Joe Kennedy Talks a Lot of Sense

The presence of that red-headed Irishman at the Court of St. James makes a lot of Americans feel better about their country's chance for peace. Joe Kennedy gives signs of being the ambassador that the United States has needed for a long time. That first speech was simple, it was straight-forward, it was sensible. If Great Britain—or any other country—gets funny ideas about how the average American looks at the world scene, it won't be Joe Kennedy's fault.

It was good to read in Kennedy's speech such passages as these:

"Most Americans insist that their country retain its independent and unmortgaged judgment as to the merits of world crisis as and when they arise."

"Where the present interests of Great Britain and the United States meet is in the prevention of this generally feared world war."

"If the nations should again become engulfed in the cataclysm of a general war, we should make ourselves very strong and then pursue whatever course we considered to be best for the United States."

"Best for the United States"—that's putting it the way it ought to be put and leaving room for no misinterpretation. Joe Kennedy is a plain-speaking man. He wants the position of his country to be understood. He said that two ideas were wrong. One was that the U. S. wouldn't fight under any circumstances short of actual invasion, and the other was that the U. S. could never remain neutral in the event of a general war. When Kennedy says that majority of the American people prefer the middle ground he is right. The American people believe that keeping to such a course is the surest way to keep out of war.

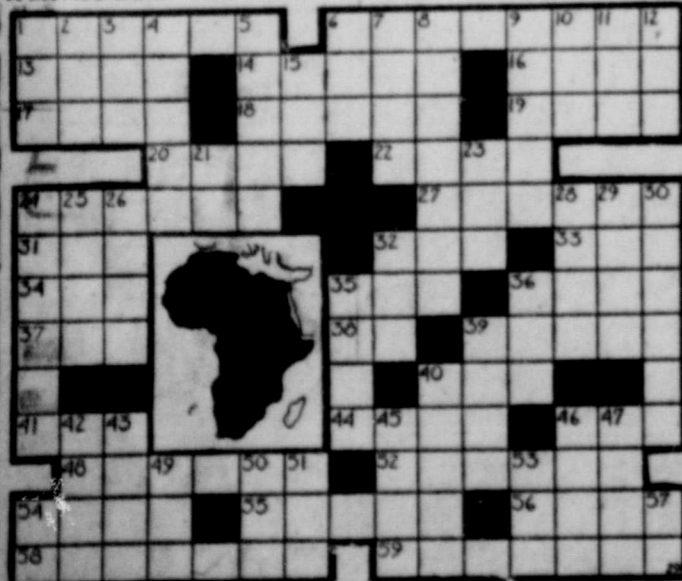

Joe Kennedy will be no errand boy at St. James. He will like no boots. And the British should like him and respect him for those reasons. They received his speech enthusiastically, even when he frankly warned that the U. S. would go whichever way seemed best to the U. S. Kennedy said that Americans refuse to believe in the inevitability of war. That is true. The American outlook is not fatalistic. Neither is it foolish. Americans know that there is a good chance that most of the big nations of the world will be at one another's throats—and soon. But with men like Joe Kennedy in the important posts in the foreign service, a great many Americans feel that their nation is a great deal less likely to mix in the bloody mess. They remember all too well Ambassador Page's maneuverings prior to America's entrance into the World War. Many of them still blame Page. And the great majority of them hope that Joe Kennedy won't make the same mistakes.

McDonald Finds Historic Emblem In Neighbor City

William H. McDonald, state land commissioner, this week found a historic emblem that he had been looking for years—and discovered a bit of his heritage, that it was within 10 miles of his home town of Eastland.

It was the tattered, weather-worn flag of the famous Parsons' brigade of Civil War fame. The famous flag, made by women volunteer workers of the old Houston Bayou region, had passed from one member of the Parsons' brigade to another until Capt. Robert Willis Tanner, blind veteran of Weatherford, gained control of it. He kept it for several years, but later turned it over to General Marshbanks of Waxahachie, the commander.

When Gen. Marshbanks died—the last surviving member of the famous Texas fighters—he had made a provision in his will that the flag should be perpetuated, and willed it to Mrs. A. B. Conroy, of Ranger, 10 miles from McDonald's home town, the daughter of the blind Capt. Benner. She now lives at Mineral Wells.

Meet Billy, a 'Juvenile Juror'

When 2-year-old William Olive got a summons to appear for jury service in a murder case in Houston, Tex., he laughed right out loud, as shown above, and were court officials' faces red? They said they couldn't understand how the infant's name got in the jury wheel, but Billy's clutching the summons to prove he really got it. He is the only William Olive now living at his address.

Fire Commissioner Urges Observation Of Clean-Up Week

AUSTIN.—Marvin Hall, state fire insurance commissioner, today urged statewide observance of Clean-Up Week as an effective means of fire prevention. The week of April 3-10 has been set aside by Governor James V. Allred for the annual clean-up campaign.

"This will be an excellent opportunity to dispose of unnecessary rubbish, combustible materials, and inflammable goods or solutions which naturally accumulate around the home, store and factory," Hall said. "These, and other hazards, can be removed or reduced to the direct benefit of all concerned."

Dairy Products in State Are Increased

AUSTIN.—Dairy manufactured products in Texas during February increased substantially over the corresponding month of last year, the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research stated. Reports to the bureau from representative groups of dairy manufacturing plants indicate an increase over February last year of 43.9 per cent in butter production, 38.3 per cent in cheese production, and 25.9 per cent in ice cream production. During the first two months of the year the respective increases were: Butter, 32.4 per cent; cheese, 35.9 per cent, and ice cream, 33.5 per cent.

When young ladies of the Girls' Preparatory School at Chattanooga, Tenn., don their sun-glasses and go for a stroll, they pick up reflections of all sorts of interesting things. Mirrored in the dark lens worn by Dorothy Crabtree, at left, is a perfect image of Chattanooga's airport, Lovell Field. And when the photographer snapped a picture of Betty Billups, at right, he caught not only her happy smile but a reflection of her friend, Elizabeth Nixon, in the spectacles.

No Wonder You Are Constipated!

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? Bread, meat, potatoes? No wonder you're constipated—due to lack of "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It means the kind of food that forms a soft, bulky mass in the bowels. It's this mass that helps your bowels move.

The common sense thing to do about it is to eat a natural laxative food. Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast will give you just the "bulk" you need. And it gives you, in addition, Nature's great intestinal-aid, vitamin B. Eat this crunchy toasted cereal every day, drink plenty of water, and life will be brighter for you! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Treating Self Is Often Dangerous Health Head Says

AUSTIN, Tex.—One of the traditional American economic personal virtues has long been that of self sufficiency. But one situation in which the trait of self sufficiency can be overdone is during illness, states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

"He who treats himself has a fool for a doctor" is a phrase which should strike home at a good many Texans. Too many of our citizens, when indisposed, jump at conclusions as to what is wrong with them, and to go the other way, to a drug store for a bottle of advertised medicine.

ON THE WAY

Manganese Seen As a Potential Texas Industry

DALLAS.—Opportunity for development of one of Texas little-known but vital resources, manganese, is seen by the All-South Development Council in actions before both houses of the national congress aimed at encouraging domestic production of this ore, termed by the War Department the No. 1 strategic material.

The fact that manganese, which "puts the starch in steel," and in fact is indispensable in making sound steel, and as such is of prime importance in national defense, was stressed in recent congressional committee hearings on the bill of Sen. John E. Miller of Arkansas specifying that a proposed million-ton stockpile be compiled from domestic sources.

Texas is one of 20 states having known substantial deposits of manganese, some of which, in Jeff Davis and Val Verde counties, saw development started during the World War, but not carried on after that emergency period. Of the indicated consumption of manganese in the United States in 1937, of 911,563 tons, probably less than 40,000 tons was domestically produced, although there are sufficient manganese ores in this country for all peacetime or wartime purposes.

The principal reason for the lack of development of domestic manganese, Washington hearings have shown, has been the comparatively low metallic manganese content of American ores. It was also brought out that the 1935 reciprocal trade pact with Brazil, cutting the manganese tariff rate in half and applying also to other foreign sources, principally Russia and Africa, had stagnated domestic production just when new concentrating processes were giving promise of making manganese mining here worth the effort and investment.

Besides the Miller bill there are concurrent resolutions in House and Senate calling upon the Secretary of State to remove manganese from the commodities coming under the Brazil agreement, and to exclude it from proposed new tariff treaties.

Testimony before the Senate Military Affairs committee was to the effect that, with only that tariff protection, a domestic industry utilizing several new "concentrating" processes would develop within a few years to the point of making this country self-sufficient in manganese. It was pointed out, though, that American ores could not be developed on short notice for "emergency" use.

With the success of these moves, the council's report said, Texas would be in position to bid for a large share of the 68,000,000 man-hours of employment and $24,000,000 in payrolls that compilation of such a domestic manganese reserve would bring, and a favorable official attitude toward these undertakings this and kindred development enterprises would be an important factor in attracting this, as well as other types of industrial investment.

When Famed 'Wits' Get Together

Gentler in appearance, but no less explosive in their utterances, 82-year-old George Bernard Shaw and 74-year-old Margaret Asquith are shown above in earnest conversation in London. The capacity for sharp wit shows itself in the face of the once fiery-haired woman writer, and the same qualities lie barely hidden behind the beard of the Irish playwright. Shaw attracted first notice as a playwright 44 years ago, the same year the woman writer married Herbert Asquith, one-time prime minister, thus becoming Lady Oxford and Asquith. They are pictured at a luncheon marking the start of work on the filming of Shaw's "Pygmalion." Notice the playwright's "auxiliary" glasses.

This ignoring of the existence of physicians and relying upon self-diagnosis is a bad gamble with ill health. For these persons, for all practical purposes, have isolated themselves as far as medical service is concerned.

In fact, they persist in this ignorant or careless complacency until they become acutely ill, when at last they call for professional medical service—which frequently is too late.

"It is indeed too bad that so many persons deliberately raise a barrier between themselves and the family physician. Considering him only as supplementary aid when the situation gets personally out of hand, there are literally thousands who through delay have made it impossible for medical science to render its best service and thus were penalized by a protracted illness, a chronic disease, or the premature termination of life.

"It follows that many people with great profit could surrender this 'isolationist' idea and appreciate the physician for what he really is. When his abilities are more generally given an opportunity to be applied early, when his advice on living habits is sought, and when he is considered as the only person to be relied upon to conserve health and treat illness, then and then only, will the present remarkable service that medical science stands ready to give be afforded its maximum opportunity for good."

Fewer Children Are Killed Upon Texas Highways

AUSTIN. — There are fewer children killed on Texas highways each year principally because the children themselves are being taught to protect themselves from highway hazards, according to Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer, who cites the work of the Department of Public Safety among school children as being one of the chief factors in the protection of life.

Despite every effort of the State Highway Department to build highways as safe as it is possible to make them, the personal element remains. The Texas Department of Public Safety, through the safety division, is working to make the personal element a factor for safety, he said.

Particularly gratifying to the members of the State May Day committee has been the complete cooperation by the safety division in all activities directed toward increased protection for children.

Personnel of this division receive vigorous training after passing on duty. The effectiveness of this training is shown by comments given on increased efficiency and the aid extended by members of the department to motorists. Not only is this department propounding questions, but is attempting to bring proof of the answers by safety demonstrations, safety films, and lectures on safety. Among the demonstrations given by the department relating to the cause of accidents are the following:

- 1. Speed causes most of the automobile accidents in Texas—shown by statistics, pictures, and reaction time studies.
- 2. The effect of undimmed lights.
- 3. Over 75 per cent of cars driving over 30 miles per hour at night are overdriving their lights.
- 4. The dangers of parking on improved portions of the highway.

Many communities have not taken advantage of the splendid safety talks made available through the Texas State Police. Ignorance of the following laws lead to the loss of life and serious lack of responsible driving on Texas highways:

- 1. The negligent driver in any accident is responsible for all damages.
- 2. Failure to stop and render aid to an individual struck by his car makes the driver guilty of a felony.
- 3. Driving under the influence of liquor is a violation of the law.

In the interest of the children of Texas, the May Day committee is glad to endorse these activities directed toward safety. Make the man behind the wheel the child's friend.

More than 150 Texas cities have adopted student patrols to protect the school child going and coming from his home. It is said that not a single child has been hurt at intersections where the patrol is directing traffic, and in schools where safety courses have been given, great improvement has been noted. Highway patrolmen and other personnel of the State Department of Safety are working constantly with school children to make them safety conscious. It is showing definitely encouraging results.

The department is planning to expand the patrol system to the rural buses where certain students will be named to assist the drivers in safety work, keeping the passengers from sticking their arms and heads from windows, and the aisles free of obstacles over which the children might trip, and assisting the pupils to leave the bus in a safe manner.

Texas is among the leading states in safety work among school children and highway pedestrians, and while much progress has been made toward elimination of accidental death and injury, much work still remains to be done, and it remains for the entire citizenship to aid in doing it.

HUSBANDS --- AND THE BOY FRIEND --- ARE WELCOME AS THE FLOWERS IN MAY... COME EVERY DAY AND ENJOY THE FINE LECTURES AND DEMONSTRATIONS BY ONE OF THE NATION'S OUTSTANDING CULINARY ARTISTS...

Mrs. Arreva D. French

Mrs. Arreva D. French, southern home economist and food authority who will conduct the RANGER DAILY TIMES cooking school in this city, is an outstanding lecturer in her profession and will bring a wealth of knowledge to housewives who will attend the school, on many phases of cookery, home budgeting, household hints, and new cooking secrets.

New suggestions, new recipes, new dishes and many new ideas on the kitchen will be brought by the lecturer, to the attention of the housewives.

Mrs. French, while a native Texan, received her principal education in Oklahoma, studying at the Southwestern State Teachers College at Durant, Okla., with all major studies being confined to foods. She has taken several specialized courses in the art of cake baking, cake decorating, bread baking and meat cookery. She is an expert in home canning and is an authority on this subject. Before conducting cooking schools, Mrs. French did civic organization and county home demonstration work.

She will make her lectures while actually doing the things she is talking about. The dishes, both of the plain and fancy variety, which she prepares, will be on display at the close of each lecture, and you are invited to remain after the lecture and discuss your personal problems in cookery and home management.

MRS. ARREVA D. FRENCH

When the housewife is confronted with the knowledge that her cooking is in a rut, that she is always serving "the same old thing," it is wonderful to see what an inspiration she can receive from the practical demonstrations given by Mrs. French.

There's a lot more to cooking than just dashing into the kitchen and starting to boil, fry and bake. Menu planning, buying judgment, food selection, and economical preparation all occupy a place of extreme importance.

Then, too, in every home there is always a supply of leftover foods that can be made as pleasing and palatable as the original dish, thus varying the menu and at the same time creating new economy in feeding the family.

All of these subjects and more too will be discussed by Mrs. French in her series of lectures. Remember, the lectures are free, and a cordial, urgent invitation is extended to every woman of the community to come and take advantage of the opportunity offered.

Remember the dates, and make a date with yourself to attend each day. We have been fortunate in securing the Recreation Building as the scene of the cooking school. Although no seats can be reserved, every effort will be made to provide comfortable seats for all who attend, as it is expected that a large crowd will be on hand each day.

LOVE LAUGHS AT THE DOCTOR

By ELINORE COWAN STONE

CAST OF CHARACTERS
CONSTANCE MAIDWELL—heroine; the stand-in.
DEREK MATTHON—an artist who loved money first.
MILDEGARD THORVALD—Derek's polished but portly uncle.
DR. ROGERS—he met his most difficult case.

Yesterday, seeing Derek alone for the first time since arrival at the Thorvalds, Constance forgot everything else in the joy of his presence.

CHAPTER XVII
DEREK had evidently just returned from one of the moonlight gallops about which he had written, for he was wearing jodhpurs and a soft white shirt, open at the throat. As Constance came up, he was standing, his bright head bare to the moonlight, with one booted foot on a low stone wall that ran along the edge of the grove, flicking idly at a weed with his riding crop.

At some faint sound she made, he turned, flung aside his whip, cried softly, "Connie, darling!" and springing toward her, caught her into his arms. The whole movement was as beautiful as a well-rehearsed dance. Now he was holding her from behind, laughing down at her like a delighted boy. "Darling," he cried, "I can't believe yet that you're actually here, after those terrible empty weeks."

"Were they empty, Derek?" "She couldn't hear him say it often enough. "Weren't they for you?" he asked reproachfully into her hair. "Oh, so anxiously empty, Derek." And in the end it was she who had to reassure him, to tell him over and over again how desperately lonely she had been. "When I walked in those three evenings and saw you, Connie, it almost floored me. All the time I was making those silly marks on your face, I had the strangest sense of unreality—not of actually being there and seeing it all happen, if you understand what I mean. I hardly dared speak for fear you'd vanish. Of course! That was why he had seemed so strangely stirred. "I know," Constance murmured. "I've been feeling that, too." They sat down on the low stone wall, his arms around her. "You see, all they had told me was that the doctor was bringing on some one to double for the Wynne person. Even when the nurse came to get me, she didn't remember your name. . . . Of course, if I had known Rogers knew you, I might have guessed you are like the Wynne. . . . How did he come to find you?" "WHEN Constance had told him about her three meetings with Mark Rogers, Derek frowned and said somewhat sulkily, "There's something about all this I don't exactly like—the way this fellow seems to have been following you around, for one thing, ever since I came away. That day he came to the studio wanting to buy your portrait, I—"

"The day he—what?" "Oh, didn't I tell you that? Well, everything was in such a muddle then. . . . Just a few minutes before you came in the day I left with the Thorvalds, he came barging into the studio, wanting to buy the Lady in Blue. Said his mother liked it."

"So it was Derek's studio Mark Rogers had been coming from that day when he had nearly knocked her down on the steps. "Of course I told him pretty flatly that the portrait wasn't for sale," Derek was going on. "But I thought then—do you know, I don't altogether like your flying out with him alone. Connie—a man you hardly know." "He gave the best of references; and his circle of acquaintances seemed to be absolutely gilt-edged—Dr. Ardmore, for instance—not to speak of the Thorvalds, whose opinion," Constance added demurely, "you don't seem to think too badly of, yourself."

"Yes, I know. But you can't always judge from that." Connie smiled a little secret smile. . . . This from Derek, who had never considered any unconventional prank in his own company too indiscreet—even from the first. "You needn't worry," she said. "Even if I were interested, I don't seem to be having a startling success with the gentleman. In fact, this evening he very emphatically washed his hands of me." "Washed his hands of you?" Derek echoed blankly. "You mean he—but, I say, he can't do that, you know." "Oh, can't he? You don't know the man."

"But I definitely heard him tell Mr. Thorvald this evening after you were in George's room that the experiment was surprisingly successful, and that he hoped you could be persuaded to stay until the Wynne menace is up and able to stage her own act. . . . Camilla Wynne, by the way, is the family thorn in the flesh I wrote you about."

to Derek that, after all his own eager promises, it had taken Mark Rogers to get her here. "It's going to be perfect, darling," he was going on gayly. "The nights are marvelous now. We can spend hours together—like this—and—"

"Derek," she said suddenly, "I can't help wondering just what you mean by 'like this.'"

"Mean? Why, just what I said." Derek seemed puzzled and a little irritated. "Alone together, where no one can bother us, and—where we won't disturb the family, of course."

"Derek," Constance began again, "if I were your wife—as I should have been now, I suppose—if none of this had ever happened—if you had never seen the Thorvalds—would it have occurred to you to wonder whether, at any time or in any place we chose—our being together could possibly be any one else's business?" "Now, Connie—" Derek's voice took on a hurt, startled note. He had picked up his riding crop again, and was flicking restlessly at a bush beside him. "Don't you think you're being a little—well, difficult about this? I mean—well, after all, I am a guest here; and so are you, of course," he added hastily.

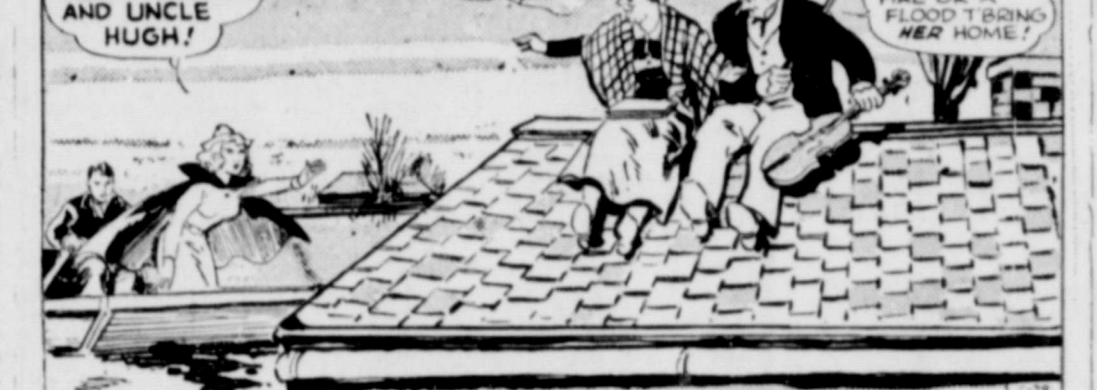

"But you don't mean to suggest, I suppose," Constance asked, "that the Thorvalds could have any objection to their guests meeting and talking quite openly, especially when they had known each other—rather well—for some time?" "Of course not," Derek moved impatiently. "But just now the family are in the deepest of trouble. If you had been here, as I was, when—"

CCC Destroys a Horde of Crickets, And Is It Fun!

RENO, Nev.—Let Angels Camp have its jumping frogs and Coalinga its leaping horned toads, because only Nevada can boast of mormon crickets trained for competitive distance hopping. Crews of WPA workers, who trapped and killed 133 boxers of crickets during the 1937 control season, had their fun, according to a report on the work submitted to Gilbert C. Ross, state WPA administrator. Not the least entertaining of their leisure hour activities were the cricket debris, in which small bets were placed on favorite entries. "There was considerable talk of entering the champion jumpers in the frog contests in Calaveras county," the report said, "but California would not allow the entry for fear of starting cricket propagation in that state. Then there was the story of the intoxicated stranger who chose to sleep off his jag out in the brush. "When a fencing crew stumbled across him, they found him completely covered by voracious crickets nibbling away greedily on his apparel," the report continued, "and not hesitating to take an occasional nip of his person."

Crew Finds Gold And Digging Spurts

BLOOMSBURG, S. D.—The job of deepening a cellar in Bloomsburg is completed, but the job was done too well, the contractor concluded. John Johnson, a workman, turned up a $20 gold piece with his pick and fellow workers dug in with all their might. Several hours' effort yielded $1,240 (57 coins) of an apparently long-buried treasure. So hard did the diggers work that they dug the cellar two feet deeper than the owner desired.

WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON—The TVA tempest is the latest phase of the old war between the private utilities and the advocates of public power development. Personalities and politics add both color and heat. Once again the conservative and progressive lines are forming while a barrage of charges and counter-charges emits much more smoke than fire. Congress and the people have a right to know all about what goes on in TVA. So TVA's friends are forced to consent to an investigation promoted by TVA's enemies lest they be charged with trying to cover up. What they fear is that any investigation will be dominated by would-be wreckers of that great project. Chairman Arthur E. Morgan of TVA stands in lonely majesty as the man whose vague and thus far unsubstantiated charges of dishonesty and misconduct against his fellow directors, Vice Chairman Harcourt A. Morgan and David E. Lillenthal, have brought on the tempest. He is now at the climax of a TVA career in which he has been conspicuously more friendly toward private power companies than the various other high administration officials who have to do with electric power. Chairman Morgan is the only one of those officials who ever has been publicly praised by president Wendell Wilkie of the Commonwealth and Southern Company. The others are now supporting Harcourt Morgan and Lillenthal. In the summer of 1936 Chairman Morgan advised Roosevelt that he would resign if Lillenthal, leading exponent of New Deal power yardstick policies, were reappointed. Lillenthal was reappointed and other officials watched the chairman in hopeful anticipation. Nothing happened except that Morgan, in magazine articles, public statements and by action inside TVA, split away from his colleagues and began accusing them. Other officials have complained that they were harassed by his separate activities. Power companies, which had given up hope of defeating TVA after the unanimous three-judge decision upholding its constitutionality at Chattanooga, in the eighteen company case, again are hopeful. A recent flurry of "Save Chairman Morgan" telegrams received at Capitol Hill suggest old "power trust" tactics to TVA friends, at least. Foes of TVA are especially anxious to have such men as Chairman Andrew J. May of the House Military Affairs Committee, on any investigation body. May is an ex-coal operator from Kentucky who has shown anti-TVA activities in the past. TVA lawyers especially are bitter against Chairman Morgan because, they charge, he has interfered with their job at critical moments. They call him "Jehovah," admitting the chairman's full consciousness of his own rectitude. In the celebrated Berry marble case, they say, he insisted on crashing in as a witness before the federal commission which heard Berry's claims, against their advice. The attorneys say Chairman Morgan had nothing new to add except what appeared to be reflections on the other directors. (Copyright, 1938, NEA Service, Inc.)

SPORT GLANCES — By Grayson

NEW YORK—Brother combinations in hockey—at one time more plentiful than in any other major sport—are starting to crack apart. Not that members of the same families participating in hockey are fewer, for there are more than ever before, but one or all the brothers are beginning to slip out of the top line of puck chasing. The 1937-38 season marked the fadeout of the Conacher brothers, Lionel and Charlie. Lionel could have continued with the Montreal Maroons but went on the shelf of his own volition because of the Ontario Athletic Commission, and his vice-chairmanship of the Ontario Athletic Commission. Charlie was forced out by a failure of his single kidney to function properly. The two Jacksons—Busher and Art—are retaining their places under the big tent, although Art was down-river with Syracuse in 1936-37. Busher continues with the Toronto Maple Leafs, while Art now is back with the Boston Bruins. Of the three Boucher brothers, who once were active simultaneously in major league hockey, the lone survivor is Frank, and he gives only as general utility forward as well as assistant coach with the Rangers. George is manager of the Springfield Indians and Bill is managing an amateur team in an English league.

THE Jerwas—Joe and Frank—once were on the Boston roster together. Joe now is with the New York Americans, while Frank has slipped back to the minors.

Jack and Frank Doran are still following the rubber disc, but they're doing their chores in the minors, Jack with Pittsburgh and Frank with Syracuse.

Sprague and Odie Cleghorn also are back-tracking, Sprague having been manager of several minor league outfits, and Odie having accepted a referee's post in the National League.

Jerry Shannon has continued to stick with the Montreal Stars but brother Charlie now does his bit with the Syracuse Stars. Both are forwards.

The Mantha brothers did a 50 percent disappearance when Sylvio, veteran defenseman, was let out by the Boston Bruins, with whom he had tried a comeback after being idle for a full season. George, however, continues as one of the mainstays of the Maroons.

BOTH Cook brothers—Bill and Bun—forward stars for a long time with the Rangers, went into the minors as managers this season, Bill handling the Cleveland Barons very successfully and Bun piloting the Providence Reds.

The two Thompsons—Tiny and Paul—are continuing among the cream of the crop, however, Tiny still being one of the leading goal-tenders in the business with Boston, while Paul continues to snipe away from the Chicago Black Hawk front line.

Neil and Mac Colville are cogs in one of the most efficient scoring machines on the ice, skating in the Rangers' front line. The Kilreas are an up and down combination. Hee, veteran forward with the Detroit Red Wings, seems to continue with eternity, but Wallie has slipped back to the minors after various trips under the big top.

A few of the combinations rise and fall together, but the heartaches come when the boys, after banking alongside one another for years, come to the parting of the ways.

Anniversary of Beer's Return To Be Celebrated In U. S. On April 7

Relegalization of beer, which provided hundreds of thousands of new jobs in the brewing and allied fields, which created new income and sent billions of dollars circulating through vital trade channels, will have its fifth anniversary on April 7th. The anniversary is expected to be recalled not only by the brewers whose industry was restored, but also by many farmers, manufacturers, building men, supply men, retailers and others who directly benefited from the revival of the brewing industry as a market and source of supply.

Relegalization came at a most opportune time. On March 22, when President Roosevelt signed the Cullen bill legalizing beer, the nation was in the depths of a depression. Confidence of business men was at a low ebb. Few had the courage to start new undertakings because consumers were curtailing their expenditures.

Into this picture stepped several hundred brewers whose plants had remained idle for a decade. With confidence in the future and with eagerness to resume a business that, for many, had been in their family for generations, they launched a rebuilding program calling for the immediate expenditure of millions of dollars.

There were but 177 brewing plants in operation when beer became legal again—considered 500 plants short of the number required to meet the rising demand for the popular beverage. Few of the idle plants were in condition to operate without extensive improvements and some had to be replaced by entirely new buildings, equipment and machinery. Even the plants that continued in operation required expansion. According to the late Warren M.

Spring Shopping at Mars & Co.

It is spring, when young men everywhere are shopping for bright new clothes. But inside the army hospitals of Tokyo, young Japanese men are indulging in a more grim "spring shopping." As shown in the photo above, many of them, their enthusiastic "honzais" of so short a time ago now replaced by grim-faced silence, are shopping for artificial arms and legs. Their own were left on the battlefields in China.

Persons, former professor of economics at Harvard University, approximately $200,000,000 was spent by the brewing industry for repairs, rehabilitation and new construction during 1933-36.

Building trades were not the only immediate beneficiaries. A call had to go out for coöperation to move the draught beer. Every beer coöperation plant in the country strained its facilities to meet the brewers' demand. To date, reports a coöperation industry spokesman, the brewers have paid out $45,000,000 for beer barrels—about three-fourths of them wooden and the remaining steel—since relegalization.

Beer requires premium grains and here again the brewers dug deep into their pockets. Conservative estimate is that the brewers have spent $300,000,000 for domestic farm products alone since relegalization—a considerable boon to the American farmer.

Machinery, equipment, transportation and many more items benefited by large expenditures aggregating many millions of dollars. Bottles alone, for instance, have cost the brewers more than $32,000,000 since relegalization. And cans—a marketing innovation no more than three years old—account for an expenditure by the brewers of $19,000,000 annually.

Labor has been another major beneficiary. The brewery payroll alone has amounted to $300,000,000 in the five years since relegalization, and is constantly growing. How much labor has gained from employment in allied industries is a matter of conjecture, but the total would be still greater. The retail outlets alone—the grocers, delicatessen stores, hotels and restaurants—have probably exceeded this figure in increased payroll as a result of relegalization.

By far the biggest gainer, however, has been the public treasury—national, state and municipal. To date Uncle Sam has collected $1,160,000,000 from the federal tax on beer since relegalization—which offers a vivid picture of how much prohibition cost the government in loss of revenue and disbursement for attempted enforcement of an unpopular act. State and municipal governments have shared in another half-billion dollars in the five years.

All of this money, circulating through vital commercial channels, has necessarily had a salutary effect on stimulating business and favorably affecting the purchasing power of hundreds of thousands.

What is more, the money that has been spent for beer has come largely from new income created by the brewing industry itself. How this economic truth operates was explained by a spokesman for the National Association of Manufacturers, appearing at the congressional hearings on the modification bill in December, 1932.

"The moment that you excite any single industry into activity, you excite a cluster of other activities to serve it, besides exciting a new demand for services and labor in carrying out the operation that is put in motion," he said. "Now, if you begin to spend three or four hundred million dollars in the equipment of plants, you have immediately excited a group of industries and completed a demand for goods and services that did not exist before. And if you are exciting a demand for goods and services, every time that you have demanded goods, you have multiplied the demand for services all the way down the line in our highly interdependent industrial structure. Now, then, if the product is sold, you are going to have to employ at once the people to sell the product; you have not only engaged a new force for production, but you have engaged a new force for distribution, and you have reached down through every channel to the remotest limit that gets a reaction. . . . You have excited a new activity which has produced new income and a demand for new services."

Proceeding along the above theory and taking into consideration the activity excited by the distributive channels—the grocers, delicatessen stores, hotels and taverns—with the new demand for related food items, providing more jobs and more business for those who service these outlets, it is asserted by some economists that the relegalization of beer provided a boon worth billions of dollars to this nation.

An appraisal of the importance of the brewing industry may be had from the fact that beer sales since relegalization have totaled approximately 228,000,000 barrels, which would have an aggregate retail value of about seven billion dollars, most of which has been employed in stimulating commercial activity.
