GERMANS ARE AIDING REBELS ADVICES SAY

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Latest British official advices reveal that approximately 5,000 Germans who fled at Cadix, are perhaps being dispatched to various rebel fronts.

British reports said the men are equipped with arms and that many wore Spanish uniforms. In addition to the Germans thousands of French volunteers are reported to have crossed the border into Spain.

At least 35,000 foreigners, not including the Moors from North Africa, are fighting now on both sides in Spain, according to reliable information.

MADRID, Dec. 1.—The defenders of Madrid and the insurgents were locked in the greatest battle of the three week siege, while the Spanish saw a shattering artillery bombardment.

A terrific battle was in progress in University City in the northwest section. The loyalists have dynamited part of a hospital.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Leftist members of the Spanish loyalist government have agreed their regime shall continue as a democratic republic, the Spanish Embassy was advised today.

Legion Auxiliary Will Sell Poppies On Next Saturday

The ladies' auxiliary of Carl Barnes Post No. 69 of the American Legion will sell poppies on the streets of Ranger Saturday, Dec. 5. It is customary for the ladies to sell these poppies every Armistice Day, but due to the unusually bad weather this past Armistice Day the sale was postponed until later date.

All poppies to be sold here are purchased from the state department of the American Legion Auxiliary at Austin several weeks ago. The poppies were made by disabled war veterans in Texas government hospitals, and they are paid for each flower they make.

This provides those able to do light work a means of making their spending money and also provides them with something to buy their time.

The money made locally from the sale of the poppies is used by the auxiliary in aiding destitute families of war veterans, or any other needy families in the city to come under the observation of the ladies of the auxiliary. Headquarters for the sale will be in the lobby of the Gibson hotel with Mrs. R. W. Gordon, president of the auxiliary, in charge. Members will aid in selling flowers on the streets.

And the Fittest Survived— Thanks to Dread Enemy, Man!

Their antlers locked in a tangle from which they could not free themselves, these two mule deer were found near Ogden, Utah, by a game commission worker. The buck at the top, winner of the battle, had dragged his adversary 100 yards before the loser died. Death threatened the victor, too, until the rescuer shot off the dead buck's antler. Then the survivor, weakened by the long combat, trotted away on wobbly legs, freed by his most feared enemies, man and firearms.

General War In Europe Can Be Averted, Blum Says

PARIS, Dec. 1.—A general war in Europe can and will be avoided if Great Britain, France and the United States work together to prevent it and if normal economic relations can be restored, Premier Leon Blum declared today in an interview with the United Press.

But the menace of war is great, he said, as the arms race continues and an effort must be put forward to escape a conflagration in the face of recurring warlike incidents.

"I do not think that war is inevitable," Blum said. "I am convinced that on the contrary there exists in Europe and in the world enough force decided to avoid war."

DELEGATES TO PARLEY WILL FAVOR PEACE

SPEECH IS TRANSLATED INTO THREE FOREIGN LANGUAGES AS IT IS DELIVERED.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 1.—President Roosevelt called on the "American Family of Nations" today to join hands for economic unity and political peace in the Western Hemisphere against the daily growing menace of war in older lands.

The President, opening the Inter-American Peace Conference, appealed for cooperation among all the peoples of all the American republics.

"We in the Americas make it clear that we stand shoulder-to-shoulder in our final deliberations that others who, driven by war madness or land hunger might seek to commit acts of aggression against us will find a hemisphere prepared to consult together for our mutual safety," he said.

Mr. Roosevelt, who inspired the present conference, emphasized that the "welfare and prosperity of each of our nations depends in large part on the benefits derived from commerce among themselves and with other nations."

Primary in keeping the peace of the western world, he said, was the negotiation of reciprocal trade agreement among the American Family of Nations.

"Democracy is still the hope of the world," Mr. Roosevelt said. "Our hemisphere has at last come of age. We are here to show it is united to the world."

President Roosevelt spoke in English. The speech was translated simultaneously into Spanish, French and Portuguese and read into a wire system. Delegates using earphones could dial in and listen to the speech.

The address of Mr. Roosevelt and Argentina's President, Augustin Justo, were the only ones that the first session of the conference heard. Foreign ministers of 19 of the 21 American republics represented at the conference were seated just in front of the rostrum where the two presidents spoke.

Autograph Needed To Get a Pension

AUSTIN.—The Texas Old Age Assistance Commission is starting an autograph collection which will eventually contain more than 88,000 signatures. Acting Director Orville S. Carpenter said today.

Washington officials told Carpenter that the federal government wanted the Texas commission to have a signature card upon each assistance recipient. The purpose of the collection is to provide federal auditors a method of checking endorsements written on the back of the pension warrants when cashed, and to assist them in verifying the eligibility of each person. However, the cards will be kept in file by the Texas commission.

It was estimated by the statistical division of the commission that this new requirement would necessitate approximately 300,000 extra hours of labor by investigators in addition to the work being done re-investigating recipients and investigating new applications.

People now upon the assistance rolls will be brought cards to sign during the next sixty days, Carpenter stated. He stressed the fact that even present recipients eligible under the "necessitous circumstances" requirement of the new law would be asked to sign cards.

Landslide Vote Is Sign of Healthy Democracy

If someone could figure out just where we Americans got our recent habit of deciding things by a landslide vote, he would add a good deal to the clarity of political science. There has not been a reasonably close presidential election in this country since the Hughes-Wilson race of 1916. Harding went into office by an overwhelming vote. Coolidge did likewise and so did Hoover; now Roosevelt, for the second time, has received the same sort of mandate.

Some of these votes represent opposite tendencies and contrasting attitudes toward the problems of government, but all testify that the American people make up their minds in a bunch, so to speak, and make their decisions with tremendous emphasis.

And this habit, when you stop to think about it, is one of the best symptoms of health a democracy could display.

One need do more than examine postwar European history very hastily to see how disastrous it can be for a government to be unable to get from its people any clear-cut and decisive verdict on the issues of the day.

Take the case of pre-Hitler Germany. Half a dozen large parties competed for popular favor. Not one of them ever was able to get a majority of the popular vote; the best any could get was a bare plurality. It was always outnumbered by its opponents even when it was in power.

The results were fatal. The party in power never had enough popular support to put through its own program, embodying the principles for which the party stood. It had to compromise at every step. As a consequence, it invariably wound up by satisfying nobody.

Over and over again this happened. No German government had a solidly based authority. The people were hopelessly divided—not into two parts, but into half a dozen or more.

As year followed year, the people became more and more disillusioned with democratic government.

In the end, of course, Hitler came along and imposed unity from above at the cost of shooting, torturing, or imprisoning all those who were not ready to accept it.

The landslide habit at least relieves Americans from that danger. They are not divided hopelessly; ever since the war, each president on taking office has known that he was backed by an irresistible majority—no matter how good the chances might be that such majority would run out from under him in the end.

The landslide vote, of course, is a symptom rather than a cause, and that is why it is encouraging. It is living testimony that we are a homogeneous people, that we think and feel together, that we are not paralyzing ourselves by that fatal inability to make up our minds.

Babies in a French hospital began crying just as a mass of air arrived from another region. Perhaps they thought a politician was coming to kiss them.

Horse devoured an airplane that landed on a Michigan farm. Whoever built the craft must have known his oats.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the J. C. Penney company held Nov. 24, a dividend of $1 per share on the common stock was declared for the quarter ending December 31. The board of directors also approved the payment of a special Christmas bonus for associates of the company. This bonus will equal two weeks pay for employees in the stores, offices and warehouses of the company who have been regularly employed for one year, and a proportionate amount for those employed for shorter periods. Mr. E. C. BEEN HERE TODAY

MARCIA CASTLE, daughter of wealthy PHILIP CASTLE, knows the neighborhood in business near the modern disappearance of PHILIP CASTLE. She has been engaged to marry a young man, a shortage in her father's funds has been discovered. With her friend, HELEN WADSWORTH, and others, Marcia is in a restaurant when a hold-up man, Marcia loses a ring that was her mother's.

Learning Frank is in Chicago, Marcia goes there to try to persuade him to return and face his financial obligations. Before she reaches him, Frank disappears again.

In Chicago, she encounters CARLO STELLICCI, a stranger, who volunteers a slight service. He also a passenger on the train. A few weeks later she finds him again. However, an article, she decided to make his home in the suburb.

Meanwhile, TONY STELLICCI, a young proprietor, suspects his brother, Carlo, is being involved in the hold-up and finds some of the lost in Carlo's home. He returns Marcia's ring. Later he threatens to turn Carlo over to police, but Carlo escapes.

DOROTHY OSBORN, who dislikes Marcia, invites Bruce to dinner. She telephones that she is driving her mother on an errand and will stop for him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVIII
CARLO STELLICCI had fled from Bobbs Neck without considering consequences other than that he was likely to go to prison by remaining. Neither his invalid stager nor Tony had been an item in his mind; he had paid so little attention to his brother and patient for so many years that it was natural to ignore their interest in his precipitate flight.

Carlo had paused long enough to telephone a warning to his garage employes that a secret was out. This kindness, however, was prompted only by his desire to have two meetings in the city with certain money and property secreted at the time. They repaid him by carrying the little hoard to New York and, instead of joining Carlo where he waited at a hastily appointed rendezvous, continuing their journey in flight to further destinations.

Carlo at length dismissed the truth. He had been cheated. And he was among New York's millions for a period of sedition.

During this lonely time he even reflected his four acquaintances a city for he felt a vast distance for them. When, at last, he merged from hiding, although he had never been called the manager of any one's prayer, he did indeed appear at a moment when profane questions were being asked as to whereabouts.

It was on a Saturday afternoon. Three of his friends were gathered in the apartment which Carlo had frequently visited. They were rolling dice without enthusiasm.

At a proper signal from the doorbell one of the men opened the door and a fourth man entered. He it was who had acted as chairman of the last meeting which Carlo attended in these rooms.

"Well, I found out something," he said, slamming the door. "That Stellicci rat has been it. That's why we haven't got any answer when we called his garage. The two tramps who worked for him have scrambled too, I guess."

"The four of us can do the job. One car instead of two. One man outside, three inside. What was the layout Stellicci gave us? Park at that door on the side street, he said. Come out that door, into the car, straight down that street. What was the next turn?"

No one remembered the answer. They had depended on Carlo and his men more than they had appreciated. And all knew the danger of attempting the job without an easy route for escape.

They grew profane as they called on Providence to deliver Carlo Stellicci into their hands. And then the doorbell rang with the answer to their supplications. Carlo Stellicci entered. An object Carlo. A needy Carlo.

A Carlo who knew not where else to look for funds.

WHEN the Osborn car stopped in front of the house, Bruce McDougall was ready. Turning out the lights and pulling on his overcoat, he ran downstairs, patting his pockets in a quick inventory. Keys, cigarette, change, wallet—darn the luck! He had forgotten to go to the bank this morning and cash a check on his new account. Now he had only a bit of silver, and faced a Sunday broke.

What if Dorothy Osborn cared to see a movie tonight? But as he walked toward the car he remembered having heard someone—Mike, probably—remark that the Bobbs Neck bank was open on Saturday evenings, largely for the convenience of shopkeepers who wished to deposit the receipts of their heaviest selling day. He'd ask Dorothy to stop at the bank; it would take only a moment.

Introduced to Mrs. Osborn, McDougall claimed in beside Dorothy and she turned the car. "We have just one stop to make," she said. "I hope you won't mind waiting a moment while Mother gets something on Main Street."

"As a matter of fact," said McDougall, "I have an errand, too, and I'll do it while you're stopping for Mrs. Osborn. I want to dash into the bank."

Bobbs Neck was at dinner, and Main Street, soon to be busy with Saturday night shoppers and movie-goers, was comparatively deserted, so that Dorothy found parking space in front of the bank. McDougall helped Mrs. Osborn out of the car and she disappeared into a store a door or two away, while he excused himself from Dorothy and entered the bank building.

Inside the street doors was a marble vestibule, where a stairway gave access to offices on the second floor. Beyond was another set of doors, to the bank itself, unlocked now for the evening's business but closed on the January weather. About to push his way through the inner doors, McDougall fell back.

Four men were at another door, set in a far wall of the banking room, the side street entrance. Three were tugging desperately at the handle; the fourth, holding a gun, faced the tellers, who stood in apparent impotence at their windows, with hands raised.

In a momentary paralysis, McDougall heard a sudden and tremendous clangor from over the outside doors. One of the tellers had reached an alarm button with a cautious foot.

The four men gave up the struggle with the side door and sprinted toward the vestibule, and McDougall retreated before them, horribly aware that Dorothy sat in her car immediately in front of the building and that her mother might even now be emerging from the store a door or two away.

He burst on to the street. "Pull ahead!" he yelled, waving imperatively. "Step on it! Go on—go on!"

The four men came through the bank doors and looked out from the cover provided where the stone walls of the building projected a foot beyond the entrance. Half a block away, running heavily toward them, was a policeman.

The four men darted from the bank's doorway and sped around the corner. A shot followed them, and then another, but they reached their car. Hearing, but without lights, it sped away down the dark street, Carlo Stellicci at the wheel, with familiar roads ahead.

There had been a mistake in Carlo's plans. The bank's side door was never unlocked for the Saturday evening business.

Thyroid Tested As Mental Key

CHICAGO—The thyroid gland, long associated with control of goiter, appears headed for a new responsibility—the increase of intelligence in children. Experiments undertaken by Ralph Hinton, psychology research assistant at Northwestern University, have investigated possibilities of advancing intelligence in children above the "norm" through administration of thyroxin, secretion of the thyroid gland. Hinton's work is an outgrowth of an earlier experimentation series in which he established a relation between intelligence of children and their rate of growth—"metabolic rate."

Hinton hopes to increase the intelligence quotient of near-future minded children through application of his findings, and believes normal children may be benefited also. "The experiments have not been continued long enough to indicate whether the intelligence rate of a child can be built up to remain above what might have been the normal for a long period," Hinton says, "but in all the experiments that have been conducted so far, the intelligence of the children who have been the subjects, as measured by the standard tests, has shown considerable improvement. In computing mental development, Hinton has used scores made on standard intelligence tests by groups of children chosen at random. Groups were tested, their scores recorded, and administration of thyroxin begun. After the period of treatment they were given another standard examination. Results showed considerable improvement in every case. Hinton's work has shown boys to be superior in intelligence to girls of the same age. Also, his experiments have demonstrated that members of a family tend to similar intelligence ratings and metabolic rates.

LET'S KNOW TEXAS—TEXANS

WILL H. MAYES, AUSTIN, TEXAS

In this column, answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. As evidence of good faith inquiries must give their names and addresses, but only their initials will be printed. Address: Quarters to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. What induced St. Denis to make the hazardous trip to San Juan Bautista in 1714-15? L. H. A. Before leaving East Texas, Father Hidalgo, wearied by Spanish indifference toward the East Texas missions, wrote the French governor of Louisiana asking his cooperation. An expedition was fitted out at Mobile and placed in charge of St. Denis to go in search of Father Hidalgo with a view to establishing religious and trade relations. When the party reached East Texas, St. Denis learned that Father Hidalgo had gone to the Rio Grande, where he went in search of him, reaching Bautista early in 1715.

Q. What was the first hard-surfaced road built in East Texas? S. M. A. The road from Longview to Gladewater, built in 1917.

Q. How long has Texas had laws regulating fishing? B. J. A. The first law was passed in 1874; the second law was enacted in 1879, at which time the first game commission was created, but it was abolished in 1885 to be re-instituted in 1895.

Q. How many game preserves are now under supervision of the Game Fish and Oyster Commission? B. J. A. Approximately 80, stocked with 15,000 deer, 14,000 turkeys, 400 Rocky Mountain sheep, and 4,000 antelope.

Q. What gave rise to the "Battle-Creek" Indian fight? B. O. P. A. What became known as the Battle Creek or Surveyor's Fight was near the present town of Dawson, in 1828, when a surveying party of about 25 went into the section to locate and survey lands for settlers. They were attacked by a band of 100 Kickapoo Indians. Seventeen of the surveyors were killed in one of the fiercest fights of the Texas revolution.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

Currently, the New Dealers are burned up more than ever because Loneragan has refused an investigation of the defeat of Congressman Dennis Driscoll of Pennsylvania, who says he was beaten by a combination of "power trust" effort, employer coercion, and paid whispering campaigns. Driscoll is the Democrat who exposed the Associated Gas & Electric Company's fake telegram campaign during the congressional battle over the holding company bill. Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania urged Loneragan to investigate, citing evidence of skulduggery, and Driscoll is the Democrat who exposed the Associated Gas & Electric Company's fake telegram campaign during the congressional battle over the holding company bill.

Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania urged Loneragan to investigate, citing evidence of skulduggery, and Driscoll is the Democrat who exposed the Associated Gas & Electric Company's fake telegram campaign during the congressional battle over the holding company bill.

THE administration is likely to go to extremes, in the Driscoll case because it is believed his defeat and that of Sisson of New York, plus narrow squeaks for other Democratic congressmen prominent in the bitter holding company fight in a year of Democratic landslide, will give power company lobbyists the chance to tell other congressmen that it's dangerous to incur enmity of the utilities.

Although Loneragan is able to take the position that he is refusing to let the committee be used as a partisan instrument, his critics in the administration are pointing out that he was elected in the Democratic sweep of 1932. Then the Democratic party in Connecticut was widely regarded as a mere adjunct to the Republican machine of J. Henry Riva-back, powerful political boss and public utilities magnate.

Loneragan voted on the utilities side against the famous "death sentence." (Copyright, 1936, NEA Service, Inc.)

DEMOCRATIC strategists then tried to get Loneragan to put the du Ponts, the Rockefeller, and Morgan on the witness stand. Loneragan refused.

Schwelienbach's tactics, however, had the effect of discouraging at least a few wealthy men, who told Republican fund-raisers they feared they'd be haled before the committee if they contributed.

in Texas history. A small monument stands over the burying place of the Texans.

Q. I would like information as to the birthplace of James McGloin and John McMenamin and as to the colony they settled in Texas. S. G. C. A. They were brothers-in-law natives of County Sligo, Ireland, who were living at Matamoras, in 1828, when they secured the empresario rights that had been granted to Purnell and Lovell in 1825 to locate 200 families in Texas. The first of these arrived at Copano Bay from Ireland in 1830 and established a colony at San Patricio or Hibernia. Because they were directly on the route from Matamoras to San Antonio, these sturdy Irish folk bore much of the Texas revolution.

MYRA NORTH, Special Nurse -- By Thompson and Coll

NEW YORK—Most football officials would like to see the interference rule rescinded and the defense given carte blanche to break up a forward pass by any means short of deliberate roughing.

That would simplify things and end many borderline decisions which hinge on snap judgment. Ninety per cent of completed passes are caught in the open with no defender within fouling range, so it might not be such a hardship on the offense if the receiver were forced to make the catch at his own peril.

"Decisions involving forward passes are responsible for 70 per cent of the grievances entertained by coaches against officials," says a prominent referee.

Rule 7, section 5, article 4, reads: "During a forward pass play there shall be no interference with an eligible receiver beyond the line of scrimmage except such as may occur where two players make a simultaneous and bonafide effort to catch or bat the ball."

THAT contingent clause causes all the trouble. It allows the official considerable latitude in construing interference. He has to guess whether the defender is making a bonafide effort to bat the ball or whether he is just trying to impede the receiver.

"One of my colleagues was blacklisted after many years of refereeing a Thanksgiving Day series because he courageously called a flagrant example of interference with a receiver," asserts the prominent referee.

"The most recent instance of pass interference was called against Hollingsworth of Dartmouth for impeding Hoxton of Yale in the end zone. A majority of eyewitnesses failed to detect any foul, and the subsequent ruling pleased neither side. Inasmuch as no score can be made on a penalty, the ball was awarded to Yale on Dartmouth's 1-yard line. The Elis muffed this chance to win.

"Dartmouth men were displeased because they were certain Hollingsworth had not interfered with Hoxton. Eli partisans felt that they had been cheated out of the winning touchdown by a foul committed in the end zone.

"Obviously here is a situation which invites and encourages a foul, contrary to the spirit of the rules. Assuming that Hollingsworth was making a legitimate effort to intercept the ball and committed no interference in this particular play, the fact remains that a smart defender should always interfere with a receiver in the end zone if the pass seems likely to be completed.

"The punishment doesn't fit the crime. It is shrewd to prevent a certain touchdown by fouling with the hope of holding the enemy on the 1-yard line than to attempt a risky interception.

"Legalizing pass interference would quench all these argument-provoking episodes.

"Similarly, the rule against intentionally grounding a pass should be abolished. I've officials ever call it anyway, so why assess the passer 15 yards for throwing the ball away?

"A flagrant example of intentional grounding went unpenalized in the Yale-Dartmouth game."

There is no getting away from the fact that football would be a much more pleasant game for the officials were it not for the forward pass.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By NEA Service
If one layer is good, maybe two layers would taste even better. That's the theory. Here it is in practice.
Chocolate Bottom Pie. For the chocolate layer, use 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, 1 cup milk, 1-2 cup sugar, 1-2 tablespoons cornstarch, dash of salt, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 1-2 cup cream. Beat sugar, salt and milk. Cook in double boiler 7 minutes, or until scalded. Stir constantly. Add chocolate, stirring constantly, and continue to cook until it thickens, never ceasing to stir. After it has thickened, combine 10 minutes stirring constantly. Add vanilla. When cool, turn into the baked pie shell.

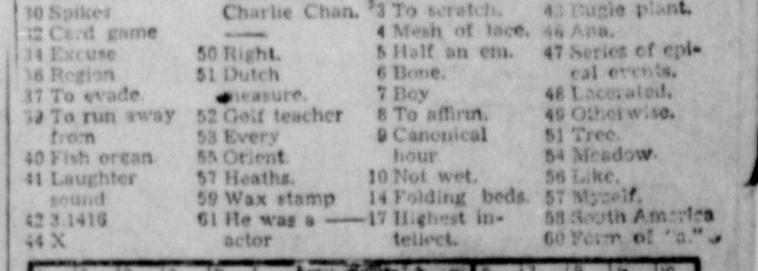

Light Top Layer
For the light layer, use 1 egg yolk, 1-2 cup sugar, dash of salt, 2 cups milk, 1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin, 1 egg white, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 1-2 cup cream. Beat egg yolk slightly, then combine with sugar, salt and milk. Cook in double boiler 7 minutes, or until scalded. Stir constantly. Return from fire and add gelatin, stirring until gelatin is completely dissolved. Then chill. When slightly thickened, fold in the egg white, stiffly beaten, and add the vanilla. Spread this magnificent benediction over the smooth dark surface of the chocolate layer. Chill until firm. Top with whipped cream. After that there is nothing to worry about.

Caramelized Pineapple Padding
Caramelized Pineapple Pudding
can stand on its head and not lose any dignity, either. For enough to thrill 8 persons, use 1 cup brown sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 quart can best sliced pineapple. Drain pineapple and cut into large pieces. In large iron frying pan caramelize the brown sugar. Then add the butter. When the brown sugar and butter have blended, turn in the pineapple and cook for 12 minutes, turning the fruit occasionally. Keep warm. For the cake top, use 1-3 cup butter, 3-4 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1-2 cup milk, 2 cups flour, 1-2 teaspoon baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon almond extract. Cream butter and sugar. Beat egg and add the butter mixture. Then slowly stir in the milk and sifted dry ingredients, alternately, a little at a time. Add almond extract. Mix thoroughly in a buttered pudding dish, arrange the pineapple and pour the cake batter over it. Bake 1-2 hour in moderate oven, until cake is browned. Serve steaming hot with ice cold whipped cream. Yes, it's really true.

4-H Club Boys To Visit Chicago

COLLEGE STATION, Tex.
 Thirty-five Texas 4-H club boys, accompanied by eight agricultural leaders, have left for Chicago where they will attend the Fifteenth National 4-H Club Congress.

Members of the group wore wide brimmed hats which the Congress has learned to accept as the insignia of the Texans.

Most of the boys won the trip through awards offered by railroads and packing house companies. The remainder will represent Texas in various national contests. While in Chicago the boys will be entertained by various companies interested in 4-H club work, will attend the International Livestock Exposition, and will be taken on a 50-mile tour of the city.

State Boys Club Agent L. L. Johnson of the Extension Service headed the group.

Three teams, which won state honors at the A&M College Short Course in July will represent Texas in national contests at the Congress.

Two Romping Girls Crossing Street—Then This

Homeward bound from school, Mildred Walsh and Catherine Redman ventured across the busy Philadelphia street. Their childish laughter was turned into screams of terror as a heavily laden truck hurtled upon them; and terror turned to anguish. Screaming brakes brought the truck to a halt. This unusual picture shows the grim instant after the tragedy. A bystander already lifts Mildred's crumpled figure. The truck driver runs to aid Catherine, whose lifeless form can be seen under the juggernaut of death. Mildred was expected to live.

MODEL VILLAGE AT MILWAUKEE RUSHED BY U. S.

BY DETLEF R. PETERSEN
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 MILWAUKEE—On the rolling woodland near here, nearly 2,000 workers are striving to complete the federal resettlement administration's $5,000,000 "model village" of Greendale so that the first "model villagers" may move in next spring.

Although it is not the largest of the resettlement administration's three "model village" projects, Greendale will embrace more individual houses than the "Greenbelt" towns under construction at Greenhills, near Cincinnati, Ohio, and Greenbelt, near Berwyn, Md.

Of the 750 housing units to be built at the town, 280 will be separate houses. In all, 518 individual buildings will be erected.

While the entire project covers 3,511 acres, the village itself occupies only 185 acres. Its general plan is similar to the other "model" villages.

According to Fred L. Naumer, regional co-ordinator here for the resettlement administration Greendale will be surrounded by a protective beautifying "greenbelt" of woodlands, parks, gardens and playgrounds. Some of the land, he said, is to be used for "allotment gardens," where villagers may grow vegetables, fruits and berries.

Other land, he said, will be used for small farmsteads.

The first block of houses, Naumer explained, "should be ready for occupancy next spring if everything goes along as anticipated. We will advertise for tenants and accept those with moderate incomes, good character and high moral standing."

"Of course, there'll be provision made for bachelors and spinsters, but we do not expect to have any single people as tenants."

The houses in Greendale, minus gas and dining rooms, will be for rent only—not for sale, the co-ordinator said. A governing body elected by villagers will be established, along with schools, churches, and police and fire departments.

"Rents, probably ranging from $22.50 to $35 per month for the larger units, must be sufficient to pay the cost of operation of the community, maintenance of the property and in addition to repay the capital investment, properly chargeable against the community."

An Ohio city is pleased with its new parking meters, though they brought the problem of convincing drunks there will be no jackpots.

Veteran of Civil and World Wars

Honored as the only Civil War veteran who also served in the trenches during the World War, Nicholas G. Van Sant, above, celebrated his 90th birthday at his home in Sterling, Ill., perusing a 28-page special edition of the Sterling Daily Gazette dedicated to him. Van Sant walks downtown daily, reads widely, and takes deep interest in veteran affairs.

"The period of repayment probably will be over a long period of years at a low rate of interest."

Electricity will supplant gas in the village. The resettlement administration will equip each house and apartment with an electric range and electric refrigerator. Alcoves in the living room and kitchens large enough for combination usage dispense with dining rooms.

Only a few of the 750 housing units are to have basements. Space for a furnace and washing machine will be provided in a "utility room" on the first floor of each dwelling. In case of apartment buildings, however, a central heating plant will displace the furnace.

Houses and streets are being built to prevent overcrowding and traffic snarls. Each building will be made of concrete blocks.

"You see," Naumer explained, "Greendale is being built to demonstrate a perfectly planned village and at the same time help relieve acute housing shortage in Milwaukee and neighboring industrial districts. Construction also gives temporary work to many unemployed."

SCHOOL IN CEMETERY LIKELY

By United Press
 ELGIN, Ill.—Possibility that the Elgin board of education might take over an abandoned cemetery as the site for a new school building has been under discussion here recently. The burial ground covers approximately 17 acres and has been unkept for a number of years.

Talent Bureau For University Offers Variety

By United Press
 BERKELEY, Cal.—With its new "Talent Bureau," the University of California can virtually qualify as a vaudeville booking house.

The bureau was established to ascertain if among the 14,000-odd students there could not be found enough real entertainment talent to render it unnecessary for student organizations to engage professional artists outside. The idea has clicked.

The date the bureau has registered 33 student "artists," ready to fill requests for almost any form of entertainment.

Singers and dancers dominate the list of applicants. Strangely enough, there are very few "skat" singers among the registered. Most of the vocalists trend toward the classical and semi-classical type of music.

The dancers range from ballet to tap, with a twin-sister act which specializes in Irish dancing and a partnership in ballroom dancing featuring the list.

Other out-of-the-ordinary artists are the girl who specializes in bird calls, a musical saw player, a "crutch act" with recitations, a violinist who is best at barn dance music, and a complete women's dance orchestra.

More orthodox entertainers include three guitarists, three piano players, a trumpet and drum player, and a piano and song act. Two others have just listed themselves as "actors."
