By United Press
PARIS, April 12.—Premier Edouard Daladier's "national defense" cabinet, went into power today with an overwhelming vote of confidence in the chamber of deputies and a quick agreement to end the general strike threat against French industry.
The strike, threatening to tie up national rearmament, came to an unexpected end when the general labor federation agreed to order evacuation of factories by sit-down strikers.
Across France's frontier the Spanish Insurgents and Loyalist armies remained locked in their death struggle. Loyalists reported a new offensive was started in an effort to throw back the advance of the Nationalists through Catalonia.
Elsewhere:

RANGER NAMED COUNTY MEET WINNER TODAY

Ranger was today declared the winner of the Eastland county interscholastic meet, held in Eastland the first week in April, by officials of the league, it was announced today by W. T. Walton, superintendent of the Ranger public schools.
The decision as to the winner was delayed considerably because Eastland and Ranger were running neck and neck in the race for the county championship, and the results were so close reports from several events were needed to determine the winner. These belated reports have now been received in Eastland, and Ranger is declared the winner.
Ranger scored a total of 126 1/2 points to win, while Eastland scored 119 1/2, according to information received by Walton.
The all-around trophy, presented by the Ranger Chamber of Commerce last year when the county meet was held in Ranger, and which is to be won three consecutive years before it becomes permanent property of a school, was today sent from Eastland, the winner last year, to Ranger high school.
The beautiful trophy was presented to the student body of the Ranger high school Tuesday at the chapel hour in an appropriate ceremony.

Victory Huddle After Reorganization Bill Defeat

The triumph of Tammany's Representative John J. O'Connor, center, who led insurgent Democrats to a smashing defeat of the President's reorganization bill, is reflected in this striking picture, taken a few minutes after the House killed the measure by a vote of 204 to 198. With O'Connor, whose rebel blow delivered the most stunning blow the House has yet given Mr. Roosevelt, are two other rejecting Democrats, Representative Thomas O'Malley, Wisconsin, left, and Representative Arthur P. Lammock of Ohio. Coalition of Democrats with Republicans produced the vote to recommit the bill to committee, which action kills the measure for this session.

As safety expert for the Lone Star Gas Company, Taylor analyzed the problem as one of 40,000,000 drivers, 80,000,000 pedestrians, 27,000,000 automobiles and 3,000,000 miles of highways. "Add them up," he directed.

Any clothing dropped in the barrels will be collected by the ladies auxiliary and turned over to the WPA sewing room, where it will be repaired and altered. Articles too worn to be repaired will be cut up and used in making clothing for children out of the piece that are not worn, so any kind of old clothing is suitable, it has been stated.

ECONOMY SEEN AS AN ISSUE IN WASHINGTON

By United Press
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 12.—There were hints on Capitol Hill today that congress might revolt against President Roosevelt's pump-priming proposals to encourage an economic revival.
Despite denials it was learned that Vice President Garner challenged the president's spending plan. The rumored clash between the vice president and Mr. Roosevelt appeared to be a continuation of the conservative-new deal democratic party the past year.
The general tax revision bill, stripped of the undistributed profits tax by the senate, was sent by the house to conference amid appeals by conservative democrats to accept the senate changes.
The house appropriations committee demonstrated a tendency to economize when it slashed $72,975,684 from the current supply bill, the committee, in reporting to the house, rightly followed budget recommendations for highway funds, according to President Roosevelt's request for a 50 per cent reduction in the next fiscal year.
The agriculture department appropriation, as reported, was for $796,785,524, or over $10,000,000 below budget estimates.
The house labor committee decided to report some form of wages-hours bill, despite indications that there is little hope for passage.
Commander C. E. Rosendahl told the senate naval affairs committee the nation faces a dire crisis unless funds for lighter-than-air craft are provided in the naval expansion bill.

Somewhere a Voice Is Calling

Police raided a cockfight recently and arrested 48 men.

Not on a ranch in Wyoming. Not in a table in Alabama. Not in a barn on the banks of the Wabash. In a seven-room apartment suite on the island of Manhattan.

A search of police records disclosed that it was the first violation of the law prohibiting cockfights that had come to anybody's attention in a generation. The men had permitted themselves to be carried away by their enthusiasm, and the noise of their combined cries of exhortation, approval, and satisfaction had attracted the attention of the law.

There's just a possibility that this theory might not stand up under a really rough assault, but the thought has frequently been intruding itself of late that something like a renaissance of the frontier spirit can be detected creeping up on us in the developments of the public taste in a number of fields. Creeping up especially, of course, on the city-dweller. It takes the city feller to come up with discoveries of things their country cousins knew all along.

It may not be accurate to call it the frontier spirit. It may be just an assertion of the city's boy's occasional dim nostalgia for a rural life he is acquainted with only by hearsay. Whatever it is, it's something. A man oughtn't to stick his neck out to the extent of prophesying such things as coon-hunting in city parks and the roping and branding of taxicabs, but we wouldn't be too surprised.

When it started would be difficult to ascertain with any degree of exactness. Elsa Maxwell had people who would ordinarily have attended her party in white ties and tails, hasking corn and milking a cow more than a year ago. Hollywood followed with farm and ranch parties of its own. Such items as buffalo meat and venison steak have been appearing on cafe menus with increasing frequency during the past year or so.

Consider the radio and movie Hill-billies. Consider that chicken-peck movement in truckin'. New York goes dippy over a rodeo every so often. The movement toward the farm and ranch is unmistakable in the art of painting. Every third novel you buy tells you all about the troubles with the livestock and crops. The moving picture producers are now buying themselves turning out old-fashioned "westerns" hand over fist.

It suttinly 'pears like suthin'.

American owners of Mexican oil wells are up in the air over attempts to squeeze them out. Apparently Mexican oil is not the kind that soothes troubled waters.

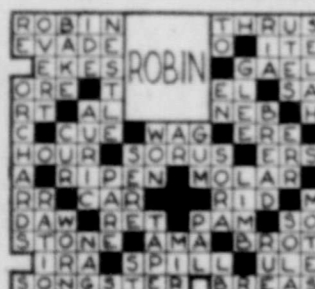

A senator claims that one federal bureau employs only red-heads. Maybe the government is being run by Reds after all.

THE AGONY OF JESUS

BY FATHER S. E. BYRNE
St. Rita's Church, Ranger

THE TRIALS OF JESUS BEFORE PILATE AND HEROD

The morning after the night spent by Our Lord in the custody of the barbarous soldiers, having previously been questioned by Annas, and tried and condemned by the religious tribunal of the Sanhedrin, He was brought again before that assembly presided over by Caiphas, the high priest.

Who can imagine what torments Christ must have endured during that night, after having been turned over to the custody of the soldiers. One of the sufferings of Our Lord was to listen to the three denials of the one whom He had chosen as head of His church, and who just a short time previously had made his declaration that even though the Jewish servants now handed Jesus over to the Roman soldiers, and He was taken into the courtyard or else some room of Pilate's palace. Owing to their scruples about entering his house, the Governor went out upon the balcony to speak to the Jews. Having heard their petition, he asked: "What accusation bring you against this Man?"

Disappointed at not obtaining offhand the confirmation of their death sentence, they exclaim: "If He were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered Him up to thee." Seeing clearly that the Sanhedrin wanted to make him only give his approval and not be able to judge the condemned, Pilate suggests with irony: "Take Him you, and judge Him according to your law." This solution was not what they wanted and they were driven to declare their own powerlessness, saying: "It is not lawful for us to put any man to death." Since they saw that Pilate would not ratify their sentence unless he approved of their case, they brought accusations against Jesus, to which accusations they carefully gave a political coloring. They realized that the pretended blasphemy and the claim to be the Messiah would make little impression on a pagan, so they ignored the supposed cause of their condemnation, and declared: "We have found this man perverting our nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Caesar, and saying that He is Christ the King."

After having heard this clear accusation Pilate returned to the praetorium and questioned Jesus: "Art Thou the King of the Jews?" "Dressed as a poor man, His face pale with fatigue, His hands bound as if He were a criminal, compared to the Emperor He must have looked pitiable, still when Pilate looked into His eyes there was a light there that made him fear God." "Art Thou then the Son of God?" they cry. "I am," He replied with sublime simplicity. In an uproar the judges shouted: "What need we any further testimony? We ourselves have heard it from His own mouth." And they immediately confirmed the death sentence.

Now since the religious phase of Christ's trial was over and the prisoner condemned, the members of the Sanhedrin delightedly hurried off their prisoner to the praetorium — the town hall of the Roman governor—so that Pontius Pilate might ratify in the civil tribunal the sentence that the religious tribunal had already passed. Thus, the civil part of Our Lord's trial took place, first in the praetorium, then in the palace of Herod Antipas and then He was returned to the praetorium for His final sentence.

On reaching the praetorium, the Sanhedrin sent word to Pilate of the important matter upon which they had come; but neither they nor their servants would cross the threshold, lest they should be rendered legally unclean till evening. It being the belief of the Jews that if one crossed the threshold of a Gentile's home that from then on until the sun set that he was unclean. The Jewish servants now handed Jesus over to the Roman soldiers, and He was taken into the courtyard or else some room of Pilate's palace. Owing to their scruples about entering his house, the Governor went out upon the balcony to speak to the Jews. Having heard their petition, he asked: "What accusation bring you against this Man?"

Disappointed at not obtaining offhand the confirmation of their death sentence, they exclaim: "If He were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered Him up to thee." Seeing clearly that the Sanhedrin wanted to make him only give his approval and not be able to judge the condemned, Pilate suggests with irony: "Take Him you, and judge Him according to your law." After having heard this clear accusation Pilate returned to the praetorium and questioned Jesus: "Art Thou the King of the Jews?" "Dressed as a poor man, His face pale with fatigue, His hands bound as if He were a criminal, compared to the Emperor He must have looked pitiable, still when Pilate looked into His eyes there was a light there that made him fear God." "Art Thou then the Son of God?" they cry. "I am," He replied with sublime simplicity. In an uproar the judges shouted: "What need we any further testimony? We ourselves have heard it from His own mouth." And they immediately confirmed the death sentence.

the world, that I should give testimony to the truth." "What is truth?" asked Pilate abruptly, and, not waiting for an answer, returned to the Sanhedrin. Had Pilate been a little less hasty he might have had his question concerning truth answered by the one who was truth itself. Upon arriving on the balcony he spoke to the Jews: "I find no cause in Him."

Fearing that their victim is about to escape from them, the members of the Sanhedrin began to speak all at the same time, trying to prevail upon Pilate to change his views. The best arguments they felt would be those that would deal with the Roman authority, for Pilate was placed over the Jews by the Romans and would be careful in his dealings with one who offended Rome; they therefore declared: "He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Judea, beginning from Galilee to this place."

Pilate was surprised that Jesus remained silent at this accusation. "Answerest Thou nothing? Dost Thou not hear how great testimonies they allege against Thee?" But Our Lord answered him "never a word." Pilate, seeing that he could find no fault with Jesus, and fearing to say so, saw a chance for him to escape from this unpleasant position. He had heard the word Galilee, and he immediately asked: "Is this Man of Galilee?" Upon being informed that such was the case, he sent Jesus to Herod, the prince of the province of Galilee. Herod for a long time had desired to see Jesus and question Him concerning His teachings, and when He was brought before the prince, it was expected that he would perform some wonderful works. This was the same Herod who had put the Baptist to death because the Prophet's denunciation Herod living with the wife of his brother. At first he was treated with some show of respect, but

LAMB CHOPS are always good. But in spring time they seem to have even more tenderness and delicate flavor. Billy the Oysterman, a New York restaurant proprietor who swings a wicked skillet when it comes to he-man food, gave us a few hints on making the most of the domestic lamb chop. "For home consumption," he said, "select loin chops that come from the saddle of the lamb. Yes, I know these are slightly more expensive by the pound than rib chops, but the proportion of meat to bone is much higher and that actually makes them more economical. I definitely prefer the loin chop if it is cut from the rack of the lamb."

"However, I realize that most people still prefer rib chops. This is because the meat is more delicate and finely grained."

He explained a few of the mysteries of big and little chops. He said that if rib chops are selected and single portions are to be served, cutting the meat with the chop to a single rib would mean too thin a piece of meat which might dry out in cooking.

Cut Rib Chops Thick
Therefore he suggested that two chops be cut from three ribs, and then the center bone be removed. For a double chop, three ribs should again be used with the two outer bones removed.

On rib chops the fat and gristle should be trimmed off. Two single chops or one double chop is the usual individual serving. As for loin chops, they can of course be cut to any desired thickness. A loin chop one inch thick is quite substantial. Loin chops are not trimmed but left as they are. Our authority insists that broiling is the best way of cooking

Tomorrow's Menu

- BREAKFAST: Stewed jumbo prunes, poached eggs on toast, bran muffins, apple jelly, coffee, milk.
- LUNCHEON: Spring salad bowl, toasted cheese sandwiches, nut cookies, tea, milk.
- DINNER: Fresh shrimp cocktail, broiled loin chops, new parsley potatoes, fresh asparagus, cole slaw, apple pie, coffee, milk.

chops. "Have the oven very hot he says. "Broil a single chop about 10 minutes, 5 minutes each side. A double chop will require 18 to 20 minutes, and should be turned over about three times so that the surface will not be too brown. In turning a chop be sure not to press the center of it but rather turn with the bone."

Season After Broiling
"A good sized one-inch chop should be broiled from about 10 to 15 minutes. Don't season the chops before cooking. Adding salt to the raw meat will toughen it. As a matter of fact, I put neither salt nor pepper on the cooked chops before serving them but leave the seasoning to the discretion of the individual. I do, however, put a little melted butter over the chops before serving because I think this adds a pleasant flavor."

This restaurateur whose fish and broiled meats seem to be the last word in the art of cooking, suggests a fine spring dinner for us: lamb chops, new parsley potatoes, fresh asparagus and his own special cold slaw. He adds that baby lima beans and artichokes are two other vegetables which seem to be particularly happy in the company of a perfectly broiled spring lamb chop.

NAMES in the News

Names make headlines. Newspapers, today as always, are made up of what people say, think, propose, dissent from. Governments, institutions, businesses—and all their activities—are only the lengthened shadows of men!

What is true on the front pages is true, also, on advertising pages. Advertisements are simply signed statements of men, banded together to form a business who seek your patronage. They back their good name against the products they ask you to buy. They say, in cold black type, that theirs is a name you can trust.

People who get the most for their money in the market-places are people who know the value of familiar, trade-marked products. They buy with confidence. They buy by name—and save time, tiresome searching, and money! Are you doing likewise?

Easter Cruise

BY MARION WHITE

CASE OF CHARACTERS
JOYCE MILNER, heroine who took an Easter Cruise, is back in town. She is being escorted by her husband, JACK HAMILTON, who is being escorted by her sister, ISABEL PORTER, who is being escorted by her brother, TOMMY.

Yesterday morning for the first time since the Easter Cruise, Joyce and Dick are together. Joyce is being escorted by her husband, Dick, who is being escorted by her sister, Isabel, who is being escorted by her brother, Tommy.

CHAPTER VI
HOURS passed, and now the swirling waters reached almost to their waists. At 11 o'clock the tender returned to the ship with passengers from shore, its red and green lights flashing as a mirage as the boat passed beyond the range of their voices. It was as if their last vestige of hope had vanished. Through the long hours, Dick held out that promise of salvation.

Now he started to pull off his shoes. "I'm going to swim for it," he told them. "We can't wait here forever."

Joyce put out a restraining hand. "We'll all go together, Dick. You can't risk it alone."

But Dick grasped Joyce's hand, clinging to it for a second and then he was gone. The black waters swallowed him, and presently there was no sign of him save the sound of his swimming. And then that too was intermingled with the pounds of the night.

It was several minutes later when suddenly Joyce heard the tender again. Once more she watched its red and green lights appear, two infinitesimal dots in a world of blackness. She felt them draw closer to the reef, only to disappear an instant as the boat swerved round the buoy. Slowly it chugged its way along. Surely it would be opposite them, in midstream.

"Obadiah! We must both shout now—together!" She took a deep breath, opened her mouth—

Simultaneously another call came to her ears. She stopped listening. Was it only the echo of her own voice?

"A-hoy! A-hoy-y!"

But no. It was Dick's voice! He was out there in midstream; he was within calling distance of the tender!

Again she heard it, clear and strong on the cold night breeze. Soon there were other sounds too, other voices answering his call, and she knew that the tender had sighted him. She heard its engine stop, then resume at a slower pace. She saw that the red and green lights were stationary now.

And then she did what she had wanted to do all along. She let down the barrier of fortitude and nerve, and she cried. She loosed the hard sobs that were choking her; she cried long and lustily, enjoying every salt tear. . . .

Later, perhaps an hour, after Dick and two of the men from the tender had rowed out and taken them off the reef, she was back on the Empress, its stout, strong decks secure beneath her feet, with her own kindly stewardess wrapping her in a warm ship's blanket and whispering words of cheer.

Dick was beside her, wrapped in a similar blanket, and exhausted though he was, his eyes were shining with a deep new tenderness.

"Joyce, dear," he was saying, "you're the best sport a girl could be. . . ."

DR. GRAY stopped in to see her the first thing next morning. It was after 9 o'clock but he was just beginning to open her eyes.

"Well, young lady, how do you feel this morning?"

Her eyes widened slowly, and memory began to dawn in them. "I'm fine, thanks."

"Glad to hear it." He laid a professional hand on her forehead. "You don't look any the worse for your outing. All you needed was a good night's sleep."

"How's Dick?"

Dr. Gray chuckled. "He's been up since daybreak, but I gave him strict orders not to waken you. Now he's gone over to Hamilton on some secret mission."

"To Hamilton?" Joyce shuddered. "I wouldn't cross that water again. . . ."

"Oh, come now!" The doctor regarded her more critically. Perhaps it had been a bad fright, more than she let on. He mustn't let it leave a scar. "Don't tell me you'd let a little midnight soaking frighten you?"

She met the challenge in his eyes. "I'd rather stay on the boat. . . ."

He stroked his chin thoughtfully. "Well, that's too bad, now. All the ladies have gone ashore, and I'm trying to find someone to do a little shopping for me. I promised my wife some doekins gloves from Tringham's. But I don't want to leave the ship; I have one of the crew down with acute appendicitis."

Joyce hesitated. The morning sun streamed through the port, and she knew that the water would be clear and blue again, topped with little white caps edged in pink. . . .

"I'll go for you," she said finally. "I won't be silly not to go." An hour later she was ashore wishing Dick were with her.

TRINGHAM'S Department Store was crowded to capacity with passengers from the Empress, shopping for English doekins and Scottish tweeds and Wedgewood potteries. But the greatest number was at the glove counter, where doekins that sold for $4 in New York might be picked up for $2.

Leaving the store, Joyce walked up the hill toward the center of town, idling away the hour until the last tender left for the ship. She strolled through the gardens of the Bermudiana Hotel again, enjoying their colorful and well-planned beauty; she passed the governor's mansion and she visited the quaint little Portuguese church. And all the while she looked above the heads of passers-by for a sight of Dick's turbulent brown curls. But she looked in vain.

Nor did she see him in the crowd on the wharf waiting for the tender. Mr. Gregory was there, standing apart from the others, and he joined her.

"If I'd known you were coming ashore alone," he remarked pleasantly, "we might have done something together."

Joyce laughed. "I've been shopping, and I know you wouldn't have enjoyed that."

A little colored boy approached them, his arms laden with enormous bouquets of sweet peas. "Flowers for de lady, boss?"

"Why not?" Mr. Gregory responded promptly. "How much?"

"Twenty-five cents, boss."

"Cheap enough. I think I'll take the white ones. . . . that's it." He held them out to Joyce. "Wear them for me, with that lovely white frock of yours, will you?"

Joyce thanked him, admiring the wax-like perfection of the flowers. But her eyes clouded at the reminder of the lovely white frock that was no more, and she buried her face in the soft fragrance of the bouquet. Evidently Mr. Gregory had not heard of their little adventure. . . .

While they were crossing the harbor, he asked her suddenly: "Would you care to spend the evening in Havana with me, Miss Milner? There's a great deal to do, I am told, with an agreeable companion."

But she begged off quickly. "I'm so sorry, Mr. Gregory. I've already made an engagement. . . ."

She knew that she was refusing the invitation solely in the hope that Dick would ask her. She might still be left sitting on the Empress all alone, a target for Mr. Gregory's sympathy.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—Clouds of partisan smoke obscure the merits and demerits of the reorganization bill. The average citizen who wants to make up his mind objectively will need more time for study and more opportunity for experience with government problems than he can ever expect to have.

The Senate wouldn't have passed the bill if the Roosevelt administration hadn't brought the bulk of its friends into line for the measure and applied most of the lobbying pressures which any administration has at its command. On the other hand, the opposition wouldn't have amounted to much if Mr. Roosevelt's most persistent critics and opponents hadn't banded together in an effort to give the President a personal beating.

ALTHOUGH there was honest conviction on both sides, the lineup showed most of the New Deal Democrats and machine followers on one side and the coalition of Republicans and anti-administration Democrats furnishing the bulk of rays. This is true even though large non-partisan outside groups also fought the bill.

One net result is the White House has won its first bitter, close-fought major congressional battle since the 1936 election. The administration must now battle again in the House.

And again the issue is the question of how much power ought to be given the President in the hope of improving government efficiency.

THE Senate bill and the House reorganization committee bills

WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—The President about half as much scope as he originally asked for. The chief remaining controversial points are:

- 1. POWER TO REORGANIZE—The President would be authorized to transfer, regroup, consolidate, reorganize and abolish administrative agencies with the exception of agencies which include the Interstate Commerce, Federal Trade, Securities Exchange, Communications, Power, Coal and Maritime Commissions, the National Labor Relations Board, Federal Reserve System and others. He could not abolish any executive department. His orders must lie before Congress for 60 days before becoming effective and could be nullified only by a congressional enactment—which, as usual, would be subject to veto.
- 2. CIVIL SERVICE—The President is authorized to place non-civil service employees who duties do not involve determination of policies under civil service assumption—they can pass non-civil service examinations. This will affect about 200,000 employees.
- 3. COMPTROLLER GENERAL—The Senate bill would abolish this office, setting up a joint congressional committee on accounts which would appoint an Auditor General responsible to Congress. The House committee bill retains the Comptroller General but makes him responsible to and removable by the President.

Both Senate and House have approved the relatively non-controversial proposals to give the President six executive assistants and to create a Department of Public Welfare.

"The Mother in the Modern Home"

"Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own words praise her in the gates." Prefacing the lesson for the New Era club to be held Wednesday afternoon, hotel Gholson, Colonial room, at 4 o'clock, is the above quotation. Mrs. T. J. Anderson will lead.

The problem of keeping fit and well balanced will be offered by Mrs. Charles Hummel. "The Right Conditions of Motherhood" Mrs. W. F. Creager. "What are the Most Efficient Uses of the Energy of Women in the Home?" Mrs. E. R. Green.

This program combining the March and April lessons gives fair promise of a lesson based on beauty in thought and constructive in nature. Each member present is to offer an original composition in the field of any of the fine arts or crafts.

Mrs. W. M. Brown, president, should like the presence of every member.

Ranger High Debating Team and Young School Pupils To Be Heard at City Council Meeting

City Council meeting slated for 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the Ranger high school, will be presided over by the president, Mrs. Saule Perlestein, who announces a program of unusual interest. The program to be presented after business has been disposed of will introduce again, the Ranger high school debating team, a group of high school students who have gained outstanding mention and recognition over the district. Attention, socially speaking, is paid to the compliment to be paid Miss Doris Mitchell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Mitchell, and bride-to-be of Mr. R. V. Robinson, Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Nannie Walker, North Marston street. The courtesy carries the form of a miscellaneous shower, during the open house hours of 5 to 7 o'clock. The marriage has been announced to take place on the evening of Thursday, April 21st.

The pleasing voice which greets you from Hotel Gholson is none other than that of Miss Sarah McLaughlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McLaughlin, whose return from Chicago covers only a short time. While in Chicago, Miss McLaughlin devoted her time to secretarial study. She serves as secretary to Mr. Paul Chapman, manager of the hotel, in addition to responding to 261.

Mrs. John M. Gholson returned home last night from Lubbock, where she has been at the bedside of her grand-daughter, Jo Ann Cherry, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alton Cherry, of Midland. With her during the more alarming stages of her illness were Mr. and Mrs. Blay Cherry and mother of Mr. Cherry, Mrs. Mollie Cherry of Austin. She will remain in the hospital at Lubbock until her recovery is completely assured. The Cherry's have made their return to their Austin home.
