RES. ROOSEVELT URGES NRA-TYPE MEASURE BE PASSED BY CONGRESS

CLEANUP DRIVE IS DISCUSSED AT CC MEETING

At an early meeting of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce, held at 6:30 in order that members might attend the senior play, Mrs. Ross Hodges, Mrs. E. May and Mrs. John M. Mason urged that the city be in a thorough cleaning before the meeting of the Oil Belt Educational Association, which is scheduled for next week.

The ladies, in presenting the cleanup drive, urged that the trash, papers, filth along Main Street, and so on, be cleaned up before the 2,500 visitors arrive in the city. They pointed out that in the dirty condition it now would be very uninviting to visitors and would make a bad impression.

The directors agreed that the cleanup should be worked out immediately in order that a more acceptable appearance might be presented to the teachers.

The program for the annual Chamber of Commerce-Retail Merchants banquet, which is to be held Friday of this week, was discussed as was a breakfast to be held Wednesday morning, at which the ticket salesmen will be named and the work of selling the banquet tickets started.

The meeting adjourned early for a short, but peppy meeting.

Senior Class In Annual Play Scores Big Hit

The senior class play, "Girl Who Was Presented at the Recreation Building Monday evening before the one of the largest crowds ever to attend an entertainment in the building, and a well acted performance was turned in by all the members of the cast.

Following more of a professional amateur bearing, each actor actress carried out his part, several turning in really outstanding performances. It was evident that they had been well instructed in their parts and that they had done more than just memorize his or her part.

The play, which started on time, flowed smoothly, without interruptions, except by the laughter of the audience and even the distracting blowing of the fire siren, which marred a portion of the last act, failed to shake the actors in their parts.

Between acts and before the performance the high school orchestra played. W. T. Walton presented Harmon Ainsworth, president of the senior class, who made a short talk between the first and second act, as did J. E. Meroney, representing the school board, who called attention to the new orchestra and stage fittings which have just been installed on the stage.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2.—President Roosevelt sent a special message to congress today pointing toward re-establishment of NRA-type wages and hours legislation, a problem he described as "one of the most vital subjects of national concern."

The president transmitted a report by his committee on industrial analysis after an exhaustive study of the old NRA. The committee report noted the nation's progress toward economic recovery under the NRA, but criticized that agency as having attempted to do too much.

Major findings were: NRA aided substantially in increasing total wage distributions and in initiating the nation toward solution of questions affecting labor.

That the NRA program was especially handicapped by the effort to do too much too fast and that certain trade practices intended to raise or stabilize prices failed to function.

That both management and labor attempted to undertake unworkable provisions and simple matters such as minimum wages, maximum hours and minimum prices developed unusual complexities.

That final NRA policies in the agencies' last days were in harmony with the anti-trust laws.

"The report of the committee," Mr. Roosevelt said, "is worthy of the most serious consideration by the congress and should be made available for widespread study."

Mr. Roosevelt's message only four paragraphs in length contained no definite recommendations for new NRA legislation. That development is not expected for a month or so, after congressional action on the president's program to reorganize the federal judiciary.

LIE DETECTOR FAILS TO SAVE DOOMED MAN

CHICAGO, March 2.—Rose Rappaport, whose brother, Joseph had 15 hours to live, flung herself on Gov. Henry Horner and in a railroad station and begged him to save his life.

"If the state murders my brother," she cried, "I'll murder his family, because I'll go too."

Horner had postponed Joseph's death five times. He told the girl he did not find it in his conscience to do it again, "but" he added, "I have great faith in the lie detector."

Rose raced out of the station. She got her brother's lawyer, W. W. Smith, and they went to professor Leonard Keeler, of Northwestern University, inventor of the apparatus supposed to be able to distinguish a lie.

Joseph had 4 hours left to live when Keeler carried his lie detector into Joseph's cell.

Smith explained to Joseph that this was his last chance to live. If the lie detector showed he did not lie when he denied killing Max Dent, a drug peddler and government informer, there was a chance Gov. Horner would declare him innocent.

The machine is based on the theory that when a man lies his blood pressure jumped up.

"Is your name Rappaport?" Keeler asked.

"Yes."

The indicator moved across the paper evenly.

"Did you kill Dent?"

"No."

The pen jumped up, made a jagged peak an inch high.

"Were you present when he was killed?"

"No."

There was a few other questions were asked over and over. Joseph had three hours to live when Keeler reported to Gov. Horner by telephone.

"On the basis of my findings," he said, "Rappaport is guilty."

At 12:05 a. m. today Joseph was electrocuted.

HER NAME IN LIGHTS

by MARIE BLIZARD © 1937, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DAPHNE BRETT, good-looking, successful young New York advertising executive, decides to treat a beautiful, conscious, estate her father left her when he was killed in a hunting accident. She needs the money after five years of providing for the education of her younger sister, JENNIFER, who has just finished college.

Daphne rents unexpectedly to an attractive young architect, one LARRY SMITH, who steps into the picture and offers her a month's rental to rescue her from the bid of an undesirable prospective tenant. Daphne finds herself liking Mr. Smith more than she cares to admit. She is led to believe, however, he is married.

Meanwhile, Jennifer returns from school and vacation, but she's not the unsophisticated little sister Daphne pictured her. Jennifer has announced at once her plans for the afternoon. She requested a cocktail, and was a date with TUCK AINSLEY, Daphne's old friend, in the space of a few minutes. Shocked, Daphne suggested tea.

CHAPTER V

BEFORE she returned to the living room, Daphne slipped into her bedroom. She had once told one that she couldn't live in a two-room apartment because she had to have a bedroom for running away purposes. She had intended to tidy herself up but her real reason now was to give herself a few minutes of adjustment before she returned to this new and unexpected sister.

When she was cool and fresh again she went back to the living room through the kitchen and called to Tuck, "Give me a hand with the tray."

Tuck placed the big tray with its silver cargo on the coffee table beside Jennifer.

"Tea!" Jennifer looked up, saluted. When she did that, her nose wrinkled hungrily as it had when she was a little thing. "How quaint! Cocktails, really?"

She looked, Daphne thought, exactly 10 when she opened her eyes. She was that, except that a 10-year-old would never have such cleverly masked lashes.

"On occasions," she answered, "but this isn't one of them. I think you'll find the tea refreshing, the sandwiches and cake the best Maggie has to offer, which is excellent."

"Under the circumstances, we'll make the most of it," Jennifer said cheerfully. "Hoe in, Son." She passed a plate of sandwiches to Tuck and did very well by them herself. Daphne noted in grateful silence.

Daphne, studying Jennifer, stared at and tried to assort her notions.

Jennifer was a dream in blue satin. "I'm going to get a job in Wall Street where I'll meet lots of millionaires. I'm going to marry one," she said to Daphne.

She looked, Daphne thought, exactly 10 when she opened her eyes. She was that, except that a 10-year-old would never have such cleverly masked lashes.

"On occasions," she answered, "but this isn't one of them. I think you'll find the tea refreshing, the sandwiches and cake the best Maggie has to offer, which is excellent."

"Under the circumstances, we'll make the most of it," Jennifer said cheerfully. "Hoe in, Son." She passed a plate of sandwiches to Tuck and did very well by them herself. Daphne noted in grateful silence.

Daphne, studying Jennifer, stared at and tried to assort her notions.

HE didn't know whether she was pleased with Jennifer's decision or annoyed with her lack of consideration. She didn't know whether she was glad that Jennifer was growing up or sorry that he was no longer a child, but she liked her. She recognized duty—gratitude—than she had expected—rip—Jennifer.

Jennifer had a school uniform, was not a chic. Jennifer's chic, instinctively she eyed Jennifer, recognizing her thin waist, her long legs, her hip and toe; recognizing, mo—nifer's ability for making the most of these.

Daphne looked down at her own simple tailored frock and was a trifle surprised to find that her own figure compared favorably with Jennifer's. The knowledge did not lighten the feeling, however, that she was older suddenly. And very dull.

"What do you think of our clever Daphne getting herself promoted to an executive job?" Tuck asked Jennifer.

Daphne liked him rather more than usual for the way he put it. Sometimes—very few times—Daphne permitted herself the slightest of romantic conjectures about Tuck Ainsley. She knew him for exactly what he was. But she was a girl and he was an attractive man who had long protested his devotion to her. Tuck, who'd never done a day's work in all his 26 years, who followed the races and sporting events, who was so utterly unlike herself, was too attractive for any girl to pass up romantically without a bit of a struggle.

She looked at his rosy figure sprawled with easy grace in her big chair and listened to his pleasant drawl. She was aware that Jennifer also was appreciating Tuck's attractions. She didn't want Jennifer to appreciate them too thoroughly.

"Get a promotion, Daphne? Lots more money!" Jennifer asked.

"Yes, I'll tell you about it later. What's this party tonight? Will I approve?"

JENNIFER hugged her silken knees and her lovely face melted into wheedling lines. Daphne knew all too well. "Daphne hated being called that—it's a very nice party that Pete Pompton's sister is giving for him at her apartment at the Consular. She's having a gang in for supper around 11 and asked me to bring someone. I can't go alone so your Tuck is taking me. Okay?"

"I want Tuck to bring you home early."

"Can't you trust him?" Jennifer asked, giving him a sidelong glance.

When Daphne didn't answer because she thought Jennifer's remark in poor taste, Jennifer said penitently, "Good Heaven! Am I treading on anybody's toes? Is he your best beau?"

Daphne would like to have slapped her. Instead, she laughed. "Unfortunately I haven't attained that status yet," Tuck said quickly. "Your sister has a legion of beaux eager to be 'best.'"

"A legion of beaux? What fun. Then I can have him?" Jennifer looked at Daphne and indicated Tuck.

Daphne, picking up her tea-tray, didn't answer.

"Run along, Tuck," she said in a little while. "Jennifer has to do her own unpacking. Maggie is leaving and I'm tired."

"Come back about 10, Tuck," said Jennifer.

When Tuck had gone, Jennifer said, "What are you going to do tonight, Daph? I hate for you to be here alone while I'm having fun."

"DON'T worry about me," Daphne said dryly, addressing the shower curtain. "We'll talk this all out later. In the meantime, put this in your pretty head: I want you to have a good time and I'm going to have one myself. However, while I'm not going to act like a school chaperon, I make the rules. Okay?"

"Swell!" came back from the depths of the shower.

The room was a wreck when Jennifer finished dressing but Jennifer was a dream in blue satin with a blue flower tucked in the shoulder-length corn silk of her hair.

"You don't mind picking this up, do you?" she said to Daphne, waving a graceful arm over the wreckage of lingerie, makeup and discarded clothes.

"I don't mind this one time, Jennifer," Daphne said, sitting on the bed, "but hereafter, I'll have to do your share. I've a job to take care of and I'm not a personal maid."

Jennifer put down her powder and threw her arms around her sister. "Oh, darling, you've been so wonderful to me. I'm not going to be any trouble at all. I'm going to look for a job tomorrow."

Daphne opened her mouth wide and closed it again. Then, "Oh, Jennifer, I want you to specialize in some course. You couldn't live on whatever you'd get. Maybe only $15 a week."

"It would buy my clothes anyway and someday I'll have a lot more. I have it all planned, pet! Jerry's dad is going to get me a job in Wall Street where I'll meet lots of millionaires. I'm going to marry one."

Daphne was not impressed.

"I'll have a house on Fifth Avenue, a villa at Palm Beach and you can come and live with me," Jennifer said, and rubbed a bit of cream on her eyelids.

"To quote you, 'what fun!'" Daphne said in a voice as light as Jennifer's. "But I wouldn't count on a rich marriage for a while at least."

"Why not?" Jennifer asked impatiently, her young voice hard. "I've got what they like and they've got what I like. It's a fair exchange isn't it? A career may do for a girl like you, but I think marriage is the only sensible thing."

Daphne saved Jennifer to the door with Tuck then, with mingled emotions, she marched to her bedroom, picked up Jennifer's scarlet lipstick and painted her own mouth. It was brighter than usual. Then she stared, but hard as she stared at her mirrored self she couldn't see why Jennifer thought her an old maid. "For girls like you," indeed!

Besides figuring how Lucille Turner, 17, top photo, escaped from the woman's detention rooms to keep a jail cell rendezvous with Dayton Dean, lower photo, confessed Black Legion gunman, Detroit police faced other problems. They wondered how the girl remained several hours with Dean before she was discovered; how Dean rated a bed, two tables, a radio, shower, reading matter, soft drinks and extra food.

Romance is Jail Stirs New Quiz

ABILENE: T. L. Hamilton, a member of the Taylor County Dairy Herd Improvement Association, has found that keeping the ice out of his cows' drinking water prevents a big drop in milk production during freezing weather. He kept a slow fire on a steel drum weighted down in the water trough while the temperature was below freezing. This simple device cost no money and was very little trouble, but it resulted in the cows drinking normal amounts of water, according to Leon C. Ranson, Assistant County Agent.

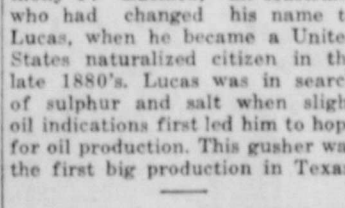

ON TEXAS FARMS

BALLINGER: Thirty Runnels county farmers terraced 3003 acres of farm land during the first half of December and the month of January under the supervision of County Agent J. A. Barton. On one farm near Crews belonging to James Wear, terraces on 240 acres were built with road machinery at a cost of $99. Teams and slips were used to build up fills where terraces crossed gullies and to open the outlets. Observers estimated that building these terraces increased the value of the farm at least $1000.

BRADY: Three hundred McCulloch county ranchers, farmers, business men and farm boys traveling in 53 cars and school buses made a tour late in January, visiting 18 demonstrations under the leadership of County Agent J. D. Prewitt. The group traveled 192 miles and visited 5 trench silos from which feed is being taken, 45 calves being fed by 4-H Club boys, 2 terracing demonstrations, one farm using strip cropping and one pasture improvement demonstration on which the mesquite had been killed with kerosene and the slopes contour ridged. At each stop the demonstrators told the visitors about their experiences with the demonstrations. A goat barbecue lunch was served at the H. D. Winters' ranch by the businessmen of Brady.

STEPHENVILLE: Sixty Erath county farmers braved sleet and freezing wind to attend the opening of 3 trench silos at demonstrations arranged by County Agent G. D. Everett on a recent tour. At a silo on the J. B. Shannon ranch, at Chalk Mountain, the group saw 70 steers being fed ensilage made from maize stalks from which the heads had been removed. At Morgan Mills, Ray Earp, opened a silo filled with bundles of Johnson grass which had passed the stage for pasture or hay but made good ensilage for dairy cows. He has started digging his second trench silo at spare time. Joe Jarrett, a stock farmer living near Stephenville, showed the visitors ensilage made from frozen cane which was readily eaten by sheep and cattle. In each of these cases, the trench silo enabled the farmer to convert feed ordinarily considered almost worthless into a valuable roughage.

top well, near Beaumont, brought in and by whom?

A. January 10, 1901, by Anthony F. Luchich, an Austrian, who had changed his name to Lucas, when he became a United States naturalized citizen. In the late 1880's Lucas was in search of sulphur and salt when slight oil indications first led him to hope for oil production. This gusher was the first big production in Texas.

This booklet of 32 pages, "Texas Empire Builders of '36" is a brief recapitulation of the main events of the struggle, and a number of schools are using it because of its clear, brief, instructive presentation of main facts in Texas history. You will find it interesting and helpful. Mailed postpaid for only 15 cents. Will H. Mays, 2510 Salado Street, Austin, Texas.

I enclose 15 cents in coin securely wrapped, for a copy of "Texas Empire Builders of '36."

FIRST TAXPAYER 10 YEARS

MARION, Ohio.—City Patrolman Bert Powell kept a 10-year record intact when he was first in line to pay this year's taxes.

Sport Glances. By Grayson

TRACK and world racing records are being clipped regularly, but horses aren't any faster. Indeed, they aren't as rapid. The phenomenal times are made possible by tracks where trainers have learned to combine speed and safety in the same track.

No two courses are identical, although they may be of the same specifications, designed by the same architect, and built by the same contractor.

Until now, architects have faced this dilemma. They could sacrifice safety for get-up-and-go by skimming the track down to a surface as hard as cement, or they could sacrifice speed by deepening the cushion to the point where it would be safe even for conformed cripples.

Stratagema always has been an example of a deeply cushioned oval. It is nearly three seconds slower than Belmont Park. In instance, Bainbridge Park of Cleveland had a skinned surface which is lightning fast. But many a trainer has refused to risk the safety of their charges there. That was one of the principal reasons the Ohio Derby fell through.

Until recently, Belmont Park was the one exception. But now there are several other strips which have both speed and cushion, notably Hialeah Park, Santa Anita, and Bay Meadows. Hialeah is the best of the bunch.

Thoroughbreds not fit to warm up animals like Man o' War, Quipsoise, Twenty Grand, Discovery, etc., hang up records at these tracks.

If Finance, which isn't even a great sprinter, can run a mile in 35 1-5 at Hialeah, a steed of the caliber of Equipoise could shade it by two seconds. And what Man o' War would have done to that record, had Big Red anything in back of him to give him a ace, is beyond telling.

When Shark whizzed six and one-half furlongs in the remarkable time of 1:15 4-5, it made the fourth world record credited to Hialeah. Blessed Evert on March 10, 1934, set a world record of 1:48 2-5 or the mile and one furlong. This time was bettered by a fifth of second by Discovery at Aqueduct, June 22, 1935.

Brevity ran the distance in the world record time of 1:48 1-5 in winning the Florida Derby at Hialeah, March 7, 1936, and set practically all the experts to telling the cockeyed world that there really was no sense in running the Kentucky Derby if the only purpose was to determine the winner. This mark was shattered by Indian room at Tanforan, April 6, 1936, in 1:47 3-5.

Q. When was the Republican part organized in Texas?

A. In 1867, as the outgrowth of the Union Leagues and for the purpose of lining up the negro vote with the radical reconstruction element, the negroes having organized into Freedmen's Bureau immediately after the close of the war.

Mrs. O. G. Lanier Speaks
At Alameda P. T. A.

Mrs. O. G. Lanier, president of City council and active worker in its various branches, was presented as principal speaker last evening when Alameda Parent-Teacher association held a program attended by over one hundred persons, and was well presided over by the new president, Mrs. C. V. Fox, who recently moved to Alameda from Fort Worth.

The association was organized only four weeks ago and has 29 paid memberships, a rating of outstanding mention.

The guest speaker chose for her timely subject, "Objects of Texas Congress of Parent-Teacher associations." Her remarks were fitting ones, acquainting the members with many valuable points in their new program of work.

Mrs. Fox will represent the association at the district convention which is slated to be held at Brownwood, Mar. 30-31.

11th Chapter of Hebrews Discussed at Bible Hour

A group of Bible students met at the Church of Christ Monday afternoon and had the splendid lesson opened with prayer said by Mrs. Bill Barnett and song led by Mrs. O. G. Lanier.

Mrs. J. D. Johnson offered the discussion from the 11th chapter of Hebrews.

Time was taken at the close of the program for the weekly collection of garments, food and other items which are given to underprivileged families of the city. This work was begun some time ago and is enthusiastically sponsored by the women of the church.

In addition to this fine cause, the donation is made each Monday for foreign missions.

Members composing the visitation committee visited a woman who is quite ill and presented her with a fruit shower. The week prior the same group furnished clothing to three members in one family.

Their personal service work is highly commendable.

B. Y. P. U. Program

A program with the title, "Extra Territorial Witnessing" was given from the senior B. Y. P. U. magazine Monday for members of the B. Y. P. U. group of Central Baptist church. Those in charge of the interesting lesson were Dan Milmo, J. D. Nichols, R. V. Robinson, and Elvin Ingram.

Present were Vivian Crenshaw, Christine Gilder, Dorothy Neville, Marie Myrick, O. B. Nichols, Pete Turner, Elvin Ingram, Annetta Faye Huffman, Inez Baker, Billy Arney, Loyd Landtroupe, Johnnie Young and sponsor, Mrs. Frank Hicklin, and program members.

Meeting With Mrs. W. O. Walker

The Women's Missionary union of Central Baptist church met at the home of Mrs. W. O. Walker, Pine street, Monday afternoon, for the first program in observance of the week of prayer. Mrs. H. S. Packwood, president of the union, presided over the lesson, and Mrs. Frank Hicklin gave the opening prayer. Devotional was brought by Mrs. H. H. Stephens from the "Power of Gospel" and was carried out very beautifully through the following program: "Courage," Mrs. F. D. Hicks; talk, Mrs. Dan Neville; "Sewing in Tears," Mrs. E. S. Brink; "Who to Pray For," and prayer, Mrs. Roy Baker.

The business session announced those who are to prepare for the workers' conference which convenes at the church Tuesday, Mar. 9.

Mrs. Hunter's group composed of eight members played against other casts made up of three, which is much more difficult to direct and round out. Questions That Some Folks Ask About Cardui

BENEFIT FOR MAL-NUTRITION

Thousands of women testify Cardui has helped them to overcome malnutrition and to ease many of the functional pains of menstruation.

"What is meant by 'helping to overcome malnutrition'?"

Cardui contains extracts of two plants which are classed among the "bitters" in medicine, because they are known to increase the flow of digestive juices—to improve digestion—so there is a craving for sufficient food for the body's needs, and by their action more energy (or strength) is obtained from the food eaten. The food, of course, brings the additional strength, but Cardui serves as the means to this end by its good influence on the digestive system.

RECIPES TO END CONSTIPATION

Every woman can protect her family from common constipation by careful menu planning. Often the cause of illness from constipation is lack of "bulk" in the diet.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies this "bulk" in generous quantity. You can use ALL-BRAN in so many delightful ways. As a ready-to-eat cereal with milk or cream, fruits or honey added. Or make delicious bran muffins and breads—put it into griddle cakes, salads or soups, or over other cereals.

Just be sure each member of your family gets two tablespoons every day—and forget the illness caused by constipation. Serve three times daily, in severe cases.

You can also forget pills and drugs that nobody likes to take—and that so often fail unless the dose is constantly increased.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B to help tone the intestines, and iron for the blood. Sold by all grocers. Made and guaranteed by Kellogg in Battle Creek.
