20,000 Saved Homes Are to HOLC Credit

Just how the Home Owners' Loan Corporation is going to turn out in the long run, it is too early to tell.

But one thing must be chalked up on the credit side of its ledger. That is the fact that by midsummer of 1937, a total of $46,752,363 covered by 20,844 home mortgages had been discharged, paid in full.

Bear in mind that the reason in most of these cases for HOLC refinancing was that the maker of the mortgage was in danger of losing his home by foreclosure. Thus, whatever else the HOLC does or does not do, it has helped 20,844 Americans to real home ownership.

The interesting thing about the torn-up mortgages, reports Charles A. Jones, HOLC general manager, was that most of the people who made them had been carrying standard three-year mortgages on their homes for years. These mortgages had been renewed every three years or so, and were, in effect, perpetual. Today, thanks to the HOLC, thousands of these people know true home ownership for the first time.

There is a good deal of talk in the country today about "What do we really want?" "What are our real goals?"

One of the things on which practically everyone will agree is that it is better to have a country of home-owners than a country of renters; better to have a country of small land-owning farmers than a country of tenants and share-croppers.

Neither of these objectives flies in the face of the modern trend toward industrialization, mass-production, socialization in the broad sense, which is plainly irresistible. There is a point and a place where common effort ceases to be desirable, and most Americans draw that line at the door of their homes. The American dream of "a home of one's own" will not down, and it must not.

The common idea is a false one that to pay $1000 down on a $7000 home, carrying a perpetual mortgage for the rest, is home ownership. That is a means of securing a more or less definite tenure in a home, but it is not home ownership. The key to the HOLC procedure is the payment not only of interest on the mortgage but also, little by little of the principal. That is the road to real home ownership, as the HOLC's patrons have found out.

Anything that helps to give the country 20,000 new home-owners can never be quite written off as a total loss.

Your Income Tax; Who Must File a Return This Year

Returns are required of every single person who for the year had a gross income of $5,000 or more or a net income of $1,000 or more and of every husband and wife living together who for the year 1937 had an aggregate gross income of $5,000 or more or an aggregate net income of $2,500 or more. Widowers, widows, divorcees and married persons separated by mutual consent are classed as single persons. The personal exemptions are $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married persons living together and for heads of families.

Husband and wife living together at the close of the taxable year may include their income in a single joint return or make separate returns of the income of each. If separate returns are filed, one may not report income which belongs to the other, but must report only the income which actually belongs to him. If a joint return is filed, such return is treated as a taxable unit, and the income disclosed is subject to both the normal tax and the surtax.

Almost at once, its poultice-and-vapor action starts to loosen phlegm, relieve irritation and coughing, help break local congestion. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

In order for a return to be classified as a joint return of husband and wife both spouses must have had some income or deductions in the year for which the return is filed, and the return must include the income and deductions of both spouses.

If a joint return is not made by an agent of the taxpayers, it must be signed by both husband and wife and sworn to before a proper officer by the spouse preparing the return, or if neither or both prepare the return then by both spouses.

Where separate returns are filed by husband and wife, the joint personal exemption of $2,500 may be taken by either or divided between them in any proportion as agreed upon.

In filing a joint return husband and wife compute the earned income credit in the same manner as in filing separate returns. If taxpayer's net income is not more than $3,000 the entire net income is considered to be earned income.

Husband and wife may elect each year to file a joint return or separate returns. Where, however, joint or separate returns have been filed for a particular year, neither husband nor wife may after the due-date of the return file an amended return or returns on a different basis for that year.

TY COBB is gone, but Georgia's baseball cannon rumbles on. While none approach the Georgia Peach, the Cracker state will have five strong candidates for major league batting titles this year—Johnny Mize, Cecil Travis, Wally Moses, Luke Appling, and Rudy York.

And Georgia wood is likely to smack with authority for some seasons to come, for all save Appling are comparative fledglings.

Mize, Demorest's large donation to the Cardinals, improved under the pressure of having to make good when Ripper Collins was sold to the Cubs. He is the most formidable challenger of his champion teammate, Joe Medwick, whom he trailed like a faithful hound in 1937. He hit .364, and in compiling 31 home runs, socked one in every park in the National League.

Finally settled at shortstop, Travis of the Nationals should improve his average of .344.

WALLY MOSES of the Athletics is likely to go into a hot streak at any time and accomplish most anything. Moses has unlimited possibilities at the plate and on the paths. The hustling "rap from Vidalia" batted .320 in 1937, and his 25 home runs make him a threat in that department, too.

Appling led both big leagues with the stick in 1936, and all the White Sox shortstop has to do to edge out such renowned macemen as Charley Gehring, Lou Gehrig, and Joe DiMaggio is obtain a flying start.

York of the Tigers demonstrated ed that he was a potential handed Babe Ruth in baseball one of the Bambino's records hitting 17 home runs in August. The big boy from Atascadero for 33 circuit clouts and 307 in 104 games.

York is one of the reasons why Georgia's five-star parade again will make life miserable for opposing pitchers.

The Southeastern Conference has made the situation so simpler. Its rules provide that scholarships may be awarded athletes in the same manner that they are awarded to other students by regular scholarship committees.

Scholarships provide for matriculation fees, books, and board.

There is no fixed limit to number of scholarships to awarded athletes. And no hypocrisy.

Texas Traffic Toll Worst In History

AUSTIN, Texas—State police officials today reviewed Texas' 1937 traffic accident toll and scored it as the worst in the history of the state.

"Sickening," they agreed, as the story of how 2,043 people lost their lives in traffic in the 12 months' period over the state was unveiled. "Most of them could have been saved by a little caution on the part of the drivers."

Nearly every accident—15,055 of them—reported to the state department left some one lying on a street or highway in the throes of agony. The injury list rose to 16,183 as the "Black Year" in accidents closed; many never to walk again—others to die from the effects of vehicular assault.

Records regarding pedestrians disclosed that 2,684 were struck down, 529 of them killed.

In reviewing the picture safety experts at state police headquarters ers pointed out that 897 of 2,043 dead suffered their fatal injuries within city limits, and 124 were killed on open highway. The remaining 22 death locations were undetermined from the reports. Speed, they declared, was blamed for most of the fatalities.

Death paths on Texas' highway system are being guarded by state officers against traffic violations as a possible in lowering the expected toll. A strict enforcement program throughout the system, particularly at places where the accident map shows numerous accidents, is underway. It was brought out in the review of Texas' "Black Year," that, if favorable results are shown in 1938 map.

CHAPTER XXIV
 SPRING had indeed come to the valley, and to the blue-green hills. Connie knew that in no other spot in the world could it have awakened more beautifully. She knew that this, his own beloved country, was where Bret would come. Hadn't he said that no matter how far he roamed, always he must return here? And she had wondered if Bret's country might come to have the same influence over her.

face, blue eyes clear and untroubled and serene.
 "You didn't expect to find me?" she asked. It seemed to her he should have known she would be waiting here.
 "Hardly!" His laugh was harsh. "I supposed you were sailing somewhere on azure seas. With Rodney Brandon. Why didn't you go with him?"
 "I'll tell you why," Connie answered quietly. "But I can't tell you here. Aren't you coming in, Bret? Or no... wait! Will you walk with me—up our hill?"
 "I didn't suppose you remembered that we had a 'hill,'" he said gruffly. There was no yielding in his dark eyes. "I can't see what's the use of your telling me, after all. I suppose you simply changed your mind again—on another impulse. As you probably will do time and again without end."
 "You hate me, don't you, Bret?" Her voice was soft, but her lips quivered. "Not that I blame you. I deserved that. I deserve anything you care to say to me, or think against me. But, please—if I fetch my wrap, before you come in, will you wait up the hill?"
 "As you like..." His manner said that it did not matter. He would remain as he was; stoic, impersonal, defenses furled.

urally, I love it; it is part of me. Not only of me, but of all my people who lived here before me. Plain people. Pioneers. My great-grandfather was granted his plot of land from General Washington."
 He had pride in his people, as he had in his land; more that pride, respect and reverence. She understood why; it was the pride of ancestry, of blood; it had nothing to do with fame or money or material things.
 "You think I will change again," she said, searching for words to break down the barriers between them; the pride, the hurt, the force of his will. "But I shan't. I am sure of that. Sure than I ever was of anything. I've grown up, Bret. I suppose you think it is about time! It was a painful process. I had to hurt not only myself, but others, too. Rodney for one. You, perhaps most of all. Or maybe myself—if you won't try to understand and forgive me."
 "There is nothing to forgive," he said. Still he stood, staring out at the hills on the horizon, watching the sun sinking slowly behind them, the sky turning into a glory of scarlet and gold, blue and violet. "I am as much at fault as you; there is as much in me to forgive. I let you change me. Each of us is what each has always been."

She knew how back in the old brick house with its ivy covered walls and stately elms, that this had come to pass; she would find peace here. Whether she again found happiness would depend upon Bret, and Bret alone.

"You hate me, don't you, Bret?" Her voice was soft, but her lips quivered. "Not that I blame you. I deserved that. I deserve anything you care to say to me, or think against me. But, please—if I fetch my wrap, before you come in, will you wait up the hill?"
 "As you like..." His manner said that it did not matter. He would remain as he was; stoic, impersonal, defenses furled.

"You're terribly wrong," she said again. "Not that I blame you for thinking of me as you do. I did try to change you, Bret. I'm glad I didn't succeed. I loved you because you were different from other men. Because you were as you are..."
 "And I love a girl named Katie Blyn." His tone was bitter; he turned on her, for a moment only. "You're not trying to tell me you are that girl again?"
 She shook her head, caught her lip between her teeth; tears pressed so close behind her eyelids, a choking in her throat. "No, not that girl. But not Constance Corby, either. Maybe you will believe me, Bret—and believe in me—when I tell you what I have decided to do."
 If he did not, then nothing ever could make him. She would know that he never would love her again. That her plan, though she would carry it through, alone, if necessary, would not bring him back to her.
 "What have you decided to do?" Bret asked her.
 She said, "I have decided to give away all my millions."

Connie helped Eloise and her mother about the big house, opening shutters, airing the high-ceilinged rooms; dug in the garden, loosened the hard earth for young seeds that soon would point tiny green sprouts towards the sun. She helped in the huge kitchen, learning to bake biscuits and corn bread almost as good as Aunt Berntha's; she took long tramps over Bret's bridge, up into the hills. The days were full to overflowing, though they were a time of waiting. And then one day the waiting was ended; Connie went to the door to open it to find Bret standing there.

"Shall we sit down?" Connie asked, and waited for Bret to spread his handkerchief on the log. He did that for her, but he did not sit down. He stood looking out on that wide panorama of wild, untrammelled majesty, feasting his eyes, and his soul.
 "It's my country, too, now, Bret," Connie said. "I believe I love it almost as much as you do. I believe I'll always come back to it. I know it will never disappoint me, or fail me, but, like nowhere else in the world, will make me 'new' once more."
 "I'm glad—it means that to you," he said; but with that same reserve and stiff formality. "Natures were scattered over the country."

"You're terribly wrong," she said again. "Not that I blame you for thinking of me as you do. I did try to change you, Bret. I'm glad I didn't succeed. I loved you because you were different from other men. Because you were as you are..."

Her heart skipped a beat, turned over, steady still. But her smile was steady and unsurprised, her eyes direct and unwavering.
 "Hello," she said, as though they had parted but yesterday, instead of weeks ago, and in friendliness, instead of in anger and hatred. "Won't you come in, Bret?" She held wide the door.
 He said, "What are you doing with your mouth; a dark flush upon his skin; his eyes were bright, somber. Perhaps they could not believe what they saw, this girl in a simple blue frock, her hair blowing and curling about her bodies were scattered over the country."

"Shall we sit down?" Connie asked, and waited for Bret to spread his handkerchief on the log. He did that for her, but he did not sit down. He stood looking out on that wide panorama of wild, untrammelled majesty, feasting his eyes, and his soul.

Q. Did any of the Fort St. Louis colonists escape the massacre?
 A. A number escaped and later died or were killed along the coast. A few others were scattered among the Indians who were more friendly. Two of them, Jean L'Archeveque and Jacques Grollet surrendered to de Soto and were taken to Mexico.

Q. What was La Salle's purported reason for desiring to plant a colony at or near the mouth of the Mississippi?
 A. Having explored the Mississippi to its mouth in 1682, at which time he formally took possession of the country in the name of Louis XIV, king of France, La Salle went to France in 1683 and received a commission to return with about 400 persons, establish a colony, build a fort, subdue and civilize some 15,000 Indians to undertake for Louis XIV the conquest of the territory to the north

Q. How many explorations did La Salle make from Fort St. Louis into the interior of Texas?
 A. In October, 1685, he took a number of his followers and was away some six months, those who survived the expedition returning ragged, destitute and ill. The little that is known of this trip indicates that its purpose was to learn more about Nueva Vizcaya than the Mississippi. A second expedition in the spring of 1686 was to locate the Mississippi, but was frustrated by swollen streams, fevers, desolation and desertions. In four months he returned with only eight of the twenty men with whom he started. The third was the fateful expedition on which La Salle was assassinated near Navasota by his own men.

Q. What is the tradition as to the apparitions of Maria de Jesus de Argeda, the "Woman in Blue."
 A. When Juanos Indians appeared at the convent of San Antonio at old Ileta, New Mexico, in 1629, and sought missionaries to work among them, they stated that a beautiful "Woman in Blue" had appeared among them, preached to them in their own tongue and commanded them to go in search of missionaries to teach and baptize them. Fifty years later Father Massenet was told by Tejas and other Indians of visits to their ancestral tribes of a "Woman in Blue" preaching to each tribe in its own language, and that none of them knew from whence she came or where she went.

Q. How is it said that the identity of the "Woman in Blue" was established?
 A. Father Alonso de Benavides went from New Mexico to Spain in 1631 and told of the miraculous visitations. He was instructed to go to the Convent of the Immaculate Conception at Acreda, on the border of Aragon and Castile, and make inquiry for Mother Maria de Jesus. He did so, and was told by her that between 1621 and 1631 she had been transported as many as 500 times to Indian tribes in distant lands, where she had preached to each tribe, and that they had understood her, though neither knew the language of the State Department doesn't grant passports to Spain, a couple of thousand Americans have contrived to get into that country to bear arms for the Spanish republican government.

About 1200 Americans are members of the Abraham Lincoln brigade and about 1800 others are aiding the Spanish government in medical trucking, tractor and other services. More than 350 American fighters have been killed in the past year and perhaps twice as many wounded.

Occasionally a senator barks about the activities of these volunteers. Recent dispatches show their battalion is being used in the Loyalist effort to hold Teruel against the Franco forces.

There is nothing the State Department can do about this situation except deplore the fact that so many Americans are so un-neutral, and perhaps watch passports more carefully.

Curiosity naturally arises as to who the Americans are. One of them, it can be said, is Hans Amlic, a brother of Congressman Thomas R. Amlic of Wisconsin. Hans has just returned after nearly a year with the International Brigade. He was commander of the Lincoln battalion at the important battles of Quinto and Belchite, and has been wounded twice. Recently he was married to Miss Millicent Bennett, a well known American newspaperwoman, at brigade headquarters in Albacete.

David McKelvey White, son of a former Ohio governor and himself a former English professor, was a machine-gunner in Spain. He has returned to edit a magazine to promote the Robert Merriman of Reno, former economics instructor at a California university, is the brigade's chief of staff.

Philip Detre, a Roosevelt Democrat from Texas, is now commanding officer of the battalion. He had been in Germany and Japan and came to hate fascism. Harry Hines of New York, former editor of the National Maritime Union's publication, The Pilot, was killed in action. Also killed was Sam Levinger, son of a prominent Cincinnati rabbi. So was another friend of Amlic's, the son of a former Los Angeles mayor.

Amlic thinks the intellectual level of the American battalion is higher than that of any military group ever assembled. It includes lawyers, editors, writers, professors, poets and many college graduates.

About 25 per cent of the American troops are Communists and they make good fighters, says Amlic, who doesn't like Communism. He voted once for Hoover and once for Roosevelt. Amlic insists there's little Communism in Spain.

The republican forces will win the war unless Germany and Italy strengthen their forces by hundreds of thousands of more troops, Amlic thinks. He has some thrilling stories of American heroism in vital battles and will be telling them over the country in an effort to raise funds for the rehabilitation of members of the Lincoln battalion who have been partially or totally disabled.

Modern bullets now make a clean flesh wound or else they kill you," Amlic says. (Copyright, 1932, NEA Service, Inc.)

CHOCOLATE PETAL DESSERT

Chocolate Petal Dessert

One and three-quarter cups milk, 1-3 cup sugar, 3 tablespoons flour, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 ounces walnut meats, 8 marshmallows.

Heat milk in top of double boiler. Mix sugar and salt. Double add to milk. Beat constantly. Add chocolate, cut in pieces, and continue to beat until dissolved. Cook 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Beat egg, add to mixture and cook only 1 minute. Remove from heat, cool slightly, then add vanilla nuts cut in pieces and 8 marshmallows cut in quarters. Pour into serving dishes and garnish with marshmallow flowers. To make flowers, cut the remaining marshmallows crosswise in half and then cut each half almost to the center in 8 sections. Separate petals and place this flower on top of each pudding with some chopped nuts in the center.

Cover a plain cottage pudding with Brown Sugar Sauce and it will be pretty smooth, too.

Brown Sugar Sauce
 (Serves 4 to 6)

2 cups granulated raw brown sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1-4 cups water, 2 egg yolks, pin. salt 2-1-2 tablespoons brandy.

Combine sugar and cornstarch. Slowly add water and stir until well blended.

Slowly bring to boil and continue to stir for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Heat egg yolks.

Tomorrow's Menu
BREAKFAST: Grapefruit and cranberry juice, dry cereal, creamed dried beef on toast, raisin coffee, milk.
LUNCHEON: Philadelphia pepperpot soup, warm French bread, peanut butter, creamy rice pudding, tea, milk.
DINNER: Lamb chops, hash, spoon bread, buttered peas, sliced tomatoes with chives, French dressing, chocolate petal dessert, coffee, milk.

Gradually pour the sugar mixture on the beaten yolks, beating vigorously with a whip. When all is harmony, add the brandy a little at a time. Now bring on your hot cottage pudding. Pretty smooth for the man of the house.

Rice pudding has a bad name for simplicity. But make the smooth creamy type with not an egg present and serve it chilled in a dark china dish with a garnish of gooseberry jam on its snowy bosom and many a man will stoop to conquer.

Creamy Rice Pudding
 (Serves 4 generously)

Two tablespoons raw white rice, 1-2 cup sugar, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 quart whole milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, few drops bitter almond extract.

Combine thoroughly washed raw rice, sugar and salt in large-heat-resistant glass casserole. Add the whole milk and mix well. Set in pan of water and bake in slow oven (300 degrees F.) for 1 hour. Stir every 15 minutes for first hour. Then add vanilla and almond extract and continue cooking for 2 more hours at same low temperature. Stir twice during the first hour, then leave it in the hands of Providence. Chill and remember the beautiful gooseberry jam.

Ranger High School News

BY DOROTHY BYAS

For those who slept through last week, we shall review the doings. Monday was set aside for registration of those who had not already been registered. On Tuesday the second semester started and all books were issued to the classes. Wednesday, of course, was club day, and here is the club news:

Sub-Deb Club

The Sub-Deb club has had two very interesting programs at its last two meetings, dealing with personality. We heard talks by Sue Turner, Cecelia McDowell, Doris May, Bessie Robinson and Marise Chastain, on "Developing Personality." Other subjects were etiquette, how to have friends, care of hands, how to be popular, and unusual parties. — Reporter, Marise Chastain.

Spanish Club

The program for this meeting included a Spanish play, a Spanish poem and some Spanish songs. Two new members are to be admitted to our club. — Reporter, Betty Jo Woods.

Library

In the Library club, three talks were given last Wednesday. Ancient and modern libraries were discussed by Annie Marie Hill. A talk by Clarabell Coffmann on special libraries was made and Rita Gallagher talked on library schools. Plans were made for the coming club programs. The club decided to purchase a scrap book to be filled with clippings gathered by the members. — Reporter, Nova Young.

Home Ec.

The dietetics class of Ranger high school was honored by a speaker Friday, C. E. May spoke on life insurance and its benefits. Each member of the class enjoyed the talk very much.

The Future Home Makers chapter of Ranger high school met on Wednesday in the regular session, at 11:30. The program was presided over by the president. The theme of the program was from the Home Ec girls' creed. The "Story of Hannah" from "Far Above Rubies" was told in a very charming manner by Miss Spinks. — Reporter, Alpha Leo Robinson.

Safe Drivers Club

The members of the Safe Drivers club were a bit astonished when our usual sponsor, Mr. McGahey, didn't appear. Well, we just sat there until came Mr. Ringold, that teacher who was educated "up north" somewhere. He talks "that way." It doesn't make much difference now, 'cause he got us Safe Drivers with some of those jaw-breaking words of his. We just looked at each other and looked at each other until some way he found out that he wasn't in front of his civics class, then he began to talk natural. That was better, because we all understood him. As he talked on and on about putting on the brakes of a car, how a man and a woman did it, we laughed harder and harder, but the real laughs didn't start until he demonstrated each way. He then broke loose on accidents in the halls of Ranger Hl. Well, we were just ready to go see Mr. Walton about putting up stop lights in the halls when he ups and quit talking on the subject, and started on how to run when you saw a spook. No tellin' how much more we would have laughed if that bell hadn't rung. — Reporter, Rossie Hodges.

Dramatic Club

In the Dramatic club new officers were elected for the semester. Plans were made for programs and entertainments during the coming year.

Journalistic Club

Portions of Mrs. Hicks' book, "Organ Notes of Dawn," were read during the club period by Dorothy Byas.

I wish to thank the reporters and other students who have been so gracious in giving any news during the last semester, and ask those newly elected to continue the club news.

I AM AN ADVERTISING MAN

For over thirty years I have been writing advertisements for national advertisers — shoes, soap, cereals, automobiles, radios, tobacco, blankets, tooth powder.

To me it is the most fascinating work in the world — learning about the merits of merchandise and then telling people about them — bringing greater comfort, and enjoyment, into people's lives — introducing people to new pleasures, helping them to get the most for their money.

Besides being fascinating, it is satisfying! My intimate experience with advertisers has shown me that, except for rare exceptions, the manufacturers and merchants of this nation lean over backwards to be sincere and honest.

The law of advertising is simple once one understands its working — the more people know about the merit of a product, the more people buy it. The greater the volume of sales, the less the cost to manufacture. Savings in making mean either lower prices to the consumer or greater value put back into the merchandise.

As an advertising man I can sincerely affirm that it pays to read the advertisements in the newspapers — for news of new things, for bargains and savings.

There are thousands of other men — and women — devoting their lives to advertising writing, who will tell you the same thing. THEY KNOW!
