League Members Take Sanctions Seriously

They tell a story out west about a fly-by-night oil stock artist who got an option on a few thousand acres of used cow pasture and set out to make a raid on the suckers.

He had great sheaves of stock tastefully engraved and distributed, and just to make it look good he sunk one lone oil well as a concession to appearances. Then, just as he was ready to shear the suckers, his well struck a tremendously rich pool of oil, and before he knew quite what was happening he had become a great oil magnate, a captain of industry, and a multi-millionaire, instead of being just another flim-flam expert trying to beat the sheriff to the

If you glance in the direction of Geneva these days, you might find something in the air that would vaguely remind you of that touching little story.

The present round-robin of sanctions against Italy had an uncanny resemblance, right at the start, to the venture of this blue-sky promoter out Oklahoma way. That is, it looked very much as if someone were about to grind a large ax while the people of the world were looking the other way.

The British, who have taken more territory away from semi-civilized races at the point of a gun than any people since the ancient Komans, were raising a high moral issue against Mussolini and trying-with the help of outraged world opinion-to keep him from poaching on British pre-

But today a queer sort of change has come over the whole picture. Down at the bottom, of course, Britain's self-interest remains unchanged; but the whole performance has somehow taken on a new light. For 52 sovereign nations have fallen into line on the sanctions program and they seem to be taking it very seriously.

In other words, the League of Nations idea is at last beginning to work-to the vast surprise, doubtless, of the cynical diplomats who run the outfit.

Little nations and big nations are sending notes to Rome, pointing out that they have nothing against the Italian people personally, but that the Ethiopian grab is just a little too raw for this modern age and that the pressure will stay on until the grab is abandoned. Italian threats of retaliation fail to have the slightest effect.

After years of disuse, the diplomats trotted out the poor old league-and people are taking it seriously. For people are tired of war, tired of seeing foreign affairs handled in the spirit that a Brooklyn gang handles its relations with competitors from the Bronx; and they do seem to be ready to exercise the sacrifice and intelligence to make the league a real force in world affairs.

It is the most welcome surprise of the whole post-war

TEXAS EXPERT BEATS OKLAHOMA MAN IN CIGARETTE-ROLLING CONTEST

Photo shows Frank Martz, of Texas, who recently rolled a cigarette with Prince Albert in 6 seconds, by official stop-watch time, in a friendly contest with a man from Oklahoma. The Oklahoma man's time was 11 seconds. "Rolling your own is sheer pleasure with Prince Albert," Mr. Martz says, "because P. A. rolls so easy and smokes so good."

. . . Thousands and thousands have written us, commending Prince Albert for easier rolling, better smoking. For the benefit of others, we print below a fair and square proposition by which they can try P. A. at our risk.

Prince Albert uses choicest tobacco, "crimp cut" so P. A. rolls quicker, burns longer. The famous P.A. "no-bite" process assures mildness. And P.A. is packed in the big red two-ounce tin that keeps

WHAT'S YOUR TIME?

HERE IS OUR OFFER:
