

POST OFFICE IN RANGER IS ROBBED AGAIN

The second robbery, or attempted robbery, of the Ranger postoffice in the past few weeks, was staged Friday night or early Saturday morning when burglars again broke into the office and blew the door off the vault in the building.
The robbery attempt was reported to be almost identical with the robbery of May 5 of this year, when the door of the vault was blown off in a robbery.
A check of the loss had not been made Saturday afternoon, it was stated by E. A. Crawley, assistant postmaster, though it was not believed that the robbery attempt had been successful. The small safe inside the vault was not damaged and the thieves did not succeed in breaking into it.
A postal inspector was expected in Ranger to investigate the robbery and to check up on the loss sustained, if any.
The postoffice robbery makes the second in six weeks and the fourth safe robbery in Ranger this year. Early in April the A. J. Ratliff feed store was burglarized, but the thieves were frightened away before they could obtain any money. Less than a month later the Ranger Machine Shop was burglarized but the thieves were again frightened away by Blackie Ricker, night watchman.
Although several clues had been obtained in the robbery of May 5, postal inspectors or local police have been unable to catch the burglars.

Wheat Crop Yield Higher In Stephens

BRECKENRIDGE, June 19.—With approximately 40 carloads of wheat marketed here, buyers have raised their estimates of the Stephens county production to considerably above the 100,000 bushels as first predicted, the yield being much more per acre than was anticipated.
Combined grain now is being thrown on the local market, the threshing expected to begin next week.
A number of growers have reported as high as 30 bushels of wheat per acre, raising the original estimate of 10 bushels to the acre to 15 as an average for the county as a whole.
The oat crop in Stephens county was exceedingly light, little if any having been marketed here. That raised was reported stored by the growers.

200 Acres of Pop Corn May Bring Return of $10,000

ORMAN, June 18.—R. D. Whately, who resides four miles south of Gorman is cultivating approximately two hundred acres of pop corn, which, unless wind or hail hits it, will produce from 40 to 50 bushels per acre.
Whately planted his corn during March and April, and has cultivated it carefully. He did not use fertilizer on any of the land, however he has 20 acres that it would have paid him to have used it on.
The remainder of his corn is on bottom land and those who have grown and had to do with the corn in this section state that it is the finest ever seen.
Whately states that he used 1500 pounds of seed in planting the acreage and he conservatively estimates that his yield if conditions continue to be favorable, will bring him in $10,000.

Post Office Lobby To Be Locked Each Day at 8:30 P. M.

Announcement was made here Saturday by Mrs. Martha Davenport, postmaster, that hereafter the doors to the lobby of the postoffice would be locked each night at 8:30 o'clock.
The decision to lock the postoffice was made after the second robbery in six weeks, and was made to try to thwart future attempts at robbery.
Mrs. Davenport stated that a mailbox, where outgoing mail could be dropped, would be placed in front of the postoffice building so that those having mail to leave town after the closing hour could obtain the same service as at present.

County Terracing Over 8,000 Acres

A total of 8187 acres of field and pasture land have been surveyed for terracing and other forms of soil and water conservation in Eastland County by workers from the County Agent's Office since October 1, 1936, according to figures released by Elmo V. Cook, County Agent.
Terrace lines were run on 7887 acres of field land and pasture ridge and contour furrowed. A tank was dammed and the terraces were sodded with buffalo grass. In addition, four pasture demonstration plots were completed, totaling 28 acres and distributed at cost for use in sub-irrigating home gardens. The pasture demonstration plots are as follows:
On the George P. Fee ranch 1 mile north of Cisco on the Breckenridge highway, eight acres were cleared of timber, fenced for modified grazing, ditched to keep off hillside water, terrace ridged, and contour furrowed. A sign was placed calling attention to the demonstration.
On Dr. M. L. Stubblefield's place, 4 miles northwest of Gorman on the Carbon Highway nine acres were cleared, ditched to keep off hillside water, terraced with wide terraces, terraced with narrow terraces, ridged and contour furrowed. A tank was dammed and the terraces were sodded with buffalo grass. A sign has been placed calling attention to the demonstration.
On Dr. W. S. Carter's place, 1 mile north of Rising Star on the Cisco Highway, 6 acres were cleared of timber, contour furrowed, and re-fenced for deferred grazing. A sign has been placed calling attention to the demonstration.
A 5 acre plot on Dr. R. H. Hodges ranch 2 miles north of Olden, has been cleared and is awaiting suitable weather for contour furrowing.
All soil and water conservation work done by the County Agent has been in cooperation with the National Youth Administration under the supervision of W. F. Shaffer, District 13 NYA Supervisor and County Supervisors D. L. Childress, T. E. Castleberry, and R. E. Bradshaw. The Texas A. & M. College Extension Service supplied funds for part of the supervision.

CONCERN IS EXPRESSED FOR SOVIET FLIERS

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Concern for the safety of three Soviet fliers, attempting a non-stop flight from Moscow to San Francisco over the North Pole, was expressed today as hour after hour passed without word from the flight.
Six U. S. Army radio stations between northern Alaska and Seattle stood by to communicate with the planes.
The Royal Canadian Signal Corps announced at Edmonton that its Fort Smith, N. T., radio station last heard from the plane at 6 a. m. CST when they were passing over Prince Patrick Islands, in the Arctic Ocean.
Later, however, the army radio station at Seattle sent the following message:
"Last definite word from the plane was at 12:20 a. m. CST. Six stations listening continuously, but unable to pick up the plane since that time."

BILBAO TAKEN BY INSURGENTS ON SATURDAY

BIARRITZ, France, June 19.—The insurgents occupied Bilbao today, capturing the ancient Basque capital after months of siege.
Thousands of men, women and children perished or fled into exile. It marked a turning point in the war and put the nationalists at the peak of their success.
When their victory is consolidated, they may be expected to turn their full force toward Madrid, which was subjected, Saturday, to a bombardment with casualties estimated at more than 100.
The siege of Bilbao ended in comparatively easy capture. The Basques decided to hand over the city to the nationalists to prevent its dynamite destruction by extremists in their own ranks.
There was scattered resistance, but apparently the main Basque forces retreated to the northwest to make a last stand.
VALENCIA, June 19.—Fifty men were killed in a mysterious explosion aboard the loyalist battleship Jaime Primo in Cartagena harbor, the government announced today.
BERLIN, June 19.—A Spanish loyalist submarine fired three torpedoes at the German cruiser Leipzig off Algeria June 15, an official communique said today. The cruiser was not hit.
LONDON, June 19.—The four-power conference, which met hastily this afternoon to appease German anger over an alleged Spanish loyalist attempt in torpedo the German cruiser Leipzig, adjourned without a decision.

BUILDING IMPROVEMENTS IN BUSINESS SECTION OF RANGER SET ACTIVE PACE

A number of improvements in business establishments of Ranger were either completed or started in the past week, showing a tendency on the part of Ranger merchants to keep the appearance of their places of business up to standard and modern in every way.
The local J. C. Penney store, under the management of D. M. Cooper, is one that has been improved. The front show windows have been remodeled, the back partitions recovered and painted and new lighting fixtures added. Other improvements inside tend toward a better display of merchandise.
The Gholson Coffee Shop, which was closed several weeks ago, reopened Monday morning with new equipment throughout. The coffee shop was repainted, redecorated, new light fixtures added, new counter, booths, tables, kitchen equipment and dishes furnished. The cafe is now open for business under the management of B. C. Johnson manager of the hotel, and is one of the most attractive cafes in this part of the county.
The Paramount Cafe which was remodeled and enlarged several weeks ago, is adding new features, also. A washed air system is now being installed at a cost of approximately $2,000, which is designed to keep the cafe cool, even in the hottest weather. When the cafe was recently remodeled a horseshoe counter was installed and a large number of tables added, which greatly increased the capacity of the cafe.
The store of Ken Umberson, Jeweler is also being enlarged and remodeled to make it one of the most attractive shops in the city. The partition between the present location and the old Fashion Shop building has been torn out, the entire interior is being painted and new fixtures added. The remodeling will about double the size of the store.
The old Ingram Confectionery has also been worked over recently, with shelves added and a stock of groceries added.
The building next door to the Chamber of Commerce which has been vacant for almost 10 years, is being renovated and repainted throughout, in preparation for a beauty shop which is moving into the new location.
Dr. E. R. Green, local chiropractor, has installed partitions in the building at 209 Main Street, to form offices, waiting rooms and treatment rooms, and has moved his offices from his residence to the business section of town. The building he now occupies has been vacant for several months.
Among other long-vacant buildings that are now being occupied is the old hotel on Commerce Street, across the street from the Texas and Pacific freight depot, which has been remodeled by Mrs. Stokes and made into a hotel and cafe. Mrs. Stokes has operated eating places in Ranger for a number of years, having recently been proprietor of Mrs. Stokes' Eat Shop, on the Eastland highway. She is now operating her new business venture in Ranger.
The parsonage of the Church of Christ is also being redecoreated and put in readiness for occupancy by the new minister of the Church, Wallace W. Aiton, who will arrive in Ranger in time to begin filling the pulpit on Sunday, July 4. The parsonage will be ready before his arrival.
One of the most important building operations started in years in Ranger is the new post office building, work on which

BARNETT NO. 1 DOWNTOWN NEARING ITS COMPLETION

One well had been spudded and another was being completed Saturday to mark activities in oil developments of Eastland county for the week.
The Barnett Petroleum Corporation and J. L. Reeves No. 1 A. L. C. Downtown, one and a half miles southeast of Eastland, section 2, E. T. R. R. survey, block 6, had run 6 1/2 inch casing and cemented pipe in the completion of the test which had shown oil from 1,453 to 1,463 feet.

AUSTIN, June 19.—Rumor that the state had ordered a blanket cut of 30,000 persons from the old age pension rolls was discounted today by John Wallace, member of the board of control.
"There never has been any instruction from the federal government for us to take a certain number off the roll and the board of control has definitely not issued such orders" Wallace said.

Judge L. H. Fleweller Writes An Interesting Account of His Trip To Many Famous, Historical Sites

About 25 miles northeast of these famous homes is Montpelier, the home of James Madison until his death. Not far therefrom is his grave in the Madison cemetery. We visited his burial place, but did not see his home, as it is now owned by one of the DuPonts and is not open to the public. Dolly Madison is also buried in this cemetery, which is now kept by the Daughters of the American Revolution. The monument at the head of Madison's grave resembles the one at Jefferson's. It is nothing elaborate. It simply has inscribed thereon the name, "Madison," and shows that he was born March 16, 1751, and that he died

June 28, 1836. Madison is known as the Father of our Constitution. As I stood at his grave and meditated, I thought how wonderful it would be if all Americans could really appreciate its spirit and contents, as well as the ideals and purposes of the great men who were its authors and framers. Jefferson, Madison and Monroe are known as the Immortal Trio. They were neighbors, living within 25 miles of each other, and all three became President. Jefferson and Monroe were also noted governors of Virginia, while Madison was a member of the first National Congress. While Patrick Henry never became President, he was elected the first Governor of Virginia in 1776, after helping to carry the vote of the Virginia convention for independence. He was thereafter four times re-elected, and in 1795 he declined the high office of Secretary of State which was offered him by President Washington. It was Patrick Henry's fiery oratory which did much to arouse the early colonists to resistance. It was hard to break away from these historical places. Realizing, however, that there were many more in store for us, we finally continued on toward Washington, which city we reached on May 12, the very day of the coronation of King George VI. While having our breakfast in Culpeper, Va., we heard a part of the coronation ceremonies over the radio. I could not help thinking on said occasion that had it not been for the blindness and lack of foresight on the part of George III, a predecessor of King George VI, our great country of today might be part of the British empire. I am very glad, however, that it is not. In spite of our faults, ours is unquestionably the greatest country on earth, and I trust it shall ever be.

The states of Tennessee and Virginia, through which we had just come, were most beautiful. Both contain some of the most wonderful scenery imaginable. The mountains of Tennessee are very beautiful, while the famous Shenandoah Valley of Virginia is too pretty for words. It lies between the Appalachians to the west and the Blue Ridge mountains to the east, the beauty of which can easily be imagined. Wonderful flowers in both states were everywhere to be seen. It was in Virginia that we first saw specimens of the pretty pink dog wood, in addition to the profusion of white dog wood which we had been enjoying for hundreds of miles. The crimson clover in eastern Tennessee is a sight to behold. Great fields of solid red would burst into view every few miles. The farmers in this region cultivate fields on steep mountain sides. One wonders, in some instances, how they do it. In Virginia the tulips, spiraea (bridal wreath), japonica, snow-ball, alcaes, pansies and many other beautiful flowers added beauty to the cities and towns, while the entire landscape, as far as we could see, was at all times a glorious sight. Many markers concerning Civil War events were to be seen along the highways in both of these states, but it would have consumed too much time to read each of them. Will state, however, that we crossed the Bull Run battlefield, as well as the battlefields on which the First and Second Manassas campaigns were waged. We also drove through the very locality in which General Lee inaugurated his famous Gettysburg campaign. At the little village of Inlet, Va., we noticed a marker showing that Betty Washington, sister of George, was buried about two miles south. We would have visited her grave had time permitted.

revere. We were not allowed to go to the third floor, where Martha Washington maintained her bed room after the death of her husband. This room was just above the one on the second floor in which Washington died, and afforded a good view of his resting place, which she looked upon many times from her south window. Mount Vernon faces east and the beautiful Potomac, which is one and a half miles wide at this point. The view from the front of the mansion is too pretty for words. The grounds in the front, in the back and to the sides of the dwelling are perfectly kept. They contain most beautiful gardens and many lovely trees, many of which were planted by Washington himself. The large brick kitchen with its spacious fireplace is just to the southwest, while the original smoke-house is a little southwest of the kitchen. The stable and carriage houses are south of the smoke-house. We enjoyed seeing one of the old carriages in which Washington used to ride. Washington's tomb lies to the south and a little west of the mansion. It was here that occurred the climax of our entire trip. I can hardly describe my feelings as I stood and gazed upon the white marble sarcophagi containing the bodies of Washington and Martha, his consort. Just the name, "George Washington," is carved on top of his sarcophagus, while only the name, "Washington," is carved on the upper portion of the foot of same. On the top of Martha Washington's sarcophagus is inscribed the following: "Martha, consort of Washington." Something else might have been inscribed, but if so, a wreath of flowers hid it from view. At the foot is the following inscription: "Died May 22, 1802. Aged 70 years." Wreaths of fresh flowers are at all times kept on these sarcophagi, which is very fitting and proper. The sacredness of the surroundings was emphasized by a marble tablet near the top of the rear of the tomb, with this inscription: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."—John XI-25, 26.

There are 18 bodies of Washington's relatives resting in the large brick vault immediately to the rear of the vault containing the bodies of Washington and his wife, Martha. His father is buried at Wakefield, Va., where George was born, while his mother is buried at Fredericksburg, Va. How strange, we thought, that neither is buried where their illustrious son lies, but such is a fact. Before visiting his present tomb, we visited the old tomb in which his body first rested until 1831, when it was then removed to its present resting place. The old tomb, as it is now known, was preserved by the State of Michigan in 1886. A marker near the new tomb discloses that its site and its materials were all provided for in Washington's will. After continuing to feast our eyes on its beautiful grounds, flowers and trees for quite a while after leaving the tomb, we returned to the Petseys home in Arlington, passing through the Arlington National Cemetery. About 6 p. m. we had a hard rain, which prevented our seeing more of Washington for the remainder of the day.

On the morning of the 14th we went to the office of our Congressman, Judge Garrett. He and his secretary, Mr. J. W. Cockrill, were both surprised to see us. Both are getting along fine, and we were happy to see them. Judge Garrett has a splendid suite in one of the two House of Representatives office buildings, and is well pleased with his office location. He furnished us with passes to the White House, the House gallery and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. These passes are of much importance, as they enable one to see a great deal more than he otherwise would be permitted. Folger's Shakespearean library was the next place of interest. We could have spent much more time in it. It is very wonderful and very beautiful, and is fast becoming the mecca for students of Shakespeare. Would that everyone could visit it. The beautiful new Supreme Court building, just across the street, was our next stop. The court room was most impressive. Its high bench, with the nine large cushioned chairs for the justices, causes one to realize more than ever that here opinions are handed down from the highest judicial tribunal on earth. The suite occupied by Justice Stone was noted by us as we passed down one of the halls. The suites occupied by the other justices are in the rear of the building and are roped off. Inside this wonderful temple of justice are high solid columns of Georgia marble. About ten were broken in the making or transportation, and had just one more of these marvelous columns been broken, a serious problem would have confronted the contractors, as there was no other marble of like kind available.

The Capitol and House gallery were the next places of interest. We spent some time in the famous rotunda enjoying the many wonderful paintings which adorn its walls. Passing on towards the House of Representatives we encountered many famous statues of the nation's great, including our own Stephen F. Austin and General Robert E. Lee. We enjoyed watching a session of the House galleries. Only a few were present on said occasion, and much loud argument could be heard concerning some proposed Indian measure. After lunch we went to Senator Connally's office in the Senate office building. He had not returned from lunch, but his secretary, a Mr. Jackson from San Angelo, Texas, furnished us with passes to the Senate gallery. As the Senate was not in session that day, we planned to use them later. On our way home to get some rest we saw the White House for the first time since arriving at Washington. It is a stately old mansion, and its grounds are very attractive at this time of the year. We did not visit it on this occasion, but enjoyed seeing it as we passed. After a much needed rest and a splendid dinner, we made our way to the Library of Congress. Its interior is considered by many to be the most beautiful in the United States. It is indeed wonderful, and one can spend hours therein without tiring. In its over four million volumes information can be obtained on almost any subject. The private reading rooms provided for members of Congress are elegantly furnished. On our way home, we circled the Lincoln Memorial, and got a splendid view of his lighted statue. It was all very impressive.

most any subject. The private reading rooms provided for members of Congress are elegantly furnished. On our way home, we circled the Lincoln Memorial, and got a splendid view of his lighted statue. It was all very impressive.

On the morning of the 15th we visited the White House. We passed from the east entrance directly past the greenhouses and into the basement. There many portraits of former Presidents and their wives adorn the walls, while several rooms are regular museums and contain dishes, articles of furniture and many other relics used by each of our former Presidents. Judging by the portraits and relics, Andrew Jackson was outstanding. We thought the portrait of Mrs. Rutherford B. Hayes was particularly attractive. Ascending the stairs to the first floor, we were ushered into the spacious entrance corridor, from which we were shown the State Dining Room on the west, the Red Room, the Blue Room and the Green Room on the south, and finally the Gold Room on the east. The Red Room is used mainly as a family parlor. It is next to the large dining room on the west, which dining room Presidents Coolidge and Hoover used regularly, but which the Roosevelts do not use except on special occasions. Rutherford B. Hayes was the only President who ever took the oath of office in the Red Room, while Grover Cleveland was the only President who was ever married in the Blue Room. The Blue Room is where ambassadors and other notables are received by the President. It adjoins the Red Room and is situated just east of it. The Green Room adjoins the Blue Room on the east. It is used mainly as a waiting room for those who are to be received by the President in the Blue Room. The Gold Room, which occupies the entire east portion of the first floor of the White House, is used for balls and receptions and other gala events. It is in this large room that the Roosevelts have their Christmas tree each year. Its name is derived from its many gold furnishings and drapes. The golden piano, which was made especially for and presented to the White House by Steinway and Sons many years ago, is an object of much beauty, while the brilliant chandeliers are gorgeous to behold. The President and his family live upstairs, and were not "available." However, we were shown the stairs from the first to the second floors, down which the President and his wife descend on state occasions. As they reach the main floor, the Marine band, which is stationed in a part of the spacious corridor or hall, plays, "Hail to the Chief." Attractive paintings of former Presidents also adorn the walls of the entrance corridor, as well as the walls of the five beautiful rooms I have just mentioned.

Word 'Blue' Enriches American Language

CHICAGO.—The English adjective "blue" has supplied Americans with many of their picturesque compounds and colloquialisms, according to a resume of its history contained in the second section of the "Dictionary of American English."

From "blue," active American tongues have given to the language "Blue Monday," which the dictionary says, dealt with the 19th century "Sunday spree" and its resultant hangover.
Kentucky, the "Blue Grass state," Delaware, "The Blue Hen" and Connecticut, the "Blue State," all derived their names from this English adjective.
Other usages are "blue stockings," "the blues," "Blue Point" (oysters), and "blue streak."

CAST OF CHARACTERS
CORAL CRANDALL, heroine and senior at Elton College
DAVID BENDER, Elton chemistry professor and Coral's husband
DONNA ALLEN, Coral's sorority roommate
HOYT MARQUIS, Coral's one-time fiancé

CHAPTER X

"DAVID, I simply can't understand it," Coral said, as they sat drinking their after-dinner coffee at the Tea Kettle. "That process has been missing two weeks, and not a single sign of it has appeared. It disappeared from the concealed drawer in your desk and vanished into thin air. You'd think that if the thief had found it, we would have seen an announcement by some company of their 'discovery.' They'd want to make the announcement before President Norton makes the loss public."

David lit a cigaret and puffed on it moodily. "I've stopped even having guesses as to what happened to it, Coral. All I can think of is that it was my fault, it was stolen, and that's all. Dean Weston and most of the other faculty members think I stole it. It was inexcusable for me to leave that drawer containing the only copy of the process unlocked. I don't want to be howled at in the lab while I was sneaking out of the building. I know that's what you think I did. I've drawn deeply on my cigaret. It's just what I think it is. I know that you're impossible for anyone to get into that lab Thursday afternoon, and the process was obviously stolen then. My two suspects were out of town at a wedding. I was in my room, and since I was no closer to the laboratory, I was locked. Even the janitor took the afternoon off. I don't know how I did leave the door open. I don't know how I got into the room itself was right about."

"Coral reached across the table and took his free hand. "Don't worry about it too much, darling. I'll get everything you come out of this eventually." Her brow wrinkled with worry. "I do wish you could be straightened out right away, though."

"I gave up. Half an hour ago, I gave up. I've been thinking that I have reports and was discharged in disgrace."

do such a dreadful thing?"

"You know the process was stolen. You spread the story around the campus," Coral said quietly. "You knew the process was stolen, because you took it. Didn't you? Answer me! Didn't you take it?"

Donna was angry now, her eyes were frightened, her usually rosy-bud mouth was twisted in an ugly grimace. "I didn't take the silly process. You're crazy!"

Coral took her by the shoulders and shook her a little. "If you didn't take it you know who did. I'm sure of it!" As she released her, Coral's shoulder struck against a hanging bookcase. It swung crazily on its cord, then crashed, books and all, to the floor. As she stooped to pick them up, Coral noticed a slip of blue paper protruding from the bent leaves of a dictionary. She caught it up with a cry of triumph. She looked at Donna squarely. "You did a very poor job of hiding it. Now, let's have the whole story. I'm going to Professor Maxwell and you're coming with me."

Donna sprang to her feet, her eyes blazing. "Oh, no, you don't! In the first place I didn't take it. Hoyt did. I saw him, so he gave it to me to keep for reasons both of us have . . . good reasons. You can't do a thing to me, because I still have the whip hand, Coral. If you try to report me for this, I'll get there first. I'll tell Maxwell that you took it, that you found it in your dictionary. I'll tell him David helped you and that you tried to sell it to my dad. I'll tell him you and David are married. In fact, Miss Coral Crandall, I'll tell everyone everything and more, too, and I'll make 'em believe me. I'll be the campus heroine and will I chuckle to see you and your precious David thrown out of here." She laughed loudly.

Coral looked at her gravely for a long minute. She turned and walked to the door. As she opened it, she wheeled and faced Donna again. "You've had your chance. I'm going to Maxwell and Benderdorff with this story and the process. Do what you like. I know what I must do, and I'm sure my story will be believed."

Donna spoke contemptuously. "I'm afraid you're wrong. I'm going to Benderdorff and Maxwell, too. We'll see who tells the most convincing story. You and your noble David, or little Donna. Your talent won't stand a chance against mine. Wait and see!"

WHEN Aneroid won the historic Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park, a race which has been won by the very best horses which ever trod a race course, he not only established himself as one of the crack horses of the season, but he once more proved that even the best of judges can be wrong.

Aneroid won the Suburban by five lengths. He had 110 pounds up and was being given 18 pounds by Rosemont, winner of the Santa Anita Handicap. It should be noted here and now that Aneroid isn't partial to weight.

He took the lead at the start, galloped the opposition dizzy in the first quarter, galloping such as Snark into dizziness isn't an easy task—and raced along as he pleased. As he pleased was the astounding pace of 36.4-5 for the half, 1:35.4-5 for the mile, and 2:01.3-5 for the mile and a quarter.

The fastest previous Suburbans were 2-02, made by Equipse and Head Play in 1935 and 1933, respectively. Head Play, carrying 114 pounds, won after a lively battle with Discovery—a battle which left Cavalcade distanced—and Equipse, carrying 132 pounds, took the lightly weighted (107) Osculator.

MOREOVER, few horses in history have run a mile and a quarter in faster time.

In 1913, Whistleroom II was timed in two minutes flat, but all now know that the timer stopped his watch at the wrong spot. The fastest time for a mile and a quarter was Sarazen's great International special against Epinard, the French invader, in which the time was 2:00.4-5.

Sun Beau, once known as the "Iron Horse," was a specialist at this distance and ran more fast races at a mile and a quarter than any horse that ever lived. He once scored in 2:01.3-5, as did Aneroid, once in a fifth of a second slower, and several times more under 2:03.

The early history of Aneroid is interesting. He was bred by the Jangollen Farms of John Hay "Jock" Whitney, at Langgolen, in the great Valley of Virginia. He is a son of the aging stallion Thester, long a pillar of the various Whitney breeding farms, from Auburn by the good sire, Messenger.

As a youngster Aneroid was not so much. In fact he seemed pitifully lacking in all those qualities which, in his breeding, he should have had. "Jock" Whitney ought to know a horse when he sees one. The Whitneys have bred and raced horses for generations.

Yet he thought so little of Aneroid that he disposed of him for $150.

A gentleman by the name of E. Brunner purchased Aneroid. He nursed him along until the horse had won $1700 as a two-year-old. Then last year Aneroid kept improving until he was one of the best sprinters of his age, earning more than $8000.

Aneroid has demonstrated his sprinting class this year, but because no one thought he could get over a mile, he entered the Suburban at odds of 10 to 1. He snugged nearly $10,000 in the Suburban, and is now ready to tackle any other handicap horse at the longer distances. And those who saw him race in the Suburban are sure that "Jock" Whitney made just as bad a mistake in selling Aneroid as he did when he sold Townsend B. Martin Court scandal on the morning of the day that horse won the Flamingo Stakes.

them by the breath of his mouth. . . . For he spoke, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast" (Psalms 33:6,9).

The Lesson-Sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The true theory of the universe, including man, is not in all material history but in spiritual development. Inspired thought relinquishes a material, sensual, and mortal theory of the universe, and adopts the spiritual and immortal" (page 547).

Oakland, Calif., physicians say trout are the least color blind of fish, which bears out the theory that a trout always knows a green angler.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS - By Blosser

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. In what way did George Fisher make himself especially objectionable to Texans?
A. When the Mexican General, Teran, found it impossible to enforce customs collections at Galveston, Fisher was without a position, and offered his services, which were accepted as secretary of the ayuntamiento at San Felipe. He was soon caught doctoring his reports and was discharged in disgrace.

Q. Where and when was the Huston-Johnson duel fought?
A. At Chalk Bluff, near Texana, on the Lavaca River, Feb. 7, 1837.

Q. What was the Mexican Congress plan to establish penal colonies in Texas?
A. Lucas Alaman, minister of relations, alarmed by the rapid colonization of Texas by families from the United States, proposed, Feb. 8, 1830, to increase the Mexican population of Texas by making it a penal settlement, the convicts to be employed in agriculture. He also proposed to suspend the colonization laws as applied to Texas and place that department under the general government. Other radical suggestions for preventing Americanization of Texas were proposed by him.

Q. How many and what provisions of the Social Security Act are now in operation in Texas and how many are beneficiaries of the act?
A. Eight of the ten provisions now apply to Texas, under which about 956,000 Texans are directly benefited. Those in operation cover unemployment compensation; aid to the needy aged; maternal and child health service; child services for crippled children; child welfare services; vocational rehabilitation and public health service. Constitutional amendments will be voted on in August to permit Legislative compliance with requirements in regard to the needy blind under 1 years of age and assistance of destitute children.

Living Standard Key to Child Labor Issue

The child labor amendment to the Constitution has been pending ever since 1924, and from the looks of things it may well be pending 10 years hence. It is in an odd spot; it seeks to effect a reform which everybody favors, but it seeks to do it in a way with which a great many people disagree.

A lot of people have tried to think of ways to get around this obstacle. The most recent attempt is being made by Cong. Dudley A. White of Ohio and Senator Warren R. Austin of Vermont, who have come up with a substitute amendment.

It has been objected that the 1924 amendment, if ratified, might give the federal government control over child training and education as well as over child labor. So this substitute lays down strictly limited objectives. It reads:

"The Congress shall have power to limit, regulate and prohibit labor in mines, quarries, mills, workshops, factories and manufacturing establishments, of all persons under 16 years of age."

At first glance, this would seem to do the trick. Certainly it ought to quiet the fears of those who have visions of Uncle Sam stepping into the schoolroom and the home to spy how children shall be reared.

But the child labor problem is far from simple. It isn't merely a matter of children in "mines, quarries, mills, workshops, factories and manufacturing establishments." One of the greatest fields of child exploitation, for instance, is to be found in agriculture.

Many of the notorious tenant-farmer setups are so designed that the tenant cannot hope to make a go of it unless he has three or four children and keeps them busy in the fields from dawn to dusk. Many of the farms that use large numbers of seasonal workers hire whole platoons and battalions of children. No one can object to the ordinary farmer who has his sons lend a hand with the chores; but without interfering with that sort of thing, it ought to be possible to throw some safeguards about the youngsters who are exploited in the fields and orchards of commercial farms.

Then there are the sweatshops that send work out to be done in the home. It is hard to see how this new amendment would touch them; yet they offer some of the most vicious examples of child labor in all America. The child that slaves in a slum kitchen on one of the "novelty trades" needs just as much protection as the child that punches a clock in a factory.

In the long run, of course, it is not a constitutional amendment that will end child labor, but a general, country-wide rise in prosperity; a rise of the kind that will end the poverty which compels people to eke out insufficient incomes with the labor of their children. Child labor is nothing more than a by-product of destitution. It won't vanish entirely until destitution vanishes.

Meanwhile, however, regulation is needed. And the regulation needs to be drafted with extreme care.

"Balance of power" is finally explained by the recent headline which reported Europe selling arms on a "big scale."

Charters Show a Slight Increase

AUSTIN. — New charters granted during April totaled 141 against 143 the preceding month and 140 in April last year, the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research has reported. Capitalization totaled $2,294,000, increases of 12.2 and 69.3 per cent over the preceding month and the corresponding month last year respectively.

"There were substantial increases in the number of charters granted the manufacturing and oil groups compared with last year and sharp declines in the number granted to public service, real estate, building and transportation groups," the bureau's report said.

Fencing Master Says U. S. Not to Favor Dueling With Swords

By United Press FORT WORTH—Jose Vilardell, Spanish-born fencing master who now lives in Fort Worth, believes America will never popularize blood dueling. Despite the flurry of comment over a recent duel between two youths at Los Angeles Junior College, Vilardell thinks this country will not accept such matches generally.

"In this country fencing is purely a sport, and exercise," he said. "It should remain that way. You can kill easily with the sharpened sword. And if that should happen in this country, the reaction would be harmful to fencing as a sport. Vilardell judged and second many duels in his native Spain while he was a student. Once he saw a blade accidentally slip entirely through the chest of one adversary in a "friendly match." The Fort Worth man, organizer of more than a score of Southwest fencing clubs, is one of the section's premier fencers.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By Mrs. Gaynor Maddox - NEA Service Staff Writer

RIPENESS in a melon is not test of its flavor. How did it ripen? Answer that and you can tell in advance how it will taste. Ripening on healthy vines is the secret of well-flavored melons. And the best way for you to tell if a melon has ripened on the vine is to examine the stem scar. If the scar is smooth, clean and cuplike, it means that the melon was picked at "fall-slip" or when ripe enough for the fruit to separate easily from the stem. A melon picked at "half-slip"—or at a less ripe stage—will have some of the stem adhering. If there is a little secretion of sugar around the stem scar it is a fairly safe indication that the melon is sweet enough for your table.

Which Melons Are Which

Do you know your melons? They rate careful study, particularly from June on, when the market is full of them. Americans call many melons cantaloupe which are really muskmelons. A cantaloupe is really one kind of muskmelon. Other muskmelons are honeydews, casaba, Persian.

The honeyball, recently grown more popular with American families, is a cross between a Texas cannonball and honeydew. It is round, and its flesh is thick and green in color. Your melon season will last well into October, so plan to use as many of these blessings to hungry man as your inventive genius for menu making can accommodate. Your melons of almost any type have a chummy way with cottage cheese. Cut the melons in half and scoop out centers. Mix cotlage cheese with tender chives, chopped, and place the cheese in center of the cold, but not over-chilled, melon. It makes an ideal summer luncheon dish.

Honeydew served in gleaming crescents with sections of vivid green lime alongside make as cooling and as welcome a summer dessert as any epicure could wish for. They are equally delicious for breakfast.

Cantaloupe Salad

A pinkish yellow cantaloupe, peeled and cut lengthwise in long strips, can be turned into a beautiful salad. Lay the strips on lettuce leaves and serve with a French dressing made of olive oil and lemon juice and very little salt and pepper. There are many varieties of melon salads, ice creams, etc., but a melon is usually able to stand by itself and as a general rule is far better for the single life. So use them for the most part as melons, not as something else to put in a fruit cup or a salad. Given a chance, they can reveal flavor and zest all their own.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson
MESSAGES FROM GENESIS

Text: Hebrews 11:3-10, 17-22

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

THE Messages from Genesis that we have been studying during the last quarter are linked for review with the powerful sermon on faith in the 11th chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews.

The author of that chapter, seeking to enforce the nature and power of faith, drew illustrations from these stories in Genesis, giving us an example of the proper use that we ourselves may make of these stories from the childhood of a race.

TWO precautions are necessary in our reading, studying, and teaching of these lessons if we would interpret them correctly, and derive from them their moral and spiritual lessons.

We must remember that they are stories that come from the early history of an ancient people, and like all such stories, they were gathered together by later writers who sought to record and treasure for the people their spiritual history. They are stories full of eastern imagery.

On the other hand, their moral and spiritual teaching is not to be lightly esteemed because it is in this ancient setting. If we read the Old Testament intelligently, we can see how the conception of God grew in the minds of devout Israelites.

The thought of a tribal God concerned primarily for themselves as a chosen race gradually enlarged until in such a book as the Book of Jonah we have a conception of a God of peace and love concerned for all people.

In the later chapter of the Book of Isaiah we have the representation of the suffering servant, revealing the expiation of the innocent for the guilty that found its fulfillment in the statement of Jesus and in the Christian doctrine of the cross.

BUT to view these stories just as ancient tales reflecting the conception of a tribal God is to miss something of the reality of the faith and moral integrity that were at the very foundation of this larger conception of the God of the whole universe, a God of mercy and justice.

There is the story, for instance, of the conflict between the herdsmen of Abraham and Lot, and of Abraham's fine attitude of peace and willingness to set peace about his own matter's interests. There is the revelation in Jacob of the finer qualities in a man that strive for mastery in the presence of trickery and deceit and the temptation to see nothing in life but his own interests. There is the sermon on forgiveness and magnanimity, virtues that we surely have not conspicuously attained in our modern world, that is preached so clearly in the powerful story of Joseph.

The fact is that when we seek the moral and spiritual element in these ancient stories, we find things that speak to us concerning all the needs and problems of our life today, and suggest the moral and spiritual elements that we must recognize if we would build aright in our individual lives and in society.

The study of primitive society makes clear basic facts and principles that are apt to be lost sight of in a complex society. For instance, in the patriarchal era that we have been studying the herdsmen who grabbed a well for himself was an anti-social and ungodly man.

We do not always see so clearly that men of that age corresponds to the modern society are equally anti-social and ungodly. Genesis has much to teach.

"A Star Is Born"

Janet Gaynor and Frederic March came to the Arcadia theatre today for two days in David O. Selznick's technicolor production, "A Star Is Born."

This glamorous story of a little country girl who came to Hollywood, faced the odds of 100,000 to one, and scaled the heights of stardom, marks the first up-to-the-minute story to be filmed in technicolor.

Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Andy Devine and Lionel Stander are featured in the supporting cast, which also includes Owen Moore, Peggy Wood, Elizabeth Jenuis, Edgar Kennedy, J. C. Nugent, Guinn Williams and others.

William A. Wellman directed "A Star Is Born" from a screen play by Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell and Robert Carson. The original story was by Wellman and Carson.

The film shows many famous Hollywood landmarks in their natural colors for the first time. Among these are the Trocadero, world-famous night club, Grauman's Chinese Theatre, the Santa Anita race track, the Biltmore Bowl is it looks during the annual banquet of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the Hollywood Legion Stadium, where the stars see their prize fights, the Hollywood Bowl, the Brown Derby, celebrated eating place, and the famous intersection of Hollywood boulevard and Vine Street, the center of Movieland.

Ranger Girls Look
Good In Holding
Cisco to 8 to 5

In their first game the Ranger Girls Softball team lost to Cisco girls at Cisco Friday night, by the score of 8 to 5. This was really a creditable showing for the new Ranger girl team, for many of these girls have never played in a game, and especially a night game. The Cisco girls have been playing for several months. The Rangerettes had trouble in hitting the Cisco pitcher. This girl, who was above the average for girl pitchers struck out seven batsmen. D. Gray, pitching for Ranger struck out five, three of these in one inning.

An example of the brand of softball these girls play will be seen by the fact that not one base on balls was given by either pitcher. Ranger girls executed two double plays and twice with the bases full and no outs, held the Cisco team without a run. And for those who claim girls games are long drawn out, tiresome affairs, this seven-inning game lasted exactly one hour.

Plans are being made to bring this same Cisco team to Ranger Friday night and a treat in promised fans who see the game, for the Ranger girls are developing rapidly and the Cisco girls have a good team. Especially will it be worth everyone's time to see the Cisco girl pitcher in action.

Even in defeat, Managers Lemma and Snyder feel the girls played a very creditable game and look forward to the return game with Cisco, when the Ranger girls go on the home field they will be outfitted in snappy new uniforms.

Cisco Wins Close
Game from Ranger

A home run in the eighth inning, with one man on base, blasted away Ranger's lead over Cisco in the Oil Bolt Softball Association, which Ranger had maintained since early in the game, and Cisco won a fast-moving game 6 ytho score of 5 to 4. Ranger scored first in the sec-

Become a Poet

By United Press

LAKE BEULAH, Wis.—Back of the time-furrowed brow of William Francis (Bill) Hooker as he observed his 81st birthday lay memories of the trail he traversed with Buffalo Bill Cody.

From his rich experience as bullwhacker, plainsman and wilderness settler Hooker has drawn poetry, sage sayings and homely advice which he has penned for publication: The State of Wyoming honored him for his part in its evolution and for his friendship with the world-famous Buffalo Bill.

A monument was erected in 1930 on the site where Hooker years ago built his cabin in the LaBonte creek wilderness. Another was set up in 1931 at the intersection of the Yellowstone and Bozeman trails over which he passed when the pioneers were ending and added three more in the third, after which they went scoreless for the remainder of the game.

With Minter pitching for Ranger, Cisco was blanked for six innings, but the proverbial seventh-inning rally put Cisco within one run of the Ranger entry in the league. Then came the eighth, when, with Minter weakening, a single and a home run led the game for Cisco.

The game was one that had been scheduled earlier in the season, but which was rained out.
