Moral Issue in War Soon Is An Illusion

You cannot talk very long about our chances for staying out of this "next war" that everybody seems to be expecting without ringing in at least a few echoes from the last one.

What happened between 1914, when the European war started, and 1917, when we finally got into it is not entirely clear even today. But it is about all we have to go on when we try to forecast the future, and it has a way of hornoring in on all our arguments.

One is reminded of it by some speeches made the other evening before the Foreign Policy association in New York. There was a round table discussion of the war-and-peace problem, and a lawyer named Frederic R. Coudert expressed himself as follows:

"I disagree with the assumption that war is a most terrible thing. The people of this country will not be satisfied to preach neutrality rights, to keep their flag off the high seas. They will want to know if there is a moral question involved in the war.

"They will prefer to take part in the war if it is against a brutal aggressor. They are 120,000,000 energetic idealists who will not shut themselves up lest they be drawn into a war, but will take sides unflinching by fear of war."

With the statement that we will want to know if there is a moral question involved in the next war there can be little quarrel. The only trouble with it is that you so often can't be sure about a thing like that until some 20 years afterward.

If you will cast your mind back to 1917, you will recall that we had not the slightest doubt, at that moment, that there was a tremendous moral issue at stake. Freedom, democracy, civilization itself—they all hung in the balance, and if we did not go forth to fight for them they were apt to be lost.

So, as you remember, we did go forth to fight, and the cause with which we sided won as overwhelming a victory as the history of warfare records.

So what? So freedom, democracy, and all the rest were preserved and made forever secure? Just where—in Italy, in Germany, in Russia, in Poland, in Yugo-Slavia — or where?

The bright moral issues of 1917 don't look as clear now as they once looked. We may be 120,000,000 energetic idealists, but we might be better off today if we had been just a bunch of suspicious cynics.

And that's the trouble. Go around looking for moral issues in the midst of a great war and you lay yourself wide open to the sale of a gold brick.

The one great lesson of 1917 is that if we are to protect our neutrality we must start long before the shooting actually begins.

Centennial Runs Gauntlet of All Its Foemen

Congratulations to the lawmakers of Texas. Congratulations to the governor. Congratulations to the publishers of newspapers and their staffs who forced the issue to a showdown and made success possible for the "anniversary birthday of freedom" to be observed in the coming year. Congratulations to the Texans who have passed away and who gave a commonwealth as a heritage to the 6,500,000 native or adopted children of the Lone Star who will be on earth to celebrate the occasion from the gulf to the foothills of the Rockies and from the Red to the Rio Grande. Now on with the procession and in passing show and make it one of the most sublime in a panoramic and historic sense ever given to the people of an American state.

Dictator Hitler Shackles the Religious Press

Dictator Hitler appears to be all powerful beyond the Rhine—for the time being. He has crushed once for all the entire German church press, Catholic as well as Protestant, and all Jewish organs still existing on a religious or racial basis. There are men in America, (perhaps there are a few women), who long for the coming of an American dictator given the authority to destroy the bill of rights of the constitution, to destroy the freedom of the press, to destroy the freedom of speech and to reduce to intellectual or economic serfdom all men and women who refuse to bow to the mace or the bludgeon of an autocracy and the armed warriors who execute his commands.

The editor of the Cranbrook, B. C., Courier says that when a grouse tries to crash into a liquor store, it is news. He says that recently the government liquor vendor had difficulty in keeping a grouse from entering the liquor store. The bird made several attempts to enter the building, evidently bent upon quenching its thirst at the government joy house.

For the Texas Centennial Celebrations of 1936

Sadness had come upon the republic over the death of two well-loved citizens. One was the President of the United States, Andrew Jackson, and the other was Kenneth L. Anderson, vice president of the republic. Anderson had died the last week in June, 1845. He was "a man of great tact, unquestioned integrity, and natural kindness of heart. He kept his popularity throughout his political career. We meet a few such men in life," the Northern Standard editor of Clarksville wrote. It was a blow to his friends to lose him. President Jackson had died in the States, and Texas had been represented at his funeral by Gen. T. J. Green, George Van Ness, Lieutenant Clarke and Branch T. Archer, recently resigned from the cabinet.

shame and disgrace. It mattered little that the owner also manufactured tin ware, copper ware, and made casts for bells and "sturups."

There had been truly a shocking news of happenings in Galveston, however. A city that formerly had good morals was now in a state of corruption, it was said. A woman was fined for beating her husband, a man was sent to jail for assaulting his wife, and another man was sent to jail for drunkenness.

Thus we glimpse life in early Texas communities. There was a constant series of events that kept the attention of the settlers on things other than their worries. Manners and customs have changed in Texas' hundred years of independence, but Texans are fundamentally the same. Centennial celebrations of 1936 will be dedicated to the pioneers, for the noble work that they did for our state.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Katharine Strykhurst, 20, is discontented and restless because her father, Victor Strykhurst, an aristocratic stepmother, refuse to let Katharine take any sort of work. Katharine rides daily with Michael, a young westerner who runs a riding club. She assures him she is not interested in him but feels a pang of jealousy when Sally Moon, local co-ed, enrolls at the club for her first ride.

Parker, Katharine's friend, comes from Europe where she was taken to forget a love affair with Gibbs Larkin, of whom she has since disapproved. Zoe tells Katharine she must see Gibbs, because she has to help her arrange a date.

Go On With the Story

CHAPTER IV

She glanced at the riders—Michael and Sally Moon—and said absently, "So she's got her hooks on him?"

Katharine felt the hot color rise to her cheeks. She pretended not to hear. Her heart had plunged—righted itself. She steadied against the door of the house that Zoe should not see her trembling.

Head of them, under the high arch of trees, Michael and Sally Moon. The sound of horses' feet rang loudly in the stillness. Katharine could see a flash of sun on the red crest of Michael's cap. Sally dropped toward him his attitude toward her, even at a distance, seemed protective, was all absurd; it was not Katharine's affair, certainly, if she rode with Sally Moon.

"I'll count on you, then," she heard Zoe say, in the confusion of her mind.

"What? I didn't hear you?" Katharine's tone was confused, her face flaming.

"I'm daring and think over it," she said, taking a trip to the office. "Zoe coaxed, 'Mother, don't mind a bit if you suggest it. She wouldn't even suspect.'"

"Oh, really!" Katharine was unaccountably nettled by the suggestion that she, at 20, was so staid and reliable that a willful, pretty child like Zoe might be trusted with her anywhere. What did people think she was made of, anyway? She had feelings like the rest of them. Anger swept her, swift and unreasoning. She wanted, recklessly, to strike out, to hurt someone. She felt savage—she who was usually so cool and judicious.

Zoe was in no hurry to get on. She lighted a cigaret now, from the little silver case she always carried, and offered Katharine one. The other girl refused.

Zoe nodded in the direction of Sally Moon's departing figure. The absurd yellow cap could be seen, hobbling in tune with the mare's jaunty trotting movements. "Hear she's refused Howe Mackenzie?"

"Oh, I don't believe it," Katharine said sharply.

Zoe giggled. "Why, Kay, I believe you don't like that girl."

Katharine shrugged her shapely shoulders. She hated the subject, but was fascinated by it. Howe Mackenzie, fat and rather stupid, a bore at 30, was in the nature of a town joke. Yet Sally had been sought in marriage... that was something. Howe was rich. Some day he would be important in local politics; that was the way the straws pointed. Sally Moon, foolish and deceitful and cheaply pretty, had had a chance to become a wife...

Not that Katharine wanted marriage. But, from her chilly and rather bewildered heights she wondered how it was done. Sally knew how. She had a system, involving the use of eyes, of furtive, fleeting caresses, of murmured words on dance floor and veranda. Katharine had always held herself aloof from what she called "that sort of thing." Now, suddenly, she was curious.

"Sally has her points," Zoe said carelessly, as if she read her companions' thoughts.

"Oh, I don't doubt it!" Even to Katharine herself the words sounded vaguely bitter. She wouldn't stoop, she told herself, to the sort of thing Sally indulged in—brushing against a man's shoulder, appearing to stumble and catching the nearest masculine hand or arm, straying oneself with the most seductive perfumes...

"You're a funny girl," Zoe said curiously, almost speculatively. "Don't you like men?"

Katharine slid the door lever open jumped lightly to the ground. In the bright light of early morning her skin was flawless, ivory stained faintly with an apricot glow. Her fair hair curled in little tendrils about her face. "Why, she's gorgeous looking, really," the other girl thought. "What wouldn't she be like if she waked up!"

"Don't be a goose," Katharine said good-naturedly. "I don't know how we got on the subject. Of course I like men. Don't I dine and dance and swim with them?"

"Oh, it isn't that. I know you have heaps of beaux," Zoe hastened to amend contritely. "It's just that—well, you're sort of casual with them. I don't believe you've ever even felt a flutter. Have you?"

Katharine shrugged. "All this talk of flutters," she said with distaste. "It makes me—well, just a bit sick."

"There, you see?" cried Zoe. "I knew it! You're on the heights most of the time. And," she added mysteriously, "they don't like it!"

"Who doesn't?" Katharine, comprehending perfectly, was purposefully lofty.

"Men," said Zoe softly. "They're afraid of you."

"Let them be!" said Katharine. "Oh, don't be cross," coaxed the little girl at the wheel of the roadster. "I only wanted—well, it does seem such a waste—your being so gorgeous and all that..."

"You think," began Katharine with superb scorn, "that being in love's such fun. Is that it?"

Zoe, remembering her tears and they all seemed, thought the girl, with envy. Here there was literally nothing to do. In the garden a gnarled Italian worked as Mrs. Strykhurst, moving capably from bush to bush, gave orders in her concise voice. Maids were busy above stairs, shaking out fresh linen for the beds. The cook sang over her pudding sauce in the kitchen.

Katharine clenched her hands. "I've got to do something," she said. "I can't just drift around here. It seems to me that everyone else in the whole world has a place—a meaning." Her eyes filled, to her dismay and anger, with tears.

Ellen, the pleasant Irish parlor-maid, came out upon the veranda at the moment.

"There's a gentleman to see you Miss. I left him in the lib'ry."

Katharine took the card from the little silver tray and read, "John Gilder Kaye."

Instantly she was on her feet, cool vault that was lined with her father's books.

"Why, Johnny Kaye! Wherever did you drop from?"

The people in Innicook who thought Katharine Strykhurst cool and self-contained would have been amazed at this transformation in her. The man of 30 who rose from the deep leather chair evidently was not surprised at the warmth of her welcome. Her two hands were clasped in his. There was a duet of voices as Mrs. Strykhurst passed the window and glanced curiously within.

"So John Kaye's back," observed Bertine Strykhurst with satisfaction. "Well, perhaps we shan't have Katharine moping any more."

Few seem to know that a war is going on between Bolivian and Paraguayan troops, there not being an upside-down stomach or a running along the hall to the dark, Mae West ex-husband in the lot.

"I won't have a thing to do with it," Katharine declared.

"Oh, how mean of you!" Katharine strode up the lane without a single backward look as Zoe, after one or two reproachful mutterings, slid the car into gear. Oh, it was altogether a horrid day! Now Zoe would be angry and Katharine felt within herself the murmurings of a deep discontent. She longed, suddenly, to be doing something important—going to Paris to study art, taking a school in the southern mountains as Harriet Greene had done, making something real and important of her life.

Terrible to be a girl—even in this day of much vaunted freedom for woman. Poor girls, Katharine mused, had all the luck. They could strike out for themselves. They could have the infinite satisfaction of doing work that was fascinating and important or both. She hated her soft, easy, uninteresting life. To go back home, to listen to her stepmother talk prettily of bridge and new slipcovers for the morning room, seemed unendurable.

The house was dim and shaded when Katharine reached it. Wisteria and ivy swung before the drawing room windows. Striped cherry and white awnings shut out the sun from the long veranda facing the water. The Parker place was some few hundred yards away, separated from the Strykhurst's only by the grounds of a convent. Through the wooden lattice work, Katharine could see a few novices moving gently up and down the paths. An old nun was reading from her daily office book. In the grape arbor, two or three lay sisters worked busily, talking softly together. How happy and busy

SHE CALLS IT A

COOKS TOUR

NOBODY thought Katherine would make a very good wife. She seemed too frivolous. Always made a game out of everything. Hadn't a practical thought in her head—so it seemed.

Maybe that's why she DOES make Ed such a good wife. You still wouldn't think she was serious about a thing. Yet she must be. Because you've never seen a house kept better in your life. Or a budget balanced more neatly.

Most women come home from shopping all tired out. Not Katherine! She makes a grand game of it... calls it her weekly "Cook's Tour." She pores over her newspaper like a travel map... charts a course that takes her to bargain ports... and gets there without one wasted step.

How? She follows the advertisements... Watches them as closely as a sailor watches his compass. And she gets fun out of it all... But who wouldn't, with a happy home like hers and her knack for saving up money!

Mr. and Mrs. George Manning of Overton spent Sunday in Ranger visiting friends among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Wade Swift.

Cowboy Band to Play at School Building Tonight

Chief Yowlache, or Lucky Hand, a native Indian singer of the Yakima tribe in the Pacific northwest, is the newest featured attraction of the Cowboy band of Hardin-Simmons university, Abilene.

Yowlache, fresh from series of appearances in concert in the East, is a stage Indian who is not theatrical. Clad in white buckskin with authentic trappings of beads, eagle feathers and yardlong fringe, the bronzed youth of 27 years makes an instant impression of original power.

The chief possesses an unusually big range and his diction is nearly perfect. His use of nuance, dynamics and a richly varied color palette is much in evidence in his singing. He has one of the loveliest falsettos imaginable and employs it with artistic effectiveness.

Yowlache has appeared with the Los Angeles Symphony orchestra where he thrilled a large audience. Many auditors came to see an Indian but remained to hear an artist.

The chief will be heard in several numbers with the Cowboys here on May 13 at the High School auditorium.

Miss Allie Virginia Walker of Fort Worth visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Walker and sister, Mrs. Bascom Johnson and husband over the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Johnson of Commerce spent the week-end with his father, Rev. H. B. Johnson and wife.

Tom Malloy of Shreveport, La. is a business visitor in Ranger.

Cliff Wilson of Eastland visited Ranger friends Sunday.

Mrs. George Cunningham of Abilene, the former Miss Bertha Outlaw, is visiting her mother and daughter, 220 South Austin street, and other relatives in Ranger.

Soft Ball Games Will Start Today

The soft ball season will start this afternoon at 6 o'clock with the first game of the season scheduled between the Times and the Lone Star Gas company team.

Two additional teams have been added to the roster, which makes 10 teams in the league, and a new schedule is now being drawn up for the first half of the season.

The schedule, as published in the Times, will be carried out through Thursday of this week, with the Future Farmers and the Hi-Y teams, the two new teams in the league, playing on Friday.

The new schedule will be carried in the Times of Tuesday afternoon.

J. C. Smith, chairman of the Fourth of July celebration in Ranger, announced today that the meeting, originally called for tonight in the office of the Chamber of Commerce, had been postponed until next Monday night, May 20.

The reason for postponing the meeting was that the regular meeting of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce had been postponed and it was thought best that the meeting be held in conjunction with the directors' meeting, so that most of the business mer of the town could be present.

The tentative plans, as outlined, call for an old-fashioned picnic to be held at the new city park on the new Straws highway, with free barbecue, sack races, potato races and many other of the old-time picnic features, with prizes for contest winners, red lemonade and everything.

All the merchants have been urged by the chairman to keep the meeting date in mind and to be present at the meeting to be held on Monday, May 20.

A night in Paris—without the morning after.
That is how advance reports describe "Folies Bergere," Darryl F. Zanuck's new 20th Century musical extravaganza starring Maurice Chevalier, which began a two-day run at the Arcadia theatre today.

The lavish dance and musical presentations, featuring more than 70 of Hollywood's loveliest dancing girls, were staged by Dave Gould in the sensational manner in which the Paris musical institution from which the film takes its name as well as its mood and settings, is world-renowned.

Maurice exerts the inexhaustible Chevalier charm in doubt measure in "Folies Bergere," which offers him, in his first dual role not only as Charlie, the gay, straw-hatted, singing star of the Folies Bergere, but as a mo-mustached, be-mo-nocled French baron whom he impersonates in his act as well.

The fun begins when the Baron goes off to try to raise funds to cover a bank shortage and the actor is called in to impersonate him in life as well as upon the stage.

Complications develop when the Baron returns unexpectedly and learns that his wife has been flirting with Chevalier. To test her, he turns the tables by impersonating Chevalier and an impassioned love scene ensues, with the wife uncertain whether the man is her husband or merely Charlie's impersonation of him.

Ann Sothern and Merle Oberon have the leading feminine roles in "Folies Bergere," which Roy Del

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE
IT'S about time to be putting away woolen blankets for the summer, and as I like to dry mine outdoors I'm looking for the first warm day with a gentle breeze so I can wash them and put them away clean.

Moths dislike clean fabrics, so if you put your blankets away fresh and sweet you'll disappoint the moth-eaten creatures.

It's a good idea to wash blankets before they get very much soiled. The soft wool fiber is easily injured by too harsh methods, so take care in handling them.

Use soft water, or if you have hard water, soften it. Use a reliable water softener, such as borax, to soften hard water.

Lukewarm Water Is Best
Lukewarm water must be used for both washing and rinsing. Heat and cold both have a tendency to shrink woolens and heat discolors as well as shrinks them.

A mild soap thoroughly dissolved in the water before the blankets are put in does much to restore the softness as it cleans.

Do not rub any part except the binding. This naturally may be more soiled than the rest of the blanket, so it may be rubbed there with the hands if necessary.

If the blankets are badly soiled put them through two or three waters, always the same temperature.

Don't wash them for an extra long time in one water. Five to eight minutes is as long as one washing period should last.

Take care not to crowd the washing machine. One big double blanket or two single blankets are all that should be washed at one time in the average-size washer.

Rinse through two clear waters of the same temperature as the soapy water. Add enough dissolved soap to make the water

Ruth directed from a script by Bess Meredith and Hal Long, for release through United Artists.

Lumsden Hare, Robert Craig, Walter Byron, Earl Blore, Ferdinand Muner and Ferdinand Gottschalk are also prominent in the cast.

Chevalier sings four tuneful new songs, written by Jack Meskill and Jack Stern, and a fifth by Burton Lane and Harold Adamson, as well as a chorus of the memorable "Valentina," in which he scored on the Paris and American musical stages.

Helpful Baking Hints to Users of Baking Powder

Always sift flour and K C baking powder together at least three times. The more sifting, the lighter, finer texture the cakes, biscuits, etc., will be.

To mix a cake, first cream butter and sugar thoroughly, then add yolks, if used. Then, to this mixture, alternately add moisture and the flour that has been sifted with baking powder and stir until smooth and glossy, adding beaten egg whites after thoroughly mixing.

For cakes, have your oven slow to moderate at first, until the cake is fully risen; then increase the heat, so as to just brown lightly.

Here are a few choice recipes. You will like them.

K C Everyday White Cake
1/2 cup butter (4 oz.), 1 cup granulated sugar (8 oz.), 3/4 cup milk, 2 cups flour (8 oz.), 2 level teaspoons K C baking powder, whites 3 eggs, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract.

K C Bran Muffins
2 1/2 cups unbroken bran (3 1/2 oz.), 2 cups flour (8 oz.), 1 1/2 teaspoons salt, 2 eggs, 1 1/2 cups milk, 3/4 level teaspoons K C baking powder, 4 tablespoons sugar (2 oz.), 3 tablespoons melted fat (1 1/2 oz.).

Note: Permitted the bran to soak in the milk for 1 1/2 hours before adding the other ingredients, adds greatly to its palatability. Bake 35 to 40 minutes at 350 to 375 degrees.

K C Baking Powder Biscuit
2 cups flour, 2 level teaspoons K C baking powder, 4 level teaspoons shortening, about 2-3 cup milk or water, 1/2 teaspoonful salt.

K C Doughnuts
3/4 cup granulated sugar, 1 cup sweet milk, 3 tablespoons melted butter, 3 cups flour, 3 teaspoon mace, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately, 2 level teaspoons K C baking powder.

Bring Man Charged With Forgery From State Penitentiary

Brought Saturday from the state penitentiary at Huntsville by Steele Hill, county deputy sheriff, on a bench warrant, Aaron Snyder Monday awaited in the county jail facing forgery charges in an Eastland district court.

Snyder, indicted by a recent grand jury, will probably be tried next week when Judge B. W. Patterson returns from Dallas, where he is now conducting court, Steele Hill said.

Dentist-Lobbyists Scored By Solon

AUSTIN.—Rep. Roy Hofheinz, the "burning boy" orator from Buffalo Bayou, delivered himself of a few well-chosen blasts at lobbying dentists in the State Legislature recently.

He charged a spectator in the gallery, and his blonde woman companion, a Houston woman whom he said he knew and liked, with flagrant lobbying throughout the present session.

"They told me if I were not for them they would give me hell two years from now. I told them, as I tell you now," Hofheinz shouted to the public address microphone, "that if there was any hell-giving to be done, I would be the one that would give it."

The Houston representative delivered an open attack upon Rep. J. C. Gavel of Tarrant county, who had vigorously attacked the proposed dental advertising regulation measure then under consideration.

He told the House that Representative Duvall was attorney for the owner of a chain of dental establishments from "East to coast," and that Duvall had written him asking that he give the Doctor a "careful audience" when the latter called on Hofheinz in Houston.

As he talked, Representative Hofheinz displayed large dental advertisements clipped from newspapers.

Rep. Tom Cooper, Smith county newspaper publisher, himself among the youngest members of the House, ascribed Congressional ambitions to his colleague from Houston.

He said: "In talking about advertising, doesn't Mr. Hofheinz think we realize he is advertising himself for Congress? I've heard rumors of it."

Toronto professor says he can't tell women from men on a certain midwestern college campus. All he has to do is watch a couple of students talking; the one that blushes is the man.

The Mother's Day Program Well Attended Here

One of the largest gatherings seen in sometime assembled at the First Baptist church, Ranger, last night when the Masonic lodge sponsored a Mother's Day program in which all churches of the city co-operated.

G. W. Thomas, pastor of the First Baptist church, preached in Cisco so that Rev. E. S. James, principal speaker on the program, might keep the appointment as principal speaker on the Mother's Day program.

R. E. Harrell, master of the lodge, thanked all for co-operating and asked Clyde L. Garrett of Eastland to act as master of ceremonies.

Invocation was pronounced by Rev. H. H. Stephens, in the absence of Rev. J. M. Bond, who was called out of the city.

Floyd Killingsworth, Arthur DeFebach, M. C. Shingleton and Truman Head sang "That Wonderful Mother of Mine." Violin music under the direction of Miss Gillian Buchanan, several numbers being presented.

Mrs. D. T. Wier sang "Mother Machree."

D. C. McRae, who has been a Mason for more than 50 years, was presented with a beautiful bouquet from the lodge. He was made a Master Mason in 1885 and has been active in Masonic work since that time.

Mrs. J. M. Fox of Ranger received the beautiful floral design presented by the lodge as the oldest mother present. She was 80 years old in April and the mother of four children.

Rev. E. S. James of Cisco, principal speaker of the evening, took for his text, "Son, Behold Thy Mother." These were Jesus' words to John as He was on the Cross.

Rev. James is a very forceful speaker and his audience was delighted with the message. It was announced that Rev. James was considering holding the revival for the First Church sometime later in the summer.

Rev. L. B. Gray, pastor of the Presbyterian church, pronounced the benediction.

The pulpit in the church was beautifully decorated with flowers by members of the Eastern Star chapter and friends. Those on the program with the speaker and master of ceremonies were D. W. Nichol, minister of the Church of Christ; Rev. H. B. Johnson, pastor of the First Christian church; Rev. L. B. Gray, pastor of the First Presbyterian church; Rev. H. H. Stephens, pastor of Central Baptist church, and D. C. McRae, Mason for more than 50 years.
