidewalk, carried her suitcase into the hotel. She rewarded him with a generous tip and met the cynical appraisal of the clerk who stared at her from behind the desk with world-weary eyes.

Millicent knew the man's type. She stared at him haughtily and said, "Let me see your register, please."

He handed her the book and she looked back through the pages until she found the name under which she had registered and the room number that had been assigned to her. Then she closed the register and said, "What rooms have you vacant, please?"

"What sort of a room would you want?"

"I'll tell you when I see what you have vacant."

He handed her a chart. Millicent saw that the room she wanted was vacant, but she pointed to another room and said, "What's the price on this by the night?"

"A dollar seventy-five."

She frowned, slid her finger down until it rested on the room she wanted.

"This room?" she asked.

"That," he said, "will be $1.50."

"I'll take it," she told him, opened her purse, slid a bill across the counter, wrote in the register, "Miss Millicent Jones," and said, "Will you please have a boy bring up my suitcase?"

He banded the palm of his hand down on a bell and yelled, "Front." A sleepy looking bellboy emerged from an elevator, sized Millicent up with insolent eyes, and picked up her suitcase and the key which the clerk handed him.

Millicent pocketed her change, followed the bellboy to her room, handed him a small tip, closed and locked the door and even took the precaution of drawing the shades.

Then she went to the place where she had concealed the notebook in which she had written Dringold's dictation. The notebook was still there.

Millicent took the notebook, dropped it into the suitcase and faced herself in the mirror. She now had every bit of valuable evidence in the case in her possession. She had the shorthand notebook which had caused Bob Caise so much concern, the books of account which had been stolen, the note in Bob Caise's handwriting which definitely linked him

"What a prize I would be," she muttered. "Anyone who captured me now would have every shred of evidence in the case."

Her meditations were interrupted by the ringing of the telephone.

Millicent stared at it with a feeling of panic. The steady, insistent ringing of that telephone bell seemed to indicate that she had been discovered.

Slowly she crossed to it and took the receiver from the hook.

The voice which came over the wire was that of the clerk at the desk.

"Miss Jones," he said, "there's a gentleman here to see you."

"I don't want to see him. I know no one in the city. There's some mistake."

"The gentleman," the clerk said, "gave the bellboy a tip and is on his way up. I'm just letting you know."

Millicent gripped the telephone receiver, wondering what to do. As she wondered, imperative knuckles pounded against the door.

NAMES OF THE PRINCIPALS IS KEPT A SECRET

Rev. H. B. Johnson To Officiate and Merchants Have Offered Gifts.

A feature at the Arcadia Theatre that has been creating much interest and much speculation is the wedding to be held on the stage in connection with the showing of the picture, "The Gay Bride."

Announcements of the wedding were run in the Times, and a couple was sought to take the leading part in the real wedding. The couple was obtained and a rehearsal was conducted on the stage of the theatre this morning, with Rev. H. B. Johnson, pastor of the First Christian Church taking a part. He will officiate in the ring ceremony which will start at 9 o'clock.

The names of the bride and groom have been kept secret, and there has been much speculation as to who the principals in the wedding would be, with a number of young people in this section of the country being named in some of the guesses.

A number of Ranger merchants are cooperating with the plans and have donated a number of useful gifts to the lucky couple, which will be presented to them immediately after the wedding ceremony on the stage.

It is thought that this is the first time a real wedding has been held on a theatre stage since two members of a road show were married in Ranger on the stage of one of the theatres in 1929.

Merchants who contributed presents for the bride and groom are:

City Tailors, Charles Lay, Gholsen Barber Shop, Swaney Pharmacy, Texas Drug, Oil City Pharmacy, Ranger Furniture Exchange, Killingsworth Cox & Co., The Globe, Ranger Auto Parts, Montgomery Ward & Co., Clyde H. Davis Jewelry, J. C. Smith, Texas Electric Service Co., Paramount Hotel, Golden Florist, Arcadia Theatre employes, Gholsen Hotel, Vaughn Service Station, Moderne Studio, A. J. Ratliff, Bill's Dry Cleaners, Prompt Printery, Ranger Daily Times, and Arcadia Shine Shop.

Farm Census Head Speaks at Rotary Meet Wednesday

C. B. Pruet had charge of the Rotary club program today and presented E. E. Woods, farm census director for the 17th congressional district, which comprises 12 counties.

The speaker said the first census was taken in 1790 and required 18 months to be completed, though there were only 3,000,000 people in the United States at that time. The reason it took so long was that the census enumerators had to cover the country on horseback, in buggies and on foot to complete their work.

In contrast it was pointed out that in 1930 the census taking required but three months, when 122,000,000 people were listed.

A farm census has just been completed in Eastland county and the 17th district, which showed an increase of 785 farms in the district since 1930, with Eastland county showing an increase of 455 farms.

The fact that Eastland county showed such an increase, he said, was largely due to the work of one man, who covered the territory assigned to him on horseback when rains prevented other methods of travel. The work done in the district received special praise from the bureau of the census, he said, of which the workers were very proud.

The nominating committee named F. D. Hicks as president, L. R. Pearson, vice president; Dr. G. E. Haslam, as secretary-treasurer, and R. B. Canfield, J. C. Smith, Morris Bendix, E. L. Fontaine and L. R. Pearson as directors.

Visitors at the meeting were P. Pettit of Cisco, Dave Daniels of Mineral Wells and J. C. McAfee, of Cisco.

Girls Are Taking Much Interest In New Scout Troop

The efforts made by Mrs. T. L. Lauderdale last November toward organizing a Girl Scout troop in Ranger have been rewarded.

The troop now has a membership of 27 Ranger girls between the ages of ten and 18. The group is divided into four patrols, the Tiger patrol, under the leadership of Marise Chastain; Lion patrol, with Annie Sue Austin, patrol leader; Eagle patrol, with Jane Lauderdale, leader, and Wolf patrol, with Dorothy Henry leader.

Mrs. A. P. Shirey, who has her commission from the National Headquarters of Girl Scouts, Inc., is captain of the troop, with Mrs. Mayme Ruth Hamick and Miss Lillian Strain as Lieutenants. These leaders deserve much credit for the splendid work they are doing with this group of girls. Before the organization was complete, the troop sang Christmas carols at the hospitals and to shut-ins in Ranger and donated a large basket of food to a needy family at Christmas time.

A part of the program of the Girl Scouts is to develop citizenship and, in keeping with this objective, the girls have recently sold 500 seals for the Crippled Children's Society of Texas and, as a community project, they are going to plant flowers and shrubs in the new Ranger park.

The troop membership is as follows: Marise Chastain, Geraldine Pirkle, Annie Sue Austin, Noma Louise Dilworth, Doris Dudley, Alice Louise Henry, Jane Lauderdale, Polly Seymour, Dorothy Henry, Fanny Dell Swaney, Jane Matthews, Reba Hutchinson, Royce June Lyon, Eloise Packwood, Evelyn Childs, Marie Conway, Lois Bragg and Dorothy Byas, who have already passed their tenderfoot test and have been invested as Girl Scouts, and Betty Sue Blanton, Hazel Fondren, Doris May, Betty Gorman, Maxine Fondren, Kathryn Murray, Cleo Anna Moore, Lonnell Herring and Martha Hutchinson, who are working on their tenderfoot test.

The girls who have been invested as scouts are now eligible to wear the national uniform and each girl is working to earn funds to buy her uniform in time for the Girl Scout benefit bridge which will be held at the Country club on May 7th.

EASTLAND Society

Women's Missionary Society Baptist Church

Mrs. Frank Lovett was hostess to Circle 1 of W. M. S. of Baptist church, substituting for the announced hostess, who will assume her hospitality later.

Mrs. L. J. Lambert, the chairman, opened the session with the devotional, "The Wise Virgins and the Lamp," given by Mrs. Olin Norton.

Prayer was offered by Mrs. John Matthews, prefacing the study finished at this meeting, under direction of their teacher, Mrs. Paul McFarland, who conducted an examination after the lesson, with percentages to be announced.

Mrs. Lovett served refreshments of strawberry shortcake, whipped cream topping and tea.

Bible Class Studies Drawing

The meeting of the Ladies' Bible class in the Church of Christ Monday afternoon opened with the singing of "In the Garden," followed by prayer by Mrs. E. D. Hurley.

A lesson of interest and attraction was that of Mrs. Harry Wood, on the "Tabernacle," having as her illustration, a handsome, black board drawing in color, work of Rev. John G. Bills, pastor.

In Mrs. Wood's talk there was a minute description of the court, and furniture, with a comparison drawn between the tabernacle and the church, showing how the tabernacle was the type of the church.

Mrs. Loretta Herring taught a lesson on the "Preaching of Philip, His Methods, and Ways."

Mrs. John G. Bills dismissed the session with prayer.

Visiting Parents

Mrs. W. L. Brown and three-month-old Billie Frank, of McKinney are here for a several weeks visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. V. Williams.

Mrs. Brown passed the week-end Easter holiday with the family, and had a visit with his small son.

Mrs. G. W. Dakan Hostess

Mrs. G. W. Dakan brought the lessons in Circle No. 2, W. M. S. of Baptist church study hour, Monday afternoon, treating with the circle study, "Christ Ambassador," with an outline of the life of the famous missionary to China, Eugene Sallee, and in memory of whom a little band of young people in the Eastland Baptist church has been named the Eugene Sallee auxiliary.

Mrs. E. E. Layton, chairman of the circle which met at the home of Mrs. Dakan, opened the session and the prayer of John was brought by A. O. Cook.

Cookies and lead were served those present.

Life's Endeavor
