WAR VETERAN OVERJOYED AS VERDICT READ

Jury Had Previously Reported It Was Deadlocked on Verdict.

By United Press

GREENVILLE, May 8.—Sylvester Darden, 38, World War veteran, today was acquitted of murder charges for the shotgun killing of his eight-year-old son, Jackie, while the child was "sleepwalking."

Darden, who was defended by his war-time captain, was overjoyed when the jurors filed into the courtroom and the foreman read the verdict as court was opened.

The jury had reported to Judge Charles Berry last night that it was deadlocked. The court ordered the panel to continue efforts to reach a verdict.

Mrs. Darden was slain several weeks ago in her home near Greenville. Darden claimed he was awakened by a shot and found the boy standing by his mother's bed, holding a shotgun. He said the child still was asleep and would not awaken until a physician arrived.

Cisco Man's Car Found, Man Held To Be Returned

Steele Hill, county deputy sheriff, who early this week left for Trinity county to return an automobile stolen last week from W. J. Foxworth of Cisco at Olden, expected to return today.

Notification that the car, a 1935 Oldsmobile coupe, was found and a man arrested was given by Trinity county officers to the Eastland officials.

Foxworth had parked the car in front of a grocery store at Olden and after calling on the proprietor walked across the street to another. Presently a small boy came in and inquired if the car that drove up the street before wasn't Foxworth's.

"I reckon not," said Foxworth. "I just parked mine across the street."

"Dot 'Im sure it was," said the boy. They looked and Foxworth's car was missing.

Another boy said he saw a man climb into it and asked him: "Where are you going, fellow?"

"I'm going to see my boss," the boy said the man had replied. County officers believe the car thief is not a county resident, but is a transient.

BONUS VETO DELAYED BY A MANEUVER

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The Patman bonus bill was tied up in the senate today by a maneuver designed to protect it from a presidential veto that might catch its supporters off guard.

Senator Elmer Thomas, Dem., Okla., directed the movement as a means of delaying action until several who favor the bill can be present to vote to override the almost certain veto.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—President Roosevelt indicated today at a press conference that he might not wait his allotted 10 days to veto the Patman bonus bill.

Mr. Roosevelt by inferential answers to questions, made clear that he intended to veto the bill, but there never had been any doubt about that.

The Detroit radio priest came here to make the first of a series of 12 speeches at rallies designed to widen the scope of the National Union for Social Justice.

"Do you think the president will veto the Patman bill?" he was asked.

"President Roosevelt is too clever a politician to veto the bonus," Father Coughlin replied.

The priest was flushed with pleasure at passage of the bill, less than 48 hours after he took to the air to urge followers to bombard senators with petitions for payment.

Tuesday night a full rehearsal was held at the Recreation building, where the show will be presented on Thursday night for one performance only. The entire cast was present and the routine of the minstrel was rehearsed from start to finish. This was the first of the full-cast rehearsals, all previous practice periods being taken up with the specialties, but not in the order in which they are to appear Thursday.

The show is expected to round into full shape tonight, so that everything will run off like clockwork. Everyone knows his or her part now, and the only thing left to do is to get them in the proper sequence so they will for a continuous show.

The acoustics of the recreation building have been thoroughly tested and pronounced the best an auditorium could possibly have, so that people in any part of the house can hear easily. The test was made by dropping a small nail on the stage, while listener sat in various places in the auditorium, and in each instance the noise was readily heard.

The ticket sales were reported today to be good, with more people buying each day, so a large attendance is anticipated.

Those who have seen the rehearsals have pronounced it the best home talent entertainment that could possibly be presented in Ranger.

Cowboy Band of Hardin-Simmons Will Play Here

The story of the rise to prominence of the Cowboy Band of Hardin-Simmons university, which will appear in concert in Ranger on May 13 under the auspices of the Ranger high school, is phenomenal and almost unbelievable.

Its first concert effort a flop because only 35 people attended, five years later it was playing before crowded concert halls in Europe.

From an unknown college band to a world-famed attraction . . . from noisy ballyhoo to artistic ensemble . . . from obscurity to fame . . . all in the brief period of five years.

Organized in 1923 the band was invited to tour Texas that year, and it became famous almost overnight throughout the state. Chosen to quick succession as the official band of the Texas Cattlemen's Association, the Texas Industrial Institute, and the United Confederate Veterans, its name soon became known over the south.

Named as the official Texas band to the presidential inauguration in 1929, invited to play in New York city, its fame became nationwide.

Logsdon, who spoke on fraternalism, and Dr. W. L. Jackson, an honorary member of the fraternity, who spoke on the advancement of science in medicine. Miss Anice Locke gave several piano numbers with Miss Dora Wesley furnishing the Spanish vocals. Dr. Hal B. Parks gave the farewell address.

The tables were decorated with the blue and white emblems of the fraternity shield forming the centerpiece. Larkspurs and roses formed the floral decorations. The banquet was held in honor of the sophomore students of the fraternity who will be leaving in the near future, but with best wishes to them and hoping they will be back on special occasions. The following people were served:

T. C. Weaver, Florine Long, Velamae Belknap, Ruby Milburn, Robert Kidwell, Jack Waggoner, Jasper Woods, Pauline McGee, George Thomas, Delbert Capps, Hazel Erwin, Anita Crawley, Lorene Harrell, Audye Gentry, Thelma Thompson, Forest Lyon, Anice Locke, Dora Wesley, Lillian Seeliger, Helen Best, H. Baking Powder Use Explained

Because of the increased efficiency of K C and some other baking powders in use today, representing about 83 per cent of the baking powder consumed, they should be used properly to produce best results.

Knowing that baking powder leavens cake it is natural to assume that adding an extra half teaspoon to the amount specified in a recipe will give a cake greater lightness. The fact is that too much making powder may cause sinking in the center, tough, gummy crust, coarse dry crumb, or cake that runs over the pan.

For best results it is a good plan to follow two simple rules: First, always use the amount recommended on your baking powder can. With K C one level teaspoonful to a cup of flour is sufficient. This proportion has been worked out as best for that particular type baking powder. Second, measure carefully—an excess amount of any baking powder does not produce best results. A level teaspoonful means that you must level off with a knife.

K C baking powder, which is advertised regularly in the columns of this paper, is manufactured by baking powder specialists—who make nothing but baking powder—under supervision of expert chemists of national reputation. The quality is always uniform—K C is dependable.

Used according to directions it will produce the finest of baked goods, K C is one of the most economical and efficient products entering the kitchen. You will be convinced of this by giving it a trial and observing the results obtained.

The manufacturers will mail, postpaid, a copy of the K C Cook's Book if you will send them your name and address with a certificate from a can of K C baking powder. Send your request to Jacques Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill.

YOU'RE HAPPY WHEN YOU'RE FIT

Think back over the last month. The days you enjoyed most were the days you felt in great shape. Increase these sunny days by keeping fit.

Avoid common constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals. It may cause headaches, loss of appetite and energy. It dulls your enthusiasm, takes the fun out of living.

Kellogg's All-Bran furnishes you with "bulk" in convenient form. ALL-BRAN also provides vitamin B and iron. This gentle natural food is much better than patent medicines. Unlike cathartics, it remains effective with continued use.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Severe cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

How We Go Into War Not For Us To Know!

It is rather amazing to read Rodney Dutcher's story of the efforts of the Senate Munitions Committee investigators to find out how and why the United States got into the World War.

The committee has been studying a confidential report which quotes from scores of secret documents in State Department files. These documents are "considered too sensational for publication," according to Mr. Dutcher's story; but the senators have seen enough of them to get pretty good picture of the way we changed from neutral to combatant.

Now the jarring part of that story is that "too sensational for publication" line. Why are those documents classed that way? Whose government is this, anyway—the American people's, or a State Department clique's? Whose war is it that is being investigated? Who had to fight in it and pay for it—the people or the diplomats?

Those questions may sound naive; yet they point to a matter of vast importance to all the people.

Think for a minute over the disclosures already made, as Mr. Dutcher sums them up. He remarks that our industrial, commercial, and financial interests got their fortunes inextricably intermingled with the fortunes of the allies, so that defeat for the allies would have meant disaster for American trade.

This was a direct result of the neutrality policy our government adopted, under which we permitted American industry to sell billions of dollars' worth of munitions and foodstuffs to the allies, permitted our bankers to float huge allied bond issues in this country, and permitted England to cut off all our commerce with Germany and adjacent neutrals.

This was the set-up that finally got us into the war. It made us, in effect, a partner of the allies before we realized it. When it became necessary for us to make a decision, the cards were stacked.

Can anything be more important than for us to learn exactly how all this happened? The State Department files, apparently, will tell us; who has a right to say that these files are "too sensational for publication"?

Opening these files and spreading the documents before the public eye might give the diplomats the jitters, to be sure. It might give rise to pained expressions of regret in the British House of Commons, and elsewhere. It might give a few prominent Americans something to explain.

But what of it? The war cost us 100,000 lives, 200,000 men wounded, $22,000,000,000 in cash and a depression which has caused untold suffering and loss.

Aren't we logically entitled to learn all we can about how we happened to get into it?

San Thought Necessary

The Senate seems to be persuaded that it is necessary to do something for the tenant farmer; but it seems also to be persuaded that it is essential to proceed with a great deal of care, lest the remedy involve the nation in greater difficulties than the disease itself.

Thus the bill which would have Uncle Sam loan $1,000,000,000 to relieve dependent farm tenants is referred back to committee after nearly two weeks of debate. The committee is instructed to report not later than May 12.

That the helpless destitution of a large percentage of tenant farmers and "share-croppers" constitutes a national crisis is undeniable. But it is equally clear that hasty and ill-considered action to relieve it would be as bad as no action at all.

Low Rental Homes for City Dwellers

President Roosevelt is a very active, a very busy and a very progressive chief magistrate of all the people. Now it is known that low rental homes for city dwellers and a drive to better the living conditions of farmers who have poor land has been placed on the list of projects which the President expects to initiate early in the summer.

There is a large army of idlers—idlers through no fault of their own. There is another army of idlers who prefer the dole to a job. Billions have been voted for the employment of the jobless who are seeking jobs and those who are in charge of the spending of the $4,000,000,000 should give to it that thousands are taken from the relief rolls and given a fair wage instead of the dole of the idler who is not seeking a job and will not seek one as long as the dole is within his reach.

LEXINGTON, Ky.—They call him Derby Dick because he has saddled so many winners of the Kentucky Derby. His real name is Herbert J. Thompson, but what racegoers are more interested in is whether he is training his fifth Kentucky Derby victor on the white-fenced Idle Hour Farm of Colonel Edward Riley Bradley here.

Thompson's candidates in the big number of May 4 are Boxhorn, one of the ranking juveniles of 1934, and Big Gawk, untied, long-legged, and aptly named.

No other trainer ever saddled four winners of the famous mile and a quarter test at Churchill Downs. The great majority of them are extremely fortunate if they turn out a Derby winner once in a lifetime.

But Thompson has seen Behave Yourself, Bubbling Over and his bonching boy, Burgoo King; and Broker's Tip, all pointed for the event by him, come home on top.

Derby Dick has watched his horses finish one-two on two occasions.

Behave Yourself was the Bradley-Thompson combination's first Derby winner in 1921. He barely beat stiebamate, Black Servant, Bubbling Over came along in 1926 to score the easiest of Thompson's Derby triumphs. The big chestnut merely galloped in ahead of the field, with his running mate, Bagenbaggage, second.

Naturally, Bothorn is considered Thompson's main reliance this trip. He has been—and is—training splendidly at Idle Hour Farm.

Big Gawk has never started and that alone is deemed a sufficient handicap to prevent him from being a real contender.

But you never can tell about a Thompson-trained colt in the Derby. That's why they call the Bradley handler Derby Dick.

WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Don't be surprised if President Roosevelt stands up on his hind legs some day soon and publicly takes a petty swing at the locust swarm of lobbyists which infests Washington.

The lobbyists and the interests they represent are responsible for the tieup of the New Deal program in this session of Congress. The people last November gave Roosevelt the largest party majorities in history, but the special privilege group has had almost equally astonishing success in its attempts to stymie the president.

Some White House advisers would have Roosevelt slash out at the lobbyists and the motives and forces behind them. They point to the reply of AAA Administrator Chester Davis to the American Liberty League's attack on the proposed AAA amendments.

The Davis statement was especially illuminating and impressive because the league has issued pamphlets attacking virtually every important progressive measure proposed this session.

For some time Davis has been accused of bowing to the lobbyists of the food processors and distributors and to many equally selfish farm organization lobbyists.

AND FINANCIAL ORGANIZATIONS POSSESSING ASSETS OF MORE THAN $7 BILLION DOLLARS.

Something of the same sort from the president might go a long way toward furtherance of his pet measures.

NOBODY has been surprised to see a large pressure organization such as the American Legion assure the passage of some bonus legislation this session, though it's still a toss-up whether the A. F. of L. can push through such an advantageous measure as the Wagner labor disputes bill.

But conservative lobbies helped hold up the work-relief bill for months and, to a minor extent, at least, modified the executive's program.

The food and drugs bill, designed to protect consumers and favored by the White House, has very likely been ditched—by patent medicine lobbyists and representatives of food and other industries who seek to emasculate it by amendments.

THE AAA amendments are regarded by Davis and Secretary Wallace as vital to AAA's continuance, but lobbyists for food industries and farmers have made a football of them.

Transportation legislation is doubtful, thanks to fights put up—one way or another—by railroads, trucking companies and air lines.

Lobby tactics include not only attempts to defeat bills by direct vote, but more often to delay and to load down measures with confusing or hamstringing amendments, on the general theory that important measures are frequently lost in a last-minute jam.

CHAPTER XLVIII
Sergeant Mahoney turned to Norman Happ and said, "He's alive but drugged. I think they gave him an over-dose at the least, but we can save him if we can get him to a hospital in time."
"Pick up Bob Caise. Tell Cynthia she's wanted at headquarters at once. Pick up the dealer at 539 Torrence avenue. He's a chap about 68, with a mustache. Clear the corridor. This room and 309 with a loath comb. Take that man to quarters and make him talk."
Sergeant Mahoney bent over Gentry's body. He pulled from the pockets—cash, a hat, an envelope, a memorandum book. He thrust these things into his own pockets, nodded to Millicent.
"You and Norman come with me," he said.
The occupants of the apartment were curious and frightened, crowding into the corridor. Mahoney's men were pushing them clearing the hallway with efficiency.
Sergeant Mahoney wasted no time in the elevator. He took to his heels. Millicent and Norman followed him. Once in his car, he heard the scream of the siren as the car tore through the streets. Sergeant Mahoney skidded to a corner, slammed on the brakes.
"This is Dick Gentry's apartment," Norman Happ said. "Exactly," Mahoney told him. "Your father wasn't kidnaped by me. Gentry could have lured him to his apartment. We'll see if we can discover."
He fitted a key into a lock and opened a door, switched on lights and ran across the room.
"Norman Happ, apparently lifeless, sprawled on a bed."
Sergeant Mahoney leaned over and put an ear to his chest.
"Gentry lay motionless."
Sergeant Mahoney got to his feet, strode to the telephone, jerked the receiver from its hook, said, "Headquarters." While he waited for connection, he turned to

Norman Happ and said, "He's alive but drugged. I think they gave him an over-dose at the least, but we can save him if we can get him to a hospital in time."
"Come on," he said.
He led them down a corridor filled with stale air, jerked open a door, and they saw Cynthia Happ sitting in queenly state; Bob Caise, white, frightened and worried; Vera Duchene, trying to look nonchalantly haughty and failing lamely.
"Mrs. Happ," said Sergeant Mahoney, "it gives me pleasure to tell you your husband has been discovered alive and well."
"Thank God," Mrs. Happ said.
Sergeant Mahoney stared at her. "You say that," he said, "as though you meant it."
She met the accusation of his eyes. Her face blanched for a moment and then she said indignantly, "How dare you talk to me that way!"
Sergeant Mahoney turned to one of his men. "Did you get the suitcase full of books from the hotel?"
"Yes, sir."
"Was the shorthand notebook of this young woman with them?"
"Yes, sir."
"Bring it," said Sergeant Mahoney. "I can read those notes."
Bob Caise said, "It might interest you to know that he little baggie you're being so chummy with is the woman who's wanted by the police. She's the Murder Girl and the dirty little—"
Sergeant Mahoney stepped forward, slapped his hand across Bob Caise's mouth and said, "Shut up until you're spoken to."
Cynthia Happ screamed. Bob Caise went deathly white.
A detective appeared with Millicent's shorthand notebook.
Sergeant Mahoney opened the book, glanced significantly at Millicent, squinted his eyes at the shorthand and said, "Yes, I can read it perfectly. Now then, you folks listen to Dringold's confession, the last thing he dictated before he died."
Millicent knew the man was bluffing but, had she not known, he would have fooled her. His voice sounded exactly as though he were reading:
"I, George Dringold, am about to confess complicity in the murder of Arthur Caise. I didn't kill him, but I knew his wife intended to poison him. I procured the poison for her which she subsequently administered. I got a cut from the insurance money. This woman has since married Jarvis C. Happ and apparently is happy, but my conscience will not let me rest. I am going to make this confession and then kill myself. Mrs. Happ had a lover. His name was Richard Gentry. Gentry had no money and had no social position. Mrs. Happ was ambitious. She married Jarvis Happ because she wanted social position. Gentry remained intimate with her. She arranged a partnership between Gentry and Happ. Gentry embezzled money from Happ. I think Happ suspects what is happening. He telephoned me this afternoon and said he wanted to speak with me. I can't stand to talk with him. I am going to collect documents which will substantiate my statements, have this confession typed, sign it and send it to the police."
Sergeant Mahoney laid down the book, stared accusingly at Cynthia Happ.
"You can't prove it!" she said.
"Yes, I can," Sergeant Mahoney said grimly. "You took Gentry to Dringold's office. You let him in with a key you had secured from Millicent Graves by switching purses. You were the woman in the black ermine coat. Gentry and you killed Dringold and got away. Jarvis Happ came to interview Millicent too late. He thought Millicent might know something. He encountered her in the building. He was clever enough to follow her, befriend her, disguise her, and bring her to his house, but you penetrated the disguise. You were the one who typed the note telling her the woman in the black ermine coat was in the house. You gave Vera Duchene the ermine coat with which to decoy Millicent from the house. Then you intended to kill her. Bob Caise had purposely left his car with the ignition keys in it for Millicent to use in following the other car. Vera Duchene acted as your accomplice. She had an apartment under the name of Phyllis Faulconer and a car registered under that name."

Norman Happ said, "He's alive but drugged. I think they gave him an over-dose at the least, but we can save him if we can get him to a hospital in time."
"Come on," he said.

IF EVERYBODY with something to interest you should come and ring your bell, what a nuisance it would be! Think of the swarming, jostling crowd, the stamping of feet on your porch and carpets!

Every day we know of many callers who come to see you. They never jangle the bell—they don't take up your whole day trying to get your attention. Instead, they do it in a way that is most considerate of your privacy and your convenience. They advertise in your newspaper.

In this way you have only to listen to those you know at a glance have something that interests you. They make it short, too, so you can gather quickly just what you want to know. You can receive and hear them all without noise or confusion in a very few minutes.

In fairness to yourself look over all the advertisements. The smallest and the largest—you never can be sure which one will tell something you really want to know.

Pretty Bride Tournament Brings Smart Social Note To Week's Affairs

The calendar for the week has been heavily dated, with prominent affairs bringing together social groups for delightfully spent hours. Highlights of yesterday included the smartly arranged bride tournament given at the Ranger Country club under the auspices of Ranger Girl Scouts, and hosted by the captain, Mrs. A. P. Shirey, who was graciously assisted by troop committee, Meses J. A. Matthews, W. L. Downton, T. L. Landerma, Garvin Chastain, C. E. May and Harry Henry, and all members of the scout personnel. Orchid and pink larkspur formed a beautiful floral design for the mantel above the fireplace, interlaced at intervals with daisies and runners of fernery. The color note was further repeated in artistic fashion in massive clusters of larkspur standing in window baskets of white wicker. A gorgeous bouquet of pink roses sounded their color hue in the mass of blossoms when blended together presented a most fitting background for the hour which proved a delightful one.

Playing tables came in for their share of color dressed in pastel covers and appointed with matching accessories.

High score favor at the close of play went to Mrs. P. E. Moore, the lucky card to Mrs. Max Orr, high cut, Mrs. James Horton of Eastland, and low cut, Mrs. Walter Harwell.

Gifts presented the winners in dainty wrappings were given as compliments from Killingsworth-Cox, Joseph Dry Goods, Hassen store, Swaney Pharmacy, and Oil City Pharmacy.

A tea time brought a delicious plate of salad Toulouse, fancy cookies with Ritz crackers and coffee. The party guests, a charming personnel, was composed of a large number of Ranger bride lovers together with visitors from Eastland and Cisco.

There were some 80 tickets sold for the entertainment which indicates a lively group of young girls making up the troop of 33.

Brilliant Musical Program Observes National Music Week

Attention was focused last night on one of the loveliest social affairs of many seasons when the 1920 club observed National Music Week through the presentation of a beautiful musicale at the Methodist church at 8 o'clock.

For the floral note roses were used in profusion their fragrance and beauty accentuated through the long graceful runners of greenery and white blossoms intermingled in smart fashion.

The guests were greeted at the double entrances by hostesses, Mrs. Roy Ameson and Mrs. Ross Hodges and Mrs. Johanne Ducker and Mrs. B. B. Canfield.

Ushers wearing lovely evening gowns were Meses Jimmie Burge, Ira Wofford, Atteberry and Miss Mary Milo Davenport. Mrs. M. H. Buchanan opened the program and presented Mrs. C. E. May who offered a delightful musical address on "Appreciation of American Music."

The following program was given with each artist displaying talent in brilliant degree of manner for an audience accorded as one of the largest ever to have attended such a worth while entertainment.

Closing prayer was said by Dr. Walter Jackson.

PERRY MASON AT ARCADIA

Quite a problem this time for our "Mr. Mason" (Warren William). A man dead for four years comes to life and is found stabbed in the back... and "Mr. Mason" must prove he wasn't murdered! He does it, of course, aided by the fistic feats of Allen Jenkins (right) and the beauty of Margaret Lindsay. It's the Clue Club's most thrilling production to date—"The Case of the Curious Bride," now at the Arcadia Theatre. Donald Woods, Claire Dodd, Philip Reed are also in the cast.
