Relations With Japan Belie All War Talk

During the last three or four years, the average American came to recognize the word Japan as a synonym for trouble.

Japan was doing this, that, or the other thing in Chiina and Manchuria; Japan was refusing to abide by the Washington treaty; Japan was fortifying mandated islands in the Pcific; some day Japan and the United States would get together and fight it all lout.

That was the burden of most public references to Japan in this country. And since cultivation of an attitude like that is a necessary prelude to war, it all had a pretty omi-

But of late the keynote seems to have changed. We are beginning to hear talk about co-operation instead of talk about rivalry. Someone seems to have remembered that Japan is one of our best customers in the matter of foreign trade, and that fixing to fight your best customer is about the poorest known way of promoting a trade re-

The recent argument over Japanese exports of textiles lends point to this matter.

Japanese textile mills have been working overtime. They have sent finished goods into such traditionally English markets as India and China. They have sent them to South America, where both British and American mills have done business; of late they have even begun to send them into the United States itself.

This has led to protests, and the protests have led to a re-examination of our trade relations with the Mikado's empire.

Now the Japanese foreign office points out that, whatever the Japanese mills may do with their finished product, they at least buy most of their raw material from Inc., Ranger. American producers-

During recent years, for instance, America has sold approximately $100,000,000 worth of raw cotton to Japan annually. These sales constitute the largest single item in America's agriciultural export trade.

Last year the United States' sales of cotton to Japan outvalued the total of all Japanese exports to the United

In this connection it is worth remembering that Secretary of State Hull and Foreign Minister Hirota last year aged letters agreeing that there is no good cause lo friction between the nations; and it is also noteworthy that the Japanese are anxious to conclude a new treaty with the United States working out a non-competitive basis basis for the foreign commerce of the two nations.

All this is worth remembering, for the simple reason that it points in the direction of peace instead of war. Our navy may feel justified in holding its maneuvers in the Pacific; these figures indicate that the danger of war is only superficial, and that underneath there are most solid and substantial reasons for keeping the two nations at peace.

Good roads mean so much to a community; they are worth every effort that is put forth to get them.

Common sense should point out to every citizen the importance and economy of buying at home.

Every city has many pessimists-little men with little minds who watch with envy the progressive men of their

Relations With Japan Belie All War Talk

During the last three or four years, the average American came to recognize the word Japan as a synonym for trouble.

Japan was doing this, that, or the other thing in Chiina and Manchuria; Japan was refusing to abide by the Washington treaty; Japan was fortifying mandated islands in the Pcific; some day Japan and the United States would get together and fight it all lout.

That was the burden of most public references to Japan in this country. And since cultivation of an attitude like that is a necessary prelude to war, it all had a pretty ominous sound.

But of late the keynote seems to have changed. We are beginning to hear talk about co-operation instead of talk about rivalry. Someone seems to have remembered that Japan is one of our best customers in the matter of foreign trade, and that fixing to fight your best customer is about the poorest known way of promoting a trade revival.

The recent argument over Japanese exports of textiles lends point to this matter.

Japanese textile mills have been working overtime. They have sent finished goods into such traditionally English markets as India and China. They have sent them to South America, where both British and American mills have done business; of late they have even begun to send them into the United States itself.

This has led to protests, and the protests have led to a re-examination of our trade relations with the Mikado's empire.

Now the Japanese foreign office points out that, whatever the Japanese mills may do with their finished product, they at least buy most of their raw material from Inc., Ranger. American producers-

During recent years, for instance, America has sold approximately $100,000,000 worth of raw cotton to Japan innually. These sales constitute the largest single item America's agriciultural export trade.

Last year the United States' sales of cotton to Japan utvalued the total of all Japanese exports to the United Chevrolet sedan, Harvey Chevro-

In this connection it is worth remembering that Secretary of State Hull and Foreign Minister Hirota last year exchanged letters agreeing that there is no good cause for friction between the nations; and it is also noteworthy that the Japanese are anxious to conclude a new treaty with the United States working out a non-competitive basis basis for the foreign commerce of the two nations.

All this is worth remembering, for the simple reason that it points in the direction of peace instead of war. Our navy may feel justified in holding its maneuvers in the Pacific; these figures indicate that the danger of war is only superficial, and that underneath there are most solid and substantial reasons for keeping the two nations at

Good roads mean so much to a community; they are worth every effort that is put forth to get them.

Common sense should point out to every citizen the importance and economy of buying at home.

Every city has many pessimists-little men with little minds who watch with envy the progressive men of their

The mild cigarette the athletes smoke is the mild cigarette for YOU!

A cigarette so mild you can smoke all you wantthat's what athletes say about Camels.

Gene Sarazen says: "Playing as much as I do-I bare to keep in condition. I smoke Camels steadily. They are so mild they never get my 'wind'-never upset my nerves."

Other athletes back him up...."I smoke all the Camels I want, and keep in top condition," says Mel Ott, slugger of the New York Giants.... Georgia Coleman, Olympic diver, says: "Camels don't cut down

What this mildness means to you!...It means you can smoke Camels all you want! Athletes have made this discovery: Camel's costlier tobaccos are so mild, they can smoke all they please, without disturbing their "wind" or nerves.
