HURRICANE DAMAGE IS FOUND LOW

By United Press

LAKE CHARLES, La., Aug. 15.—The U. S. Weather Bureau today warned coastal residents of Louisiana and Texas that rain and high winds would follow the hurricane which blew itself out in this area last night.

The hurricane caused one death, Charles Johnson, a boathouse employee, was drowned.

Storm signals were posted last night on the coasts to residents and they began a general exodus seeking safety in storm cellars, levee buildings and at inland cities. The high wind did not reach the intensity expected. It broke window panes and overturned small fishing boats. For an hour, however, Lake Charles was without outside communications.

Rising Star Board Names Committees For Fair Sept. 22nd

By United Press

RISING STAR, Aug. 15.—At a meeting of the executive board of the Rising Star Fair, Sept. 22, 23 and 24, held here Sept. 22, 23 and 24, the board named committees for the various departments of the Free Fall Fair to be held here Sept. 22, 23 and 24. The board also named committees for the various departments of the fair.

The fair, now in its 16th year, is sponsored by the chamber of commerce.

Ranger Defeats Breck Score of 9-1, No Interest

By United Press

The hard ball game between Ranger and Breckenridge yesterday at the local park resulted in a victory for Ranger 9 to 1. The game was one sided throughout and without interest. Breckenridge was late filling the game date day and was announced to start at 3:30. It was after 4 when the game was actually called. Expressions from many who saw the game believe the ball would be supported in Ranger if a team was organized and some real competition could be sought for the local boys.

Arkansas Trap Is Unsuccessful In Desperado Hunt

By United Press

DOQUEEN, Ark., Aug. 15.—Roy Hamilton and Ted Walters, southwest desperados, today had another police trap. Officers from Oklahoma, Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas believed they had Hamilton and Walters surrounded in this area Friday and Sunday. A rain, however, hampered bloodhounds brought here from the penitentiary at McAlester, Okla.

Two Cadets Meet Death In Air As Their Crafts Hit

By United Press

KELLY FIELD, Tex., Aug. 15.—Flying Cadet Robert Remper Whitehouse, 21, of Evanston, Ill., and Edward Willard, 22, of Modesto, Calif., were killed near here today when their training planes collided at an altitude of 500 feet. The cadets were in a squadron turning from a training flight. After the planes collided Willard went into a spin and was turned to death in the wreckage of his plane. Whitehouse leaped in a parachute and was dead when the ambulance arrived.

As Girdler Got Last Word

Little heeding the encouragement he seems to be getting in this picture, two-fisted Tom Girdler, right, Republic Steel chief, provided a bang-up climax to the month-long investigation of Republic's labor practices by the LaFollette committee with a smashing attack on C. I. O. and Philip Murray, Steel Workers Organizing Committee chairman. Pictured with Girdler at the Washington hearing is Charles M. White, Republic vice president.

RULES ARE DESCRIBED FOR EXHIBITS

By United Press

Rules for community agricultural exhibits at the Eastland County Fair, Sept. 29-Oct. 1, at Eastland, were explained Monday by Elmo V. Cook and Ruth Ramey county agents.

Each community with an exhibit should notify the extension agents by Sept. 17. The rules and score card points were enumerated: 1. Exhibit material must be obtained from within the bounds of the community exhibiting. It is only required that canned fruit and vegetables be canned within the community. 2. Community exhibit must be in place by 1 p. m., Sept. 29, and remain through 8 p. m. Saturday night. Judging will begin at 9 a. m., Sept. 30. Department chairmen are to be notified when exhibit is ready, after which no changes will be permitted except that perishable products may be replaced with similar materials at any time after judging is done. Entrants not ready at the specified time will be penalized. 3. A list is to be placed on the booth platform showing the articles exhibited in each class, also giving the name and address for mailing of premium money. 4. Signs giving name of the community will be provided by the management. Other signs or designs may be used if desired. Elaborate backgrounds are to be discouraged. Materials to be judged must be on the platform. 5. Judging will be done according to the community booth score card.

DOCTORS PLAN MEET

By United Press

At a meeting of the Medical Society of Stephens, Shackelford and Throckmorton counties held in Breckenridge Friday, plans were made for the district meeting of the medical society. Breckenridge will be host to the members of the District Medical Society Tuesday, September 13, when the group of doctors will hold an all-day meeting here. The district is composed of the territory which is bounded by Vernon on the north, Rising Star on the south, Fort Worth on the east and Albany on the west. About 60 or 75 doctors from out of town are expected to be present at the convention.

JOHNSON, TP TEAM WINNER OF TOURNEY

By United Press

The T. P. Oilers of Ranger slipped a 5-0 victory in the minute book Saturday night when they shut out Texas Electric of Eastland and became the district champs in the A. S. A. tournament.

Jack Johnson's fire ball searched over the plate time and time again and every man on the TESCO roster experienced at least one strikeout at Johnson's hands with the exception of Kearney, who popped out to Nixon his first time up and on the second time he sent one to Daskavich on first base who beat him to the bag. The Oilers scampered ahead in the second inning when Whitefield smacked one to right field and then Daskavich walked and Johnson came up and pounded one hard down the third base line into left field. Then Lochery came to the plate and got on first by a fumble on the part of Pope and T. P. slid in a couple of tallies. In the fourth inning it looked as if TESCO might even the count when Overby got on by a walk and stole everything but Johnson's pants. He did a nice piece of work stealing second and left Johnson standing flatfooted when he ripped right on down to third a few minutes later. Miller knocked a slow bouncer down the first base line and after a bit of high stepping beat it out to first and took after Overby's base stealing, getting down to second base. The Electricians had a man on second and a man on third with Gilkey coming up. Morris on deck and Mitchell in the hole with none away. It was a real chance for them to even things up, but the old horsehide did everything but blaze as Johnson whipped them over the plate one time after the other, sending Gilkey and Mitchell down for strikeouts and Morris popped one right into Johnson's hands. It was a nice piece of bearing down when you had to be on the part of Johnson. From then on the Electricians never threatened.

A. Funderburk Is Charged In Death Of Man at Breck

By United Press

BRECKENRIDGE, Aug. 15.—Andrew Funderburk, 42, was charged with murder today in connection with the fatal shooting at a beer garden Sunday of Lloyd Rambo, 28. District Attorney Ben Dean said Funderburk made a verbal statement that he and Rambo quarreled and that Funderburk shot Rambo four times when he was attacked.

County's Exhibit At State Fair to Be Talked at Meet

By United Press

Ruth Ramey and Elmo V. Cook, county agents, Monday called a meeting at Eastland for 10 a. m. Wednesday in the county courtroom for the discussion of Eastland county's agricultural exhibits at the state fair in Dallas. Sending a letter to persons over the county, the agents stated: "We have received a letter from state fair officials advising that county agricultural exhibits must be educational in nature, combining both farm and home features, and using the major agricultural commodities or practices as a basis for such exhibits. They also advised that all previous preparations and plans for the exhibit, therefore, were changed.

Germans in New York After Non-Stop Atlantic Hop

County's Largest Trench Silo to Be On Terrell Ranch

By United Press

What will be the county's largest trench silo is being dug on the Terrell ranch near Staff by John Thurman, manager of the ranch. It will have a capacity of 150 tons. County Agent Elmo V. Cook was at the ranch Monday afternoon to confer with Thurman on its construction. With dimensions of 150 feet in length, 10 feet wide and eight feet deep, it will be filled with hegar. Heretofore, a 125-ton silo at the S. O. Montgomery dairy near Ranger was the county's largest. Homer E. White, who lives four miles northeast of Cisco, is to fill a 60-ton silo with kafir.

NEW SUSPECT QUIZZED ON FROME CASE

By United Press

SEMINOLE, Texas, Aug. 15.—A man charged with criminal assault against three women was taken to Pecos today by John Sarton, sheriff, who said the man is a suspect in the Frome case. Sarton arrested a 36-year-old Lubbock, Texas, patent medicine salesman for the assault on three Hobbs, N. M. women, at Gaines, county, Texas. "Because of the brutality of the assault cases and because this man's description is similar to that of the Frome slayers, we are going to check every possibility that he may be connected with the Frome slayings," said the officer.

By United Press

AMARILLO, Texas, Aug. 15.—This city today began a three-day fete in connection with the completion of the "Will Rogers Memorial Highway 66."

The road was named for the late humorist who was killed three years ago in an Alaskan air crash.

EFFORTS FOR PEACE ENTER HARD STAGE

By United Press

Europe today entered perhaps the most difficult of a long struggle to stabilize peace. Paramount attention lay in the fact that the key to the relations between Great Britain and Germany as the Nazi march to the east has been delayed chiefly because of Britain's opposition. Anxiety was felt at Prague, partly due to German military maneuvers in which probably 1,000,000 men, including Adolph Hitler, took part. Along other fronts: Spain.—Rebel armies hounded within 15 miles of the Almaden mercury mine as government planes re-enforced lines that had closed down the enemy. Rebel planes allied a British operator on the ship Hilbert and wounded a British observer on another ship. China.—Tension mounted between Jap and foreign authorities in Shanghai as U. S., British and French troops in the International Settlement had clashes with the Japs seeking to arrest Chinese demonstrators.

Allot 67 Jobs to Youths In County For N. Y. A. Labor

By United Press

AUSTIN, Aug. 15.—A quota of 67 National Youth Administration School Aid jobs have been allocated for Eastland County under the 1938-39 school aid program to provide part-time employment for young people in elementary and high schools who cannot otherwise continue in school. J. C. Kellam, State Youth Director, has announced. C. S. Eldridge, County Superintendent, has been notified of the number of jobs allotted. He has been requested to organize an advisory committee of local school officials to recommend an equitable distribution of jobs within the county on a basis of youth need and availability of school facilities. Mr. Kellam said that as soon as this is done, the NYA State office will be in position to approve schools for participation.

Government Men Hunt Abductors Near Minneapolis

By United Press

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 15.—Men ordered a search in four states today for Otis James Meredith and John Couch, Southwestern desperados, believed to be the men who abducted Peggie Groce, 23, St. Louis socialite, and Daniel Fahy, Jr., 31, and released them unharmed near this city Sunday. Thermometers, Ballyhoo, Valves, and Steam

A useful thermometer to test the temperature of the voting public would seem to be the amount and the nature of the ballyhoo used by candidates in their campaigns for office. When the ballyhoo is wild, wozy and effective, the public's temperature is up; when it becomes semi-respectable, or fails to register with the electorate, you can assume that John Citizen has nothing in particular on his mind.

Judging by recent primaries, the voter's temperature right now is up—and, maybe, going higher.

Hillbilly hands, wholesale pension promises, appeals to every crackpotism and cureall in the politician's lexicon—all of these things have characterized the ballyhoo of this summer's campaigns. In some states they have worked, too. As a result, we are due to have a sprinkling of more than ordinary untamed demagogues in Congress and in divers gubernatorial mansions next year.

Now it should not be in the least surprising that the electorate is suffering from a slight fever. After what the American people have been through in the past decade, an above-normal temperature is only to be expected. The point to bear in mind is that the attack of fever is, after all, relatively mild.

For although the summer's campaigns are tossing some queer fish to the surface, they are not bringing up anything really dangerous. There is no slightest sign of the formation of one of those unthinking mass movements on the European pattern which might sweep across the country and put our institutions in peril. Widespread discontent does exist, but it is not hardening into a deadly, indigestible lump.

The reason for this is obvious. The free-and-easy democratic processes which permit demagogues and crackpots to have a field day every so often are the very things which act as safety valves for discontent. They permit people to blow off steam. They bring the self-appointed Messiahs out into the open early and force them to expose themselves in action.

So there is never enough steam generated to blow off the cylinder head. Before the pressure gets too high there is an outlet. And while we do get saddled with some rather weird public officials, we don't develop these fanatical bands of do-or-die extremists who want to tear down the whole works.

Democracy is inefficient, as its critics complain. Its inefficiency is clearly visible in some of this summer's campaigns. Yet that inefficiency is in some ways the best thing democracy has to offer. It is the "play" which keeps the machinery from getting too tight and burning out a bearing.

AND THE FOREIGN INVESTORS SAY—

State Widens Its Business Role In The Philippines

BY RICHARD WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
MANILA, P. I.—In a determined effort to adjust the nation's economy to alleviate its 80 per cent dependence on duty-free American markets, the Philippine Commonwealth is pioneering in the development of industries that private capital has ignored.

Going a long step farther toward "putting government into business" than any administration in the United States has ever attempted, the Commonwealth government of President Manuel L. Quezon frankly hopes to net fair profits from its ventures.

Government ownership and operation of commercial enterprises is not a new step in the Philippines. Under the American administration which preceded the Commonwealth established in 1935 under the independence act, the government for years owned and operated the leading railroad, bus lines, the Manila hotel, largest in the islands, and the Cebu Portland Cement Co. These projects have netted substantial profits.

Must Create Industries
President Quezon's government which is scheduled to become completely independent in 1946, faces the task of creating local industries against the day when it must stand alone in the family of nations.

The "government into business" drive is being handled by the National Development Company, an amply financed governmentally owned corporation.

One of the latest projects of the company is the establishment of a cotton textile mill. Spinning weaving and finishing machinery has been ordered from the United States and the manufacture of textile goods is expected to begin by the close of 1938. At present, the sizeable Philippine market for textiles is supplied by Japan and the United States. Philippine imports of American textiles approximate 8,000,000 square meters monthly. In the field of mining, the NDC has decided to develop coal and iron deposits with a view ultimately to develop domestic smelting. Several months ago, President Quezon turned down an attractive offer from Japanese interests eager to develop the Commonwealth's iron deposits.

Fish Cannery Next
During the past year the NDC has received $10,000,000 from the Commonwealth treasury for industrial surveys, establishment of a food cannery and a can factory. At the present time, it is acquiring 7,500 acres of fishponds with a view to establishing a fish company.

In contrast to the program sometimes voiced in the United States against the federal government entering the domain of private business, Philippine business men favor the Commonwealth program. Even pioneer American business men in the islands endorse the step as holding potential benefits for Philippine

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
XMA service staff writer

AN ear of corn welcomes the cool of a tomato pudding. This vegetable love affair pleases the summer appetite.

Corn and Tomato Pudding Au Gratin (Serves 4)

One and one-half cups grated cooked green corn, 1 cup tomatoes, 1-2 cup beef stock, 1 cup bread crumbs, pepper and salt to taste, 2 tablespoons grated cheese, 1 tablespoon butter.

Mix the corn, tomatoes, beef stock, half the bread crumbs and seasoning together. Put them in a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle the remaining bread crumbs on top and butter over the top. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 1 hour.

That's the invention of Jean Tennyson, a lovely young concert and opera singer who makes vegetables sing with pleasure. She has other numbers, too.

Stuffed Spanish Onions (Serves 6)

Six large Spanish onions, 3 tablespoons bread crumbs, 6 tablespoons chopped cooked ham, pepper and salt to taste, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 cups beef stock. Parboil the onions for 10 minutes. Allow them to get a little cool. Cut a slice off top and scoop out part of pulp. Mix chopped ham, bread crumbs, butter

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Blueberries and cream, dry cereal, eggs cooked in ramekins, bran muffins, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Stuffed Spanish onions, Melba toast, fruit bowl, tea, milk.

DINNER: Chicken croquettes, corn and tomato pudding, buttered broccoli, deep dish apple pie, hard sauce, coffee, milk.

Creamed Tomatoes on Toast (Serves 6)
Six medium tomatoes, 2 chives, 1 green pepper, 1-2 cup bread crumbs, pepper and salt to taste, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 cup cream sauce.

Remove centers of tomatoes. Mix chives and green pepper, chopped fine with bread crumbs. Add seasoning and butter. Fill cavities in tomatoes with mixture. Sprinkle bread crumbs on top and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 1-2 hour.

Place on toast, pour cream sauce over them and serve. (Cream sauce is made in the same way as cheese sauce, but the cheese is not blended in.)

Yesterday Mr. Harkness began to wire the house and Wilton is coming over for dinner. He has something very important to tell Sally.

CHAPTER VII

UPON leaving his father's office, Wilton Ames phoned Sally. Wilton spoke with her at length and was gratified to receive an invitation to dinner. And before leaving the bank, he took pains to ascertain the amount of Sally's balance.

It was surprisingly low. Ninety-eight dollars and forty-seven cents. Wilton did some quick figuring. The interest and amortization on the mortgage was six hundred, due now in about fourteen days. He knew that Sally had no means of increasing her money appreciably within that time. No, there wasn't a doubt of it. Unless this Parker fellow could raise funds, he and Sally were sunk.

Wilton arrived at the Preston house in good season for dinner. Presented to Kinks he took stock of that gentleman in a palatial but discerning manner. His diagnosis did not reassure him. Unless he was way off, Mr. Parker loomed as a menace.

He was pleased when, after dinner, Kinks erased himself unexpectedly. It seemed that he and Mr. Harkness were devoting the evening to a discussion of electricity.

Wilton concealed his elation and led Sally down toward the river. She was in a state of suppressed excitement. "Oh, Wilton," she said. "Please tell me what you have to tell me this minute."

Wilton refused to be hurried. He had planned to approach this matter step by step.

"Well," he said carefully, "you've always intimated that you wanted to keep this place."

"I certainly do. I can't imagine living anywhere else."

"That's what I came to talk about," said Wilton. "I've been going into the details. And unless you've got some money, Sally, I don't know how you're going to avoid selling it."

In the darkness Sally bit her lip. But she kept silent. "Of course," Wilton continued. "I don't know how you're fixed. But it occurred to me that this chap Parker might . . ."

She interrupted with a short laugh. "Kinks? He hasn't a cent!"

Wilton Ames

Wilton's breath of relief was inaudible. "Well," he said, "I don't see how you're going to clear $600 in less than a month by taking in boarders."

"I don't either," Sally said. "But Kinks—that is, Mr. Parker, is all full of plans. He . . . oh, I don't know if he's very practical, but he's an enthusiast."

"The trouble is," said Wilton, "that my father isn't going to listen to an enthusiast unless he's got money to back his enthusiasm."

"I've been wanting to speak to you about that, Wilton," said Sally. "Don't you think that, if we talked very frankly to your father, he might extend the time of the interest payment?"

Wilton shook his head. It was a point upon which he could be definite. "You know my dad," he said. "He's a hard-headed business man. Times are bad. And he's got his—well, his stockholders to think about."

"But couldn't you make him see reason?" "He wouldn't see any in this—this queer kind of hotel you seem to be running. However, I may be able to help you. Now then, your problem is to raise money and . . ."

"DON'T be so ponderous, Wilton," Sally interrupted impatiently. "For Pete's sake, get to the important thing you spoke about."

"I'm getting to it," said Wilton. "There's a low-priced stock on the Curb Exchange that looks good. A broker friend of mine recommended it to me. Well, you might be able to double or even triple any money you have before the payment is due."

Sally was silent a moment. "What is this stock?" she asked finally. "Great Divide Copper," Wilton told her. "You can get it now for half a dollar a share. And they think it's due for a quick rise."

Sally did some mental arithmetic. She could scrape together just about enough to buy 200 shares. If the stock went up, the money would go a long way toward paying off the mortgage. If she lost—well, $100 or so wouldn't have done her much good. Suddenly she made up her mind. "All right, Wilton," she said. "You can have your broker friend buy 200 shares for me."

"Okay," said Wilton carelessly. "I'll see about it tomorrow. You know that neither Dad nor I want you to lose the place. And you mustn't think that my father is—er—being hard on you. A bank can't be sentimental, of course."

An hour later he departed, well satisfied with himself. He did not feel that he had ascribed too much importance to Sally's capital, pitiful as it was. Sally was a resourceful person. It was just possible that she might have figured out some way to increase her money before the due date of the mortgage interest. And with this Parker fellow on the scene, they might have scraped up enough between them to pay it. But if Sally bought these copper shares he would at least know what she was doing with her money. A wise precaution, Wilton thought.

Sally found Kinks reclining on a sofa in the living room. Mr. Harkness had evidently retired. "Well," she inquired, "what did you think of Wilton?" "A polite person," said Kinks. "But cold. I can't see why you go for him. I warn you, I'll be like being married to a cash register."

"There might be security in that," said Sally reflectively. "Why, you little gold-digger . . ." Kinks began. The sudden roar of a motor cut him short. Nearer it came, evidently racing up the driveway. A shot rang out. Two more followed in quick succession. A beam of light flashed across the black squares of the living room windows. Then came the sound of tires grinding on gravel. A second later feet were pounding on the front porch.

Sally and Kinks ran into the hall. They were in time to see two men fling themselves through the doorway, slam the door, bolt it and brace their combined weight against it.

"What is this stock?" she asked finally.

"Great Divide Copper," Wilton told her. "You can get it now for half a dollar a share. And they think it's due for a quick rise."

Jead Woman's Eyes Still See

The benevolence of the late Mrs. Margaret Carr, top, San Francisco woman who willed her eyes to science, brought sight to Rev. U. E. Harding, lower photo, Portland, Ore., minister, and to a Sacramento, Calif., pianist. Harding's sight was partially restored when a surgeon transplanted into his eye tissues from a cornea taken from Mrs. Carr's eye at death and placed in refrigeration. He had been blind 43 years.

House of Clocks Resounds to Din of 125 Timepieces

CLEVELAND.—"Tick-tock" is multiplied 125 times in the home of Charles S. Mills—the owner of that number of clocks. Mills became interested in clocks as a hobby nine years ago. He is an automobile mechanic and machinist. An old square nautic clock left with the company started him on the hobby. Mills purchased it for a dime. He took it apart. Then he put it together. He had so improved upon it that it ran smoothly. Encouraged by his success, the clock connoisseur began collecting timepieces in earnest. Soon he had 50 clocks. His hobby absorbed all his extra time and money. First he was troubled by spring winds—when he removed them from clock cases they flew over the room. This problem was solved by using a clamp

Battle of Birds Ends; Robins Trick Fox

CONNEAUT, O.—Two robins and a woodpecker had a three-day battle while contesting each other's rights to establish a home in the entrance to a hollow limb. The woodpecker had amply upheltered the hollow limb with cotton wadding. Then the bird left on a short trip. When it returned, two robins had taken possession of the home site. The battle began. The woodpecker and the robins were alternately victorious. Finally, the robins outwitted the woodpecker. They sealed up the entrance to the limb with mud and grass, keeping out their enemy.

MYRA NORTH, Special Nurse -- By Thompson and Coll

ALLEY OOP -- By Hamlin

THE CLEVELAND INDIANS are still in the worried stage over Johnny Allen's condition, and even though Oscar Vitt says the star right-hander's arm is okay, a recurrence of any soreness may result in a fatality for Tribal pennant hopes.

Most dramatic case involving sore arm victims at present is that of Bob Grove. The Red Sox veteran southpaw was well on his way to being called one of the miracles of baseball when suddenly, as he was seeking his 15th victory of the year, his arm went dead, forcing him to leave the mound. Grove has been hospitalized for treatment and if all goes well there's no reason why he shouldn't go on winning. But arm injuries appear to be the most puzzling of all ailments to team physicians and trainers. Only a "football knee" can compare with them for tricky, in-and-out performances. Major league pitchers have been satisfied with their pitching fix the most part, but they're being wind up with a mark that looks more like a batting average. Van Mungo, Dodger fireball pitcher, has gone so far as to state he'll take a rest for a year if his arm doesn't get any better by the end of the season.

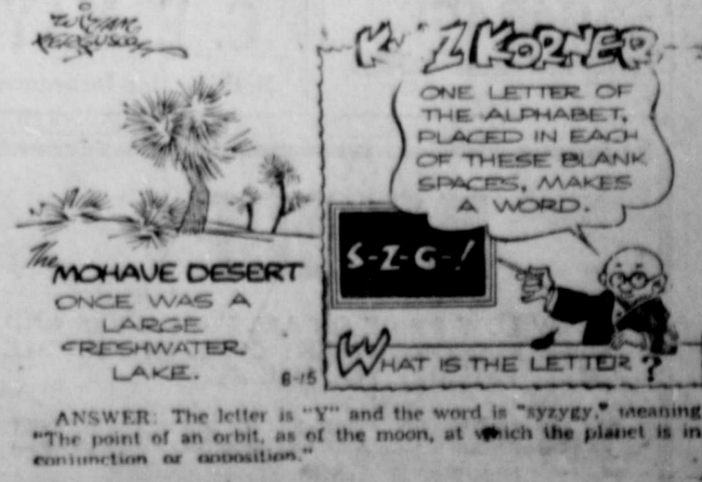

Tommy Bridges is taking his turn on the mound for Detroit, but an aching muscle has cut him down to about 50 per cent efficiency. At the rate he's going, the one-time master of the league's mightiest maulers probably will wind up with a mark that looks more like a batting average. Van Mungo, Dodger fireball pitcher, has gone so far as to state he'll take a rest for a year if his arm doesn't get any better by the end of the season.

Monte Stratton of the White Sox suffered a pulled muscle in training camp last spring and was kept out of action for six weeks before he regained complete strength in his arm. At the rate he's going, the one-time master of the league's mightiest maulers probably will wind up with a mark that looks more like a batting average. WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—For at least four months every summer, what Washington needs most is a swim. Although the local Board of Trade hires a fellow to make charts showing the mean temperature to be lower than in any other village above the equator, it's still mean enough that policemen must stand around to keep statesmen from leaping into park fountains with the splashing pairs. Alongside this lovely city flows its great, historic river, and if you only know the Potomac by outside reputation or brief glimpses, you may suppose Washington goes diving into it as soon as government offices close. Actually only the toughest fish and occasional drunks swim in it, the former because they don't know and the latter because they forget that the stream teems with germs. Curiously enough, this unhappy state of affairs is in no wise attributable to the New Deal. Upstream towns and cities of Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia vie with each other in pouring sewage into the Potomac and its tributaries. One of the worst tributaries is pretty Rock Creek, flowing through miles of magnificent park and parkway in the District of Columbia. President Theodore Roosevelt once encountered this creek, swollen with rain, while tramping through the park with French Ambassador Jusserand. Stripping himself naked, T. R. plunged through. Jusserand followed suit, but kept on his white gloves and top hat. He figured they might meet some ladies. Today, officials warn that anyone even wading in Rock Creek is likely to lose a leg from infection.

Solving a Delivery Problem in China

BLOCKADES and other restrictions on commerce incident to war often put difficult obstacles in the path of industry and the shipping business. This is particularly so in ancient, picturesque China. There, American automobile manufacturers recently have encountered difficulty in landing shipments of new cars at important ports. In shipping cars to Tsingtao, in Shantung province on the Yellow Sea coast, Ford Motor Company Exports, Inc., at Shanghai has found its delivery problem anything but routine.

Steamships are not allowed to enter Tsingtao inner harbor, and must anchor in the outer basin, two miles from the piers. Fords are not yet built to navigate on the high seas, so it was necessary that a way be devised to land the cars in Tsingtao. Accordingly the services of coolies and junks were enlisted. From the steamers the cars are loaded onto junks and ferried to sand beaches bordering a section of Tsingtao's wall. At the beach they are unloaded from the junks by coolies, as the accompanying photograph shows.

But the beach is so soft that a road of planks must be laid across a 60-yard strip of sand to get the cars to a gate in the Tsingtao wall. Even then the job of delivering Ford cars to Tsingtao is not an accomplished fact. The gate through the city's wall at this point is set at such an angle that coolies must pick up the rear ends of the units and lift them around through the opening. Thus, with the aid of the traditional coolies and age-old junks, are today's modern vehicles of transportation shipped into war-harassed China.

Many a wide-eyed tourist has been toted up Pike's Peak on the famous cog railroad, with tilted steam locomotives, like that in the lower photo, furnishing the power. But streamlining has caught up with the Rockies and the old engines have given way to three very modernistic, 50-passenger cars, like that in top picture. One of the old-time engines, which have been used for 50 years, will be placed atop Cheyenne Mountain, facing the Peak, as a monument.
