Letter from Farley Denies Influence Used in Department

The following letter, written by Postmaster General James A. Farley to Congressman Thomas L. Blanton, shows that no influence was used to keep Ranger from getting a post office building at the time the Eastland post office building was approved.

The letter from Postmaster General Farley reads as follows: "Hon. Thomas L. Blanton, 'House of Representatives, 'Washington, D. C., 'My Dear Mr. Blanton—

"This is to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 3rd instant, relative to a federal building project for Ranger, Texas.

"There were two building projects eligible for consideration in your congressional district; namely, Eastland and Ranger. Eastland was given preference by the Inter-Departmental committee on Public Buildings of the Post Office and Treasury departments in formulating the building program under the legislation referred to for the reason that its postal receipts were larger than those at Ranger, and it is a county seat town.

"I note your statements concerning the rumor that the lesser of the present post office building at Ranger has caused the delay in the construction of the federal building for that city. The lesser at Ranger is unknown to any of the officials responsible for the selection of the building projects, and he has not influenced any such officials in the selection of the projects under the public building legislation authorized by congress.

"Sincerely yours, 'JAMES A. FARLEY, 'Postmaster General."

10.9 Cents Is Base For Bankhead Ginning Tax Rate

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The AAA today announced 10.9 cents per pound had been chosen as the base for determining the tax rate on cotton ginning under the Bankhead act which fixes the tax at 5.45 cents per pound on lint cotton.

The base figure was determined by the average price of lint cotton on 10 designated spot cotton markets over a representative period. The new rate is effective as of Oct. 21.

The transfer price of cotton tax exemption certificates issued under the act to producers was lowered from 5 to 4 cents a pound at the same time.

Tax certificates permit ginning and sale tax free of the cotton represented by them.

NEGRO BOYS CONFESS TO GIRL'S DEATH

HOUSTON, Oct. 22.—Officers revealed today two negro youths held in jail here for safe keeping confessed they attacked and killed Miss Geraldine Coleman, 19-year-old farm girl, near Columbus Friday.

The negroes, 15 and 16, were brought here last night by the sheriff of Columbus. Each blamed the other for the slayings, saying the girl was struck on the back of the head with a club.

Miss Coleman, honor graduate from the Columbus High School, was killed after she rode her horse to a pecan orchard where she hoped to trap thieves. Her body was found in the creek.

According to officers, the negroes said Miss Coleman found them near a tree which had been stripped of pecans. They denied knowing anything about the theft.

Miss Coleman ordered them to go with her, they said, and started to lead the way back to the tree.

HURRICANE IN CUBA TAKES A HEAVY TOLL

HAVANA, Oct. 22.—A hurricane that took at least one life and caused unestimated property damage, whipped across eastern Cuba today and on northward, threatening the Bahama Islands and possibly the Upper Florida Coast.

Oriente province, in eastern Cuba, bore the brunt of the storm. Crops were flattened. Communications were disrupted making it impossible to estimate the property damage and possible further loss of life.

In Santiago, west of the storm center, at least one person was killed and many roofs blown away and shop windows broken. The wind gauge there was blown away while registering 70 miles an hour.

The observatory here before noon reported the hurricane was still sweeping Oriente province. U. S. Weather Bureau observers at Jacksonville, Fla., said the storm was taking a northward course which would place the Bahamas in its path but that the direction was uncertain and the storm might swerve to the north-west toward the upper east coast of Florida.

COMMITTEE ON TAXATION HAS NOT QUORUM

Sulphur Company Lobby Scored By Members of The Lower House.

AUSTIN, Oct. 22.—Revenue and taxation committees of the House, seeking to prevent interests from being taxed, criticized sharply in the House representatives today.

The committee was attacked for failure to act on "single-shot" bills last night, lobbyists for concerted attempt to force a tax to keep the burden off the businesses.

"I wish Allred had one-twentieth the influence of the sulphur by," Franklin Speers, San Antonio author of a bill to increase sulphur taxes, said.

"All Thursday afternoon Miller (sulphur company relative) stood on the floor of the house. That night the revenue taxation committee had no quorum. Someone gave a barbecue. Representative Charles Tesson moved the revenue and taxation committee be instructed to report tax bills 'laid on the table' subject to call." His motion suspend a rule received 83 yeas to 45 against, but not the required two-thirds majority.

Officials pointed to two developments in expressing confidence they would push the program the 2,000,000 job mark.

They said action of Camp Croft General John McCarr in releasing $2,000,000 for work project the last 24 hours had broken "bottle neck" hampering the drive. They added the program would receive new impetus Thursday with the return of President Roosevelt's Harry L. Hopkins and Harold Ickes from a three-weeks furlough.

Wings Replace Sails in High Adventure

The man who is mournful because the age of exploration and high adventure is over ought to go out into the Pacific somewhere and watch those giant flying boats with which the Pan-American people are preparing to set up a regular, passenger-carrying ocean air service.

Those huge airplanes may be the last word in 20th century up-to-dateness, but they are doing the same sort of thing that the creaking wooden ships of Captain Cook did—charting new trade routes and bringing to the world's greatest ocean something new in the way of transportation.

If there was romance and adventure to trips of Captain Cook, the same is true of these airplanes.

They are the products of an age which is almost infinitely more sophisticated and scientific than was the age of the great navigators, to be sure. The world in which they operate simply is not the same world as that which the old-time explorers knew. Its map contains few blank spaces, its distances are insignificant compared with the old distances, and its South Sea islands boast chambers of commerce, modern hotels, and guides for tourists.

But what is being done now is the sort of thing that the old-timers could understand and enjoy. It is exploration in its truest sense—a plunging forward boldly into something new and untried, with success or failure, life or death, resting in the last analysis on the bravery and cool competence of the navigator and commander.

And it is hardly going too far to say that its ultimate effects may be quite as revolutionary as were the ultimate effects of those old-time explorations.

The voyages of the wooden ships of a century and a half ago put the islands and the kingdoms of the far east into touch with restless, acquisitive Europe, and started a ferment working in human affairs that has not yet ended. Spanning the Pacific with a modern airplane will do the same sort of thing in a different way.

It will reduce the distance from Asia to America to something like a sixth of its present extent. China and all the Orient will be as close to New York as Boston was in colonial days. The bonds that tie distant nations and races into a community of mutual inter-dependence will be drawn measurably tighter.

It is easy to make the mistake of thinking that we live in a world in which all the great deeds of exploration and adventure are finished. These great airplanes, soaring over the limitless wastes of the Pacific, are enough to prove that that isn't so. There is as much romantic achievement in the world now as there ever was—if we just know how to recognize it.

Scientists agree you can sleep better if you rearrange your bedroom furniture. For instance, piling it against the door when the radio is going.

LOOKING OVER THE PROSPECTS

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Faced with rising clamor against big federal spending, the Roosevelt administration is planning to pull in its horns and nurse the nickels.

Drastic cuts in personnel, budgets, and various projects may be expected this winter.

Radiograms from the U. S. S. Houston, bearing general orders from F. D. himself to heads of virtually all departments and emergency agencies, forecast this deflation of the New Deal machine.

Cabinet members and administrators have been asked to prepare studies and data showing how government personnel can be cut to reasonable or normal size, with indication that the cutting process will be carried out in December, January and February.

All federal projects (every bureau is building, renovating or re-equipping something or other) must be checked as to their status, commitments made, and possibilities of curtailment. Budget studies are to be made accordingly.

Some high officials believe the results will be spectacular, and hazard guesses that the reduction in federal personnel may affect anywhere from 15,000 to 50,000 federal workers.

First effect is sure to be a general checking of political endorsements of employees. Those with weak political backing will be the chief sufferers.

ALL week long, at matinees in a local vaudeville house, a comedian would crack, when a few customers were arising to leave:

"I hope all the NRA employees won't go home now. It always drew a big laugh."

NO ONE here at this time seems to be privy to Roosevelt's plans, but certain previously known facts encourage the deduction from the radioed orders that a cut-to-the-bone drive is in prospect.

The recent shift of Republican attack to expenditures and the top-heavy administrative machine will be answered by the economy effort, although it cannot be considered to have caused it.

The big fact is that Roosevelt is compelled to ask the next session of Congress for much less than the eight-billion dollar budget which he demanded last January. Not long ago he was hoping to enter the campaign year with the promise of an actually balanced budget. Perhaps he still does.

Thanks to the relief problem, the only way it seems possible to achieve even a technically balanced budget would be to save and store up money here and there in the present fiscal year.

Budget estimates for the 1936-37 fiscal year could be made on a very low basis with the realization that the Congress convening in January, 1937, could vote further emergency appropriations if necessary.

There's reason to suspect that F. D. may have some such ideas in the back of his head, though the degree of success in taking the government out of relief, the career of the WPA program, and business conditions are all pertinent factors. (Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.)

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE
 NEA Service Staff Writer

THE plainer and more inexpensive your meal is, the more pains you ought to take to make it look pretty.

One of the easiest ways to improve the appearance of the ordinary meat-and-potato meal is to arrange the potatoes or their substitute in the form of a border with the meat in the center and the other vegetables as a garnish on the outside.

Mashed potatoes, which may be made of Irish or sweet, mashed squash and well cooked rice make good looking borders.

Greens, cabbage and sauerkraut, for instance, present a more inviting appearance when served either in a molded form or in the form of a border. Arrange in a ring and fill the center with fluffy mashed potato piled high in irregular contour. Surround the border with brown sausage cakes or crisp link sausage. This saves dishwashing, too, because one serving dish does the work of three.

Preparing Mashed Potatoes

To make a mashed potato border, rice or thoroughly mash potatoes. Then for each two cups of mashed potato add 4 tablespoons milk or cream, 1-2 teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons melted butter. More milk may be needed to make the potatoes the right consistency and, of course, the more milk you add the more nutritious they are. Beat with a slotted spoon until light. Butter a deep pan or bowl on the outside and place it in the center of a hot platter or chop plate. Press a mound of prepared potatoes around the bowl. Then remove bowl and fill depression with meat or fish or a creamed vegetable.

Tomorrow's Menu
BREAKFAST: Chilled potato juice, cereal, crisp waffles with honey, coffee.
LUNCHEON: Mashed potato with hard cooked egg, a border, pop-over, apple, loca pudding with sauce, milk, tea.
DINNER: Chicken fried with border of noodles, candied sweet potatoes, tender turnip greens, celery salad, crabmeat roll, milk, coffee.

Macaroni, spaghetti and make nice borders, too. Seed hen in a border of potatoes is so inviting that forgets it isn't spring chicken. Stuffed tomatoes, stuffed pers, glazed and buttered sweet marbles and grilled tomatoes add beauty to any hot main course.

Children's Fricassee

One-fourth pound fowl, cut in 2 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 4 tablespoons flour, 2 noodles.

Cut chicken in pieces, fry and put in kettle with water to keep than cover. Bring to the boiling point and cook for two to three hours, fry salt and pepper when done. Remove from stock in platter and drop noodles into boiling broth. Cook twenty minutes. Drain from broth and arrange a border around chicken. Flour to a smooth paste with cold water and stir into broth from which noodles were drained. Bring to the boiling point, stir constantly, and boil three minutes. Serve in a separate dish.

70 fine roll-your-own cigarettes... in every 2-ounce tin of Prince Albert

Stop-smith that shows Bob Murray in action! He can roll two Prince Albert cigarettes in 27 seconds.

PRINCE ALBERT EASY TO ROLL AND "STAYS PUT"

Here you see Bob Murray doing some jiffy-quick rolling during recent Prince Albert speed tests. Mr. Murray is modest about his ability. "Thanks to Prince Albert's special 'crimpeut' I can roll my own quickly and easily," he says. "Prince Albert's sensible big red tin means that I'm not going to spill the makin's. And I know I'm getting enough for about 70 cigarettes. That's a lot of cigarettes."

And here's Melvin Tivis (18 seconds), agreeing with Bob: "I'm another Prince Albert booster. P.A. rolls easier—and always makes a mild, tasty cigarette."

Duward Ryan (an 11-second roller) says: "I'll bet you didn't know there're 2 oz. in every P.A. tin. How about it? And Carl Williams (5.4 sec.) joins the P.A. rally with this: "P.A. roll right and tastes right—it's the real joy smoke."

Now How About You?

Try P.A. for your makin's. We've made a money-back offer that should appeal to any one's sense of fairness. So start today.

Note P.A.'s special cut. "Crimpeut" is called. It has a lot to do with why Prince Albert burns so cool and mild. Only top-quality tobacco is used. And there are two ounces in the big red tin of P.A. Real roll-your-own smokin' at its best! A constant joy in a pipe too.

The GOLDEN FEATHER

by Robert Bruce © 1935 NEA Service, Inc.
BEGIN HERE TODAY
JEAN ARNOLD, secretary to DONALD MONTAGUE, lawyer, delays her answer when BOBBY WALLACE, young automobile salesman, asks Jean to marry him.
At the Golden Feather high club Jean meets SANDY HARRIS, whose business connection is vague. Sandy introduces Bobby and Jean to MIKE and MISS LEWIS, and Bobby arranges to sell some bonds for Lewis. He tells them to Jean's employer.
LARRY GLENN, federal agent, one friend of Jean's parents, is trying to locate WINGY LEWIS, bank robber.
Sandy asks Jean to marry him and she promises to give him an answer after he returns from a vacation in her home town.
Larry locates another bond salesman and introduces SONNY BOYD, gambler, about whom Boyd confides he knows them from Donald Montague.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVIII
When Sonny Boyd left Larry Glenn's office that afternoon he hurried back to his cigar store and cool room in the east end, sweating profusely.
Reaching the place, he let himself into his little cubbyhole of an office and sank into his chair with a low groan. He rested his arms on his desk and stared at the opposite wall, heedless of the way his fingers were trembling. Then, nothing there at last, he opened a lock drawer, took out a bottle, and drank a stiff slug. Putting the bottle away he sat straight and—saying apparently, come to some decision in his own mind—repeatedly pressed a push button. The yellow-faced manager of the pool-room came in.
'Tell Turf Arnold to come in,' ordered Boyd. The manager went out and a moment later he ushered in a rather sleepy man whose placid face and old-fashioned steel-rimmed spectacles made him look like anything but the underworld go-between he really was.
'Turf,' said Boyd, 'I want you to get word to Don Montague for me. Don't let him know you come from me now? Don't even mention my name. Just get to him and do this: tell him that Whiskers has traced those Atlas and Iron River bonds to him. Get it?'
Turf Arnold looked at him without curiosity and repeated the message.
'Do I know anything, if he asks me any questions?' he asked.
Boyd shook his head.
'Nothing,' he said. 'You just get word to give'm the tip, that's all, and if he asks where you got it you tell'm nothing. Just that message is all; the G men know that he had those bonds, and they're going to be asking him where he got 'em.'
Turf Arnold was an excellent messenger. He sought out Donald Montague that evening, gave the message, played dumb at the proper points, and then went away—leaving the lawyer to walk thoughtfully up and down the floor of his library, stroking his chin and frowning meditatively.
The upshot of it all was that Larry Glenn's visit to Montague's office the next morning was not in the least unexpected, although the lawyer did not reveal this fact promptly.
'Mr. Montague,' he said, 'the Division of Investigation has been working on that bank robbery done in Neola a month and a half ago. Some gunmen stuck up the National Bank down there and made off with cash and securities worth $40,000. The securities were bonds, all duly registered; among them were some $20,000 in Atlas and Iron River gold $ per cent five hundred dollar denomination. We've been able to trace some of them, and we are informed that $14,500 of them were sold by you during the past week.'
He smiled and paused briefly, adding, 'Can you tell me anything about it?'
Mr. Montague looked at him with an expression of mild surprise and utter candor.
'Atlas and Iron River gold five's?' he repeated. He wrinkled one eyebrow, as if searching his brain. 'I believe I remember—let me have a look at my records, will you?'
Mr. Montague went over to a wall safe and drew out some memoranda, and seemed to be studying them thoughtfully for a few moments. Then he nodded, as if to say, 'Ah, yes—it's all quite clear now,' and returned to his chair.
'I sold those bonds—yes,' he said frankly. 'I don't mind confessing that I handled them somewhat—ah—surprisingly. I supposed there was sufficient reason to do so, but I never dreamed—'
HE left the sentence unfinished and looked out the window. Then he seemed to pull himself together. Resting his elbows on his desk he leaned forward slightly and looked Larry in the eye.
'It's a rather peculiar story, but I suppose you hear many such,' he said, smiling just a little. 'There is a young man in this town whom I happen to know slightly; he's a friend of my secretary, in fact, and she's a fine young woman of whom I am rather fond. It seems the young man is deeply in love with her and wants to get enough of a stake, financially, to be able to marry her.'
'I should add,' he explained, 'that up to the moment of the incident which I am about to describe, I did not know this young man. My secretary came to me one afternoon and—not without some slight embarrassment—asked me if I could arrange to see the young chap the next day. She said that he had some sort of business proposition to submit to me, and she apologized for bothering me about it. Being, as I said, fond of her—she's an admirable young woman—I consented.
'The next day the young man came in. He was full of enthusiasm, and he had a very odd proposition to make. Briefly it was this: 'He had come into possession—or was about to—of these bonds; and it developed that they came originally from a Chicago politician, who had received them, in turn, from a Chicago gambler whose activities were, or rather are, being investigated by the county grand jury out there. The bonds had been registered in the name of the gambler, and if they came on the open market it would reflect seriously on the politician.
'At that moment, it seemed, the bonds were being held by a friend of this young man; and this friend—I told you it was complicated—was a friend of the Chicago politician. Now he was hard up; needed money for something or other, and had to cash the bonds. But, being a friend of the Chicago gentleman, he was not willing to put them on the open market. He would sell them only on condition that the person to whom they went would agree to hold them for a month or more, until the future out in Chicago had died down. Naturally, the ordinary buyer would not care to make any such pledge; therefore, this man was willing to let them go substantially below the market price, as an inducement.
'So that was how it stood. My young friend—I call him that because he seemed such a likable young chap, and because I somehow feel that I know him quite well now—wanted to buy the bonds and sell them, in turn, to me. He offered them to me at $11,500—$11,500 for bonds with a face value of $14,500. Naturally, I assumed that he himself was getting them from his friend for somewhat less indeed, he at length admitted as much, and blurted out that the reason he was trying to put through the deal was that he wanted to marry my secretary.'
He chuckled in fatherly, man-of-the-world fashion.
'I told him I didn't want to loose her, and I gave him some fatherly advice. Then I asked him about the bonds themselves. He gave me a complete description. I rang up a brokerage house, found out what they were selling for and then, after he had left, I instituted a quiet little investigation into his past and present. Everything I could learn reassured me about him. I assumed that everything was as he had represented it—'
He smiled sadly.
'I know,' he said. 'I was odd; uncritical and trusting. But—well! I liked the boy. I suppose I took it for granted that any intimate friend of Miss Dunn was bound to be all right. . . . At any rate, I bought the bonds, intending to keep them for a few months and then sell them. A week ago I unexpectedly became pressed for money and disposed of them. That's the story.'
He paused. Then he said, 'I presume you would like to know this young man's name?'
'I know it already,' said Larry. 'Bobby Wallace, wasn't it?'
BACK in his own office, half an hour later, Larry summoned four of the agents who served under him: Tony LaRocco, former All-American tackle at Notre Dame; Tommy Waters, war veteran; Al Peters, graduate of the New York police force, and Frank Watson, another ex-soldier. Sitting on a corner of his desk, he outlined to them the case of the stolen bonds and the suspicions he entertained relative to Evelyn Brady and her mysterious consort.
'We can't wait any longer,' he said. 'We've got to strike. I'm going out to talk to this Wallace boy and see if I can get a lead from him about the identity of these people who unloaded the bonds on him. Frank, you and Al go down to the Golden Feather, bust the drivers at the taxi stand outside, and see if you can find out where these people live. Tony, you and Tommy are to get hold of this Art Lanning, who runs the place, put the heat on him, and find out everything he can tell you about them. 'Check in as soon as you learn anything. The moment we find their hangout, we'll raid it!'

Decorations Sound Hallowe'en Motif in Pretty Setting For W. M. S. Lesson

Hallowe'en colors carried out in flowers and decorations made an appropriate setting for the Royal Service program, with Mrs. F. D. Hicks, hostess at her home, South Austin street, Monday afternoon, to members of the Womens Missionary union of Central Baptist church.

Mrs. C. C. Cash serves as program director and introduced the interesting topic, "Youth Uplifting the Banner"; song assembly, preceded the Bible lesson, ably given by Mrs. Hicks; prayer was said by Mrs. Sarah Scrivens. "Young a Century Ago" came in as a splendid subject offered by Mrs. Cash. "Youth of Today," was discussed by Mrs. H. H. Stephens, followed with a song assembly, "making of a Heroine." Mrs. Alice D. True offered prayer, coming just before Mrs. Noel Bell spoke on "The Banner in the Hands of Youth." After Mrs. E. S. Brink gave prayer, a fitting playlet by two members, Mrs. F. R. King, and Miss Pauline Fullwood was given with Mrs. King taking the part of the girl of the 1930's, and Miss Fullwood, the girl of today. Song and closing prayer by Mrs. H. S. Packwood, brought the program to an impressive climax.

A plate of open face sandwiches, cookies, ice tea and mints were passed to the above named and also the following: Mmes. George Rogers, W. O. Walker, S. C. Mahoney, O. F. Sides, Weldon Webb, Dan Neville, J. R. Watson, J. B. Houghton, J. E. Ogg, G. C. Mc-

"Youth Uplifting the Banner of the Cross," led by Mrs. John Tibbles

Mrs. John Tibbles met with a large number of members of the Womens Missionary society, at the First Baptist church Monday afternoon and interestingly led the lesson taken from the topic, "Youth Uplifting the Banner of the Cross." As each member entered they were presented a handmade program in cameo shape, and encased in black and white.

Miss Sallie Ringold was introduced by Mrs. Tibbles and immediately opened the Bible study centering about the life of Harriett Howell Shook, the first American missionary to go to China. A resume of her work and life was brought out in the talk by Miss Ringold, forming a splendid foundation for the talk "Young People of Today," given by Mrs. Arrendale. "What the Baptist denomination is doing for the Young People of Today" embraced many outstanding points discussed by Mrs. Lee Mitchell.

The last number on program was a dialogue with Miss Margaret Fox, dressed in a quaint costume, with part assigned to "Youth One Year Ago," while the girl of 1935 was chosen in the person of Miss Eala Pressler.

Mrs. Minnie Love offered the closing prayer, dismissing one of the largest groups to have attended a program this year.

ham team, was head linesman in the Lion-Buckaroo game Saturday afternoon, and after he went home he discovered he had the mumps. About half the Graham team has been suffering with mumps this season, as have members of one or two other teams.

The Buckaroos were taken to Graham to be inoculated with blood from members of the Graham team who had already had the disease. The blood was injected in the hips of the players, reports say.

On top of Taylor's and Clark's injuries, a seige of mumps in the ranks of the Buckaroos would be almost fatal to their football hopes for the year.

There is considerable talk of a special train to Abilene next Friday, and many have said that if one is run they will ride it, but whether or not the 250 to 300 needed to make the train possible can be secured is a question that is baffling the athletic committee.

A decision as to whether or not one will be attempted this year or not, may be reached sometime today, possibly before this is printed.

Many believe that this is the year a special should, by all means be run, and that going on the special on years that the team is losing is more important than when the team is winning, as it has done for the past three years.

To date the Bulldogs have defeated the Eagles three years in succession, which is a record no other team in the state has equalled in the history of the school, according to Prexy Anderson, who predicts that the game Friday should be nothing more than a good workout for the Eagles.

The Bulldogs, however, had but one win over the Eagles between 1922 and 1932, when the current winning streak started, though in 1928 and 1930 the Bulldogs managed to secure 19 to 19 and 0 to 0 ties with them.

Just a Bit Personal

The mother of Jess and E. P. Weaver is reported improved today from a sudden illness of Sunday night.

How a Woman's Nervousness Was Helped by Cardui

"Shortly before the birth of my youngest child I was very nervous and run-down in every way," writes Mrs. Fernell Tisdale of South Bloomingville, Ohio.

"I had lost my appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep. I heard of Cardui and decided to give it a trial. After I had taken one bottle, I was so much better every way that I got six bottles and took them. My neighbors all say they never saw anyone make such a change in so short a time. I have built back my weight and today I am a strong and healthy mother."

Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

Home Economics In Ranger Is Proving Popular With Girls

Progress has been shown in the reports of the homemaking teachers of the state, and in the Ranger High school, it was pointed out in reports made this week, which quoted the annual reports of the vocational home economics teachers for 1934 and 1935.

An increase of 65 schools receiving vocational aid was reported, making a total of 528 schools, 71 being negro schools.

There was a total of 574 homemaking teachers, 75 of which were negroes and 34,174 students were enrolled in the schools, 929 of them being boys and 32,520 homes were represented. A total of 52,479 garments were constructed in the white schools at a cost of $67,865.06 shown a saving of $52,314.24.

In Ranger High school's home economics department there were 61 of the 79 freshmen girls taking home economics. In the three upper classes 11 of 61 sophomores, 15 of 44 juniors and 9 of 25 seniors are taking either first or second year foods, making a total of 96 girls or 45 per cent of the girls taking some course in home economics in the high school this year, reports today showed.

Good Wrestling Is Seen at Arena

"We Want Rodgers" was the cry of the fans at the Elks wrestling match last night when "Wildcat" Hood beat "Speedy" Holt in less than an hour in one of the roughest bouts seen at the arena in some time. "Speedy" put up a good fight, but "Wildcat" was scheduled to meet Hood in the final on account of the illness of his wife.

The bout between Blackburn and "Dummy" Nelson was disappointing to the crowd, neither one of the wrestlers was able to get going.

The management of the Elks is doing everything possible to give the fans the best cards possible and a good card is in the making for next week—in all probability Rodgers and Hood will be scheduled for the coming show next week.
