Heirs Advance Causes For High Legacy Tax

Some of the strongest arguments in favor of the stiff inheritance tax program brought forward by the admin tration are furnished by the very people whom such a pr gram would hit.

No newspaper reader can have missed these arg

During the last year or more there have been endle coumns of stories about the litigation over the estate of the late Smith Reynolds, for instance.

This young man inherited something like $30,000,000. He married a young woman, was divorced, contracted a second marriage, and then died of a bullet wound under circumstances that made his death a nine-day sensation. Since his taking-off, his assorted relatives have been in and out of the courts trying to find out who is going to get that $30,000,000

The whole business has been something of a spectacle, devoid of edifying features.

Then there has been the charming Barbara Hutton. This young woman, heiress to a 5-and-10-cent-store fortune, has also been in the papers considerably.

To date she has two foreign titles to her credit, and reams upon reams of newspaper clippings; and to her felow countrymen she has given an excellent demonstration of the way in which an ordinary American girl can win tabloid notoriety when she has more money than she really needs.

And then, of course, there is our old friend, Tommy Manvile, whose forebears made millions by marketing a serviceable brand of asbestos, has won a reputation as a "Broadway playboy." He got into the papers most recently when his fourth wife, a young woman from a Broadway musical show, had some sort of spat with him.

She was at pains to explain to reporters that she didn't | France's Henry Ford want either a legal separation or a settlement of $1,000 a month, which is the figure at which her hubby's former wives have been pensioned off.

Now all of this sort of thing is more than familiar to readers of the Sunday supplements. The country has its full quota of young people who inherited great riches they never earned, and it is not at all surprising that some of way to industrial power. them have managed to get into the newspapers rather frequently.

What is surprising is that it has taken us so long to let Dog Race Decision their example remind us that the nation might take a far larger slice of that unearned wealth without doing an injustice to anyone.

As between using a rich man's estate to help meet the nation's expenses and using it to buy foreign titles or provide $1000 a month for deserving ex-wives of playboys- racing with pari-mutuel betting. well, the ordinary citizen won't see much room for argument as to which is the socially wiser course.

This new small-model electric refrigerator with the door in front is one of the new low-priced refrigerators that is being displayed by dealers.

The "lift-top" electric refrigerators have won quickly a host of new friends, especially those who have small families or whose refrigeration needs do not include a large storage space. These models are designed for apartments, small families, small stores and cafes.

A SK any woman what she likes most about her electric refrigerator and she will have a difficult time in answering. There are so many things about an electric refrigerator that endears it to every woman that no single advantage stands out alone.

It is Beautiful. Its white porcelain exterior and interior are easy to clean and to keep

It is Convenient. Times without number the woman who owns an electric refrigerator is reminded of the steps saved, the time saved and the uncertainty that is eliminated by constant, automatic refrigeration.

It has Quality. Nothing in the kitchen is as finely and carefully made as an electric refrigerator. Into it goes years of engineering experience, and above all, many more years of actual use by millions of women who have helped make the modern electric refrigerator of today.

It is Economical. In addition to the other advantages, an electric refrigerator saves money and saves food. It is inexpensive to own, and costs only a few cents a day to operate.

Beauty . . Convenience . . Quality . . Economy . . . . all are yours with the new Electric Refrigerators.

go to England at once, after all. When she was well enough Michael took Katharine back to Silencie, where Miss Daisy and Miss Roxana and Miss Vincent and wheezy Mrs. Houghton fussed over her. She was still definitely the invalid. The doctor made her stay in bed part of every day and Michael, who had another cell-like room

He was still unable quite to believe that this delicate, goldenhaired girl was really his wife. He had nearly lost her-and all along the way their path had been tangled with briers. It was difficult to believe that everything could be straightened out at last. One day about a week after their return to Silencia Michael had been out riding on one of the fine Arab horses the Millards had left. He came into his room, almost blinded by the glare of the patio, and found the interior dark and cool. But after his vision had cleared a trifle he saw Katharine sitting in his one deep chair. Katharine, dressed in a green linen frock, with delicate handwork on it. She looked older, more poised and mature.

"Darling! You're really feeling

He raised his hand to her lips. He felt, reverentially, that he was "It probably has 87 rooms and literally unworthy of her. Here one bath," he told his bride. They say the horses of elegance and fragrance, condeending to him

Some of this he said, haltingly and slowly. When he looked up, to his amazement he saw she was laughing at him.

Was it true then-this thing he had long suspected-that the girl had regarded her impulsive bargain with him, that she was certain she did not love him? His heart stood still.
