Clear Labor Concept Is Nation's Need Now

To say that labor is in confusing today is merely to say that everybody knows. But a good deal of the confusion is in the fact that we as yet have no settled law or even common concepts of labor rights and duties.

That is not strange. The labor problem in its modern, streamlined phase is new to the United States. We are simply fumbling our way toward settled conceptions.

The Wagner act is one of our first efforts to codify rights that are by no means commonly agreed upon. Neither employers nor organized workers seem entirely satisfied with it as it stands. But it would be odd if this early experiment were perfect. Basic concepts of labor rights are not yet clearly defined, and no law can be successful unless it reflects a generally accepted concept.

For instance: An odd labor election was held the other day by the New York Labor Relations Board. The question usually set up by such boards is "do you wish to be represented in collective bargaining by X union or Y union?"

But this ballot offered a third alternative, that "neither union" be chosen as representative. And lo and behold, when all the ballots were counted, X union got 88, Y union got 21, and the vote for "neither union" was 287.

Does this suggest that perhaps many of our labor board elections have failed to offer a chance to vote for what the employees really wanted? Industrial elections should be indicators to show the will of employes as regards collective bargaining. They do not yet do this perfectly, and here there is room for experiment.

Picketing rights have not yet been generally agreed upon. A recent New Jersey decision is that a strike is over and picketing is therefore illegal when the places of strikers have been filled and business has been resumed. Certainly there will be no general agreement that this is the final work on such a point.

On the other hand, suppose there are 100 employes in a plant, and 10 of them want to strike. They do, and bring 300 allies as "pickets" to forcibly prevent the other 90 from entering the plant. Is that picketing? There simply is no way any general agreement on the rights and wrongs in such cases.

New York electrical manufacturers are suing a union there under the Sherman anti-trust act, charging that it constitutes a monopoly. With the administration blaming monopolies for price-fixing and raising costs arbitrarily, is it possible that closed unions will be held to be as much "in restraint of trade" as monopolists in the ordinary sense?

Can union members sue their unions if they are damaged through acts of the unions? This question, too, is before the courts.

There are a thousand questions like these on which people generally must become agreed, and their concepts written into law before a smooth and systematic conduct of labor relations will be possible.

Baffling Case of Long Lost Bridal Pair Still Enigma

Drama, Mystery Locked In New Orleans Disappearance

NEW ORLEANS - New Orleans' mystery of the vanished bridal couple, a classic of the public administrator's office, has defied a solution for a score or more years, according to Major A. W. Newlin.

them purchased from exclusive jewelry firms here. The name of the depositor had been lost, however; and nowhere could the full name of the couple be discovered.

Offered at Auction "It was one of the hardest things I ever had to do finally to offer the contents for sale."

Newlin explained that the couple was sought in what ads locally and in major cities. "My own belief is that this young couple stored their presents after their marriage, went away on a trip, and both lost their lives in some disaster or epidemic during their honeymoon," he said.

In a bank box several years ago were found letters written to relatives by a 17-year-old boy in a northern prison during the Civil War.

"Undoubtedly, historians would have paid for these documents," Newlin said. He explained that because of their personal nature, they were not offered for sale.

Another interesting case was that of the "mysterious, heavy suit-case." The depositor, who had not claimed the bag for a decade or more, was discovered in Canada, and to this was added the pro rata cost of the administrator's office.

"Just set the figure and I'll send you a check," the owner wrote to Newlin. He even sent his son to reclaim the suit-case. "It turned out that the suit-case was filled with silverware."

Perhaps some of New York State's non-paying guests with the Japanese would mistake Sing Sing for a Chinese city and break down its walls.

 The dog would bolt for the prison entrance, bark until permitted to go outside, and race to the warden's house.
 It would scratch on the door until the warden admitted it. The

Dallas to Receive Trees from R.E. Lee Home In Virginia

By United Press
DALLAS, Texas—Two walnut trees brought from Stratford, Westmoreland county, Va., birthplace of Gen. Robert E. Lee, will be planted in Lee Park in Dallas at the ground breaking ceremonies Jan. 19 for the construction of a replica of Lee's home at the park.
 The walnuts were sent to Mrs. Murrell Lee Buckner and Mrs. J. Early Lee, co-chairmen of the ground-breaking committee, four years ago by Congressman Hattin W. Summers. They were kept in the Southern Methodist University greenhouse.
 The replica of Lee's home, Arlington, will be built by the Dallas Park Board at a cost of between $12,500 and $15,000. A further grant of about $15,000 the WPA will be spent for landscaping, building of walks and bridges at the park.
 One of the walks will lead from the Lee home to his statue, also located in the park. The Lee home will be of colonial style and his picture will be donated by the Southern Memorial association to be hung over the fireplace.
 Members and alumni of the S. M. U. chapter of Kappa Alpha, the fraternity founded by Gen. Lee, will attend the ceremonies. Lee's birthday was recently made a legal holiday in Texas.

Safety Becomes The Watchword In Road Building

AUSTIN.—Safety has become the day's watchword in the design and construction of state highways, according to Charles E. Simons in the January issue of Texas Parade. Engineers of the Texas Highway Department are giving constantly increasing thought to making the highways engineeringly safe. Because of Texas' great size, the comparative youth of its highway system and the scarcity of funds when measured by modern traffic demands progress has been, of necessity, slow. But progress is being made and the traveling public in Texas is being presented, as each project is finished, with tangible evidence of the forward-looking men who plan the highways of tomorrow.
 Motorists traveling Highway 2 or Highway 5 through Montague county may observe at first hand the most modern installation in Texas from the standpoint of the convenience and safety of the traveling public. In this project, Highway 2 underpasses Highway 5 and continues to underpass the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad. Both Highway 2 and Highway 5 are important interstate highways. Highway 2 carries the heavy Oklahoma-Texas interstate traffic. Highway 5 has Texline in the Panhandle for its western terminus and Texarkana for its eastern terminus. It runs through the northern tier of counties bordering the Red river and is a major traffic artery, both from a local and statewide standpoint. It is one of the longest highways in the state.
 Observation of the traffic intersection at Buffalo where the Houston-Dallas highway crosses Highway 43 led to the conclusion that, for safety's sake, grades at major highway crossings must be eliminated. The Buffalo intersection was the scene of many accidents. Both highways are heavily traveled and some of the collisions resulted in heavy damage to humans and property. The accident record of this crossing has improved materially. But as long as safety depends to such a large extent on the human element, depends on the vision, alertness and

Weather Complaint Not from Mark Twain

By United Press
ST. LOUIS—But for one reason, the remark, "Everybody complains about the weather, but nobody ever does anything about it," might be considered Mark Twain's most familiar quote—he never said it.
 Cyril Clemens, nephew of the famous humorist and president of the International Mark Twain society, said he had done research on the quotation and found that Charles Dudley Warner was its author.
 Warner, a neighbor of Twain's at Hartford, Conn., and who collaborated with the humorist in writing "The Gilded Age," was a staff member of the Hartford Press and Courant. The line about the weather appeared in an editorial written by Warner in 1899, according to Clemens.

Hero Worship of War Lords Ends With Invasion

BY EARL H. LEAF United Press Staff Correspondent SHANGHAI, China.—"Glorifying the Chinese general" is an "Old Chinese custom" that has gone out of fashion in the present Sino-Japanese conflict, as the entire nation and its scores of war lords fight shoulder-to-shoulder for national existence.

Personalities have been submerged entirely, with the exception of General and Madame Chiang Kai Shek and a few commanders whose names flash across the news pages for a few days and disappear.

Consequently, newspaper correspondents have found it impossible to find any subjects for glorification. The Chinese people, who love to worship heroes, also miss an outstanding hero in this war. The hostilities in Manchuria during 1931 produced Gen. Ma Chan-Shan, noted for his drooping whiskers as well as military prowess.

sought to hide his light behind a bushel.

China's most colorful figures are remaining in the background as much as possible. The "Christian General" Feng Yu-Hsiang is reported to be leading the Chinese forces on the Tientsin-Pukow railway front, but it is not possible even to confirm his whereabouts.

Generals Tsai Ting-Kai and Ma Chan-Shan are "somewhere on the front" but nothing more is known. The "Ironside Commander," Chang Pa-Kuei was reported to be in command of the Shanghai sector but it was never officially announced.

Gen. "Hundred Victory" Wei Li-Huang reluctantly talked for a few minutes with the United Press correspondent on the Shansi front. He said every Chinese soldier was a hero, not the commander. The whereabouts of the "Young Marshal" Chang Hsueh-Liang is a mystery even to his associates.

The "Big Three" of South China, Li Tsung-Jen, Pai Chung-Hai and Chen Chi-Tang, are scattered widely, nobody known just where. The trio of erstwhile Hopei military leaders, Sung Chen-Yuan, Chang Tse-Chung and Liu Juming, after their debacle in the Peiping-Tientsin-Kalgan area, received additional publicity only when they were sent elsewhere for punishment.

Marshal Yen Hsi-Shan, "Little Tiger of Shansi," had a brief day in the news when he fled the city that had been his headquarters since he raised the banner of revolt against the Dragon Throne in 1911. His whereabouts are not definitely known.

Gen. Han Fu-Chu, "King of Shantung," held the front pages longer than any one by sitting on the fence. Other famous colorful generals, such as Liu Hsiang, Liu Cheh, Tang En-Po, Yu Han-Mo, Yu Hsueh-Chung, Fu Tso-Yi, Sung Yuan-Liang and Chang Chih-Tsung, are avoiding lionization as much as possible.

Much is being heard of Chu Teh, the "Old Warrior," commander-in-chief of the Chinese Red Army, now rechristened the 8th Route Army, but that is due to the fact his name is linked to his famous troops, rather than any desire for personal glorification.
