Today's fairy tale: Once there was a rich, rich European without a title who married into one of America's oldest and poorest families.

NAZIS TIGHTEN BELT IN TEST OF RESOURCES

Nazi Germany today broadened an unprecedented series of war maneuvers to test the effect of a war upon the nation's industry and economy.

A new method of distribution of raw materials was expected in an effort to avert current shortages and under supervision of national resources appeared likely.

Germany's military manuevers almost touched every German. One million participated. Transportation facilities have been requisitioned from citizens.

In Prague the superior council met in a tense but calm atmosphere across the frontier.

Eleswhia: Spain: A loyalist appeal for every man and boy in the province joined in the defense of the government of the rich mercury mine. Almaden was issued today.

China: Military leaders said the Japanese army attacking Hankow were bottled up in the upper Yangtze river.

High Heat In Fast Causing Deaths; No Relief Is Sighted

Temperatures were far above normal throughout the east with the death toll mounting. More than 12 deaths in eastern states are due to heat.

For This Barren Hill, Russians and Japanese Died

Six tiny dots atop this barren East-Asian hill are Russian and Japanese soldiers. It is Changkufeng Hill, and in the fight for possession of it hundreds of Russian and Japanese soldiers died. The hill's situation on the disputed border between Siberia and Manchukuo made it a fulcrum on which world war teetered. Though a temporary armistice has been made, this hill remains a menace to peace. This is one of the first pictures of the Russo-Japanese war to reach America.

Close Games Seen Monday At Tourney

Edith Rosenquest, a blond Miss, who studies the books at T. S. C. W., during the school year, won her own ball game Monday night in the first game of the regional tournament of the A. S. A. A. for girls when she hit in the pinches after pitching twelve innings of bang-up softball.

With Hayslip hovering on third and the score tied up four-all, Rosenquest stepped to the platter with one away and smacked a hard one that went for a clean hit and Hayslip scored easily from third giving the Royal Blues of Eastland a 4-5 victory over their old enemies, the Wichita Falls Rookies.

In fanning Pitt, who leads off for the Rookies, Rosenquest fanned a young lady who has only tasted such an experience twice in four years.

Another blond, Jimmie Mitchell, played perfect ball on the short-stop slot. Time and time again the Rookies smashed burning fast ones to her, and time and time again she answered their challenge by a waiting glove that never missed and perfect pegs to Horn at first time after time sent many a batter to the out column. All in all the Blues were playing perfect ball last night and the whole team gave E. Rosenquest all the support a pitcher could ever hope for. Last night the Blues weren't humans. They played like a machine that didn't know what a mismanagement.

The Rookies collected five hits off Rosenquest while the Blues managed to stack up eight against Westover, pitching for the Rookies.

In the first game tonight the Blues play DeLeon and in the second game the Rookies play Graham.

Fans saw another thriller last night when Graham finally smothered under a blast of Cisco batters in the ninth to give the Ciscoans a 6-4 edge over a scrapping little Graham team that didn't know the word stop.

ENDORSEMENT OF ASPIRANTS IS DEFENDED

FORT WORTH, Aug. 16.—W. Lee O'Daniel, governor-elect, told voters today "they ain't seen nothing yet" and defended his endorsement of six candidates for state office in a 15-minute radio talk over a state hookup.

The broadcast was given "because his original message was misquoted and misconstrued."

He said he had refused to endorse any candidates until requested by "thousands of friends who were confused by claims by almost all candidates."

"This action by candidates embarrassed me," he said. "Yet my friends were being told that I endorsed certain ones, so I decided to clarify the situation by announcing publicly whom I favored," he declared.

An International Housing Problem Arises

If the world is really interested in ending the unrest of its peoples, it will do some hard, serious thinking about the job which the International Refugee Conference is tackling.

This conference faces the task of finding some sort of permanent homes for the millions of people who have been thrown out of their European homelands. These people have been dispossessed for all sorts of reasons—racial, religious, economic and political—and their presence as an undigested lump in the world's body politic is like the presence of a source of infection in the human body: it must be removed if the body is to regain good health.

Myron Taylor, the leading American delegate to the conference, pointed out the other day that the existence of these homeless millions is a major factor contributing to world unrest. It is hard to see how it could ever be anything else. You cannot have a stable world, satisfied to exist on its old basis, as long as so many people are completely uprooted. In sheer self-defense, the world has got to find a place for them.

So far, so good. A place must be found. But where?

Well, one of the things we Americans will have to think about is the proposal that a certain number of the refugees be settled in the United States. It has been pointed out, for instance, that during the next five years refugees will have to be "placed" at the rate of half a million a year, and that America and Great Britain might properly agree to absorb half of that number annually, between them. That would mean the annual settlement in this country of 125,000 foreigners.

Now the objections to any such proposal are easy to anticipate. We have some millions of people out of work, as it is; can we afford to take on huge new groups into the labor market? Our farmers, too, are growing more things than they can sell profitably; do we want thousands of immigrants to establish new farms each year, thereby adding to the country's agricultural production?

Those questions aren't easily answered. Yet in the long run the scheme might well be a very good one, from a strictly selfish viewpoint.

For one thing, it is at least possible that one reason for our protracted slump is the fact that our whole economic system is keyed to a steady growth in population, and that that growth has been slowing up of late. For another, refugees from European despotisms have in the past contributed largely to the upbuilding of this country; they might well do so again. Some able and talented people are looking for new homes now; it is hard to feel that the nation which gets them will be making a very great sacrifice.

In any case, the problem needs serious thought. World unrest won't end until this refugee problem is decently settled. We have a responsibility that we can't entirely evade.

Sheriff Discounts Most of Crimes In Hamilton's Career

By United Press

DALLAS, Texas — Men who have known Floyd Hamilton most of his life and who are thoroughly acquainted with his background are skeptical of his participation in all the crimes in which he has been suspected.

"Floyd would have to be a centipede, or octoplets at least," laughed Dallas County Sheriff R. A. (Smoot) Schmid as he reviewed reports showing Hamilton and his alleged companion, Huron (Ted) Walters, hunted almost simultaneously in Texas, Louisiana, Missouri, Kentucky, Illinois, Arkansas, Indiana, Iowa—and maybe some other states.

Local authorities complained that the hunt for Hamilton, which has become widespread throughout the Midwest and Southwest, is fast giving him a kind of legendary infamy that makes checking of his activities more difficult.

They pointed out that the same complications confronted them in the case of Floyd's younger brother, Raymond, and his companions, Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow, who were rampant several years ago.

"Floyd probably is guilty of just about one-third of the crimes, charged against him," estimated Special Investigator Bob Alcorn of the Dallas District attorney's office, who was one of the party who ambushed Barrow and Bonnie Parker on a lonely Louisiana road and shot them down. "I doubt that Floyd and Ted Walters were involved in the recent $34,000 payroll robbery at Woodrider, Ill., because that must have been an inside job."

"Floyd and Ted are not well enough acquainted with that territory, and it would be the wildest kind of coincidence for them to run into someone who would tip them off on the lay of the land."

"Besides, Floyd might hold up some little country bank, such as at Bradley, Ark., but he prefers to stick up outlying filling stations and drink stands where there's little chance of getting caught. He's no big timer."

"Just let there be a holdup or shooting," Alcorn predicted, "and the first thing that'll come to everybody's mind is Floyd Hamilton. Chances are, he'll be most near."

Hamilton and Walters were last April 25 from the Montague County, Texas, jail.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX News Service Staff Writer

DON'T spoil an expensive dinner before you cook it. Study the modern techniques of home refrigeration. Learn these rules. They are based on cold logic. Reserve the coldest spot for dairy products and raw meat. Speed milk and cream to the refrigerator, taking only enough time to wash off the outside of the bottles. Creamed dishes and desserts made of milk or cream, or eggs, require the same special consideration. Epidemics of food poisonings are usually directly traceable to improper refrigeration. Study of this group. Bacteria-infested custard mixtures of milk and egg, and raw and cooked meats, especially ground meats, are most often the sources of the trouble. The rule that cold air goes down will help to locate the frigid zone in your refrigerator. But a thermometer or two set at different places will help to find the exact spot. Although sometimes the range is only two or three degrees, variations of six to eight degrees are not uncommon in household refrigerators.

Don't Overcrowd This may make all the difference between sweet and sour cream for breakfast. Trays, large plates or paper sacks may divert these air currents. Overcrowding may cut them off and reduce the efficiency of the refrigerator. Dishes are better than paper sacks, as they allow freer passage for the cooling air stream. Ground meats should be handled with special care. They used quickly, as there are multiple surfaces to invite attack, and the bacteria have been well seeded through the mass. It is unsafe to hold ready-to-serve meats longer than two days, even at 40 to 45 degree temperatures. Fish presents a double problem; for both the refrigerator and food must be protected. A wrapping of wax paper is probably most satisfactory. Keep Food Covered Uncooked fish should never be held longer than a few hours. Cooked meats, left-over foods and cheese dishes all need protection from refrigerator dryness. Foods of delicate flavor, such as milk, cream, butter, need protection from refrigerator odors. The original paper caps are best for milk bottles. Make sure all surfaces of the butter are closely covered by the original wrapping. To keep the refrigerator fresh and sweet, wash out the interior of the cabinet with a weak solution of washing soda. This is easier to remove than soap, and for the purpose has better cleansing qualities. A mechanical refrigerator should be thoroughly cleaned with washing soda solution at defrosting time. An occasional scalding of the cube tray is advisable.

SERIAL STORY

HAYWIRE HOUSE

BY EDWIN RUTT

COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday Wilson Ames convinces that Sally has a sick (to use her words) the night two men, Jack suddenly into the restaurant after long shooting outside.

CHAPTER VIII DAZED as they were Sally and Kinks perceived that the invading gentlemen had found refuge in the nick of time. Outside a taciturn of revolver shots rent the night. A hail of bullets splattered against the door of Mrs. Preston's house. But the door was thick and solid, built to take it.

Kinks Parker came to life. He seized Sally, pulled her into the dining room. Simultaneously they dived beneath the dining room table.

Suddenly cautious footsteps sounded. The living room lights went out. A second later a faint glow of light came from the windows at an unknown enemy outside.

From somewhere out in the grounds came a cry of mingled pain and anger. It was followed by an interval of quiet. Then a motor roared and raced. Presumably the sound of it died away.

There was a moment while the house seemed to tremble with the vibrant echoes of the shooting. Sally and Kinks, inglorious beneath the dining room table strained their ears. Peace settled once more over the Preston home.

A hoarse whisper from the living room broke the stillness.

"They've scrambled, Chief," said a voice. "We must hit one of 'em."

Another voice spoke and the whisper was louder, but just as hoarse.

"Hey, youse?" "You mean us?" Kinks whispered back.

"Yeah, youse. C'mon back in dat hallway. It's okay now."

Sally and Kinks crawled obediently from under the table. The lights in the hall were still on. And presently the two gun-minded gentlemen emerged from the darkened living room.

A scientist would have classified them immediately under the general heading of Gorilla. The first to appear, and obviously the leader of the expedition, was tall, broad-shouldered and blue-chinned. He had dark, dangerous eyes, a huge nose formed like a parrot's beak and a mouth as wide as the Delaware river. But terrifying though that face was, something attractive seemed to in it. The man was almost comically ugly.

His companion was a short, fat, ape-faced character with a nose like a pumpkin. Upon his forehead, a golden, round, button-like device was mounted.

Sartorially, however, these citizens were very snappy. They wore gray felt hats tilted at rakish angles. The trousers of their dark suits were creased to razor-edges.

Stuckpins gleamed in their ties, rings gleamed on their fingers. The critic of what the well-dressed man will wear could have quibbled over nothing save a single feature. Each of them sported a wicked-looking blue automatic in a hairy fist.

"The leader bent his keen, black-eyed gaze upon Sally and Kinks.

"Who are youse?" he demanded peremptorily.

Miss Sally Pennington had gotten over her initial fright. And now anger was fast superseding fear.

"Who are you?" she fired back. "You?"

"You!" Sally's finger, darting out, nearly stabbed him in the stomach.

"Why," he said, and pride tinged his voice. "I'm Bull Griffin."

"All right," said "We've got that straight," said Bull Griffin. But who's he?

"Oh, him?" said Mr. Griffin negligently. "He's just me body-guard, Tony Spaldini. Shake hands wit' da lady, Tony."

"We'll waive the amenities," said Sally. "Just what, Mr. Griffin, was the idea of turning my house into Fort Sumter?"

"Well, it's like dis, lady," explained Mr. Griffin ponderously. "We're bein' tailed by a couple of da Little Cheese's boys. And all at once we get a flat tire. Well, if we hadn't of crashed in here, dey might of plugged us. See?"

"And who or what is the Little Cheese?" said Sally.

"I'll tell you wot da Little Cheese is," he said venomously. "Da Little Cheese is a dirty, low-down, double-crossin', two-timin', rat-faced, little skunk wot had oughta be took fer a ride, drilled fulla holes an' chucked in da Harlem river."

"He's a heel," translated Kinks for Sally's benefit.

Bull Griffin beamed upon him approvingly. "Kid, you said sompin. Dat's just wot he is. Da Little Cheese is a big heel."

At this point there was a slight interruption. The Harknesses, robed for the night, appeared on the staircase. Evidently they had been covering during the fireworks and only now deemed it safe to emerge. The face of Mr. Harkness peered doubtfully over his wife's shoulder. He looked like a terrified ferret.

Seeing that the cause of the commotion was two citizens in mufti and not the German army, Mrs. Harkness made bold to speak.

"What is going on here?" she inquired, with asperity. "Who are these men?"

Kinks bowed slightly. "Mr. and Mrs. Harkness," he said, "let me introduce Mr. Bull Griffin and his traveling companion, Mr. Spaldini."

Bull Griffin glanced up the staircase. "Pleased to meetcha, lady," he said, briefly. "But beat it, will ya? We're havin' a powwow."

A whistle of admiration escaped Mrs. Harkness. He had known Mrs. H. for 30 years. And during that time nothing in pants had ever worked up the nerve to address her like that.

Mrs. Harkness gasped and sought helplessly for suitable words. In the interim Sally put a question.

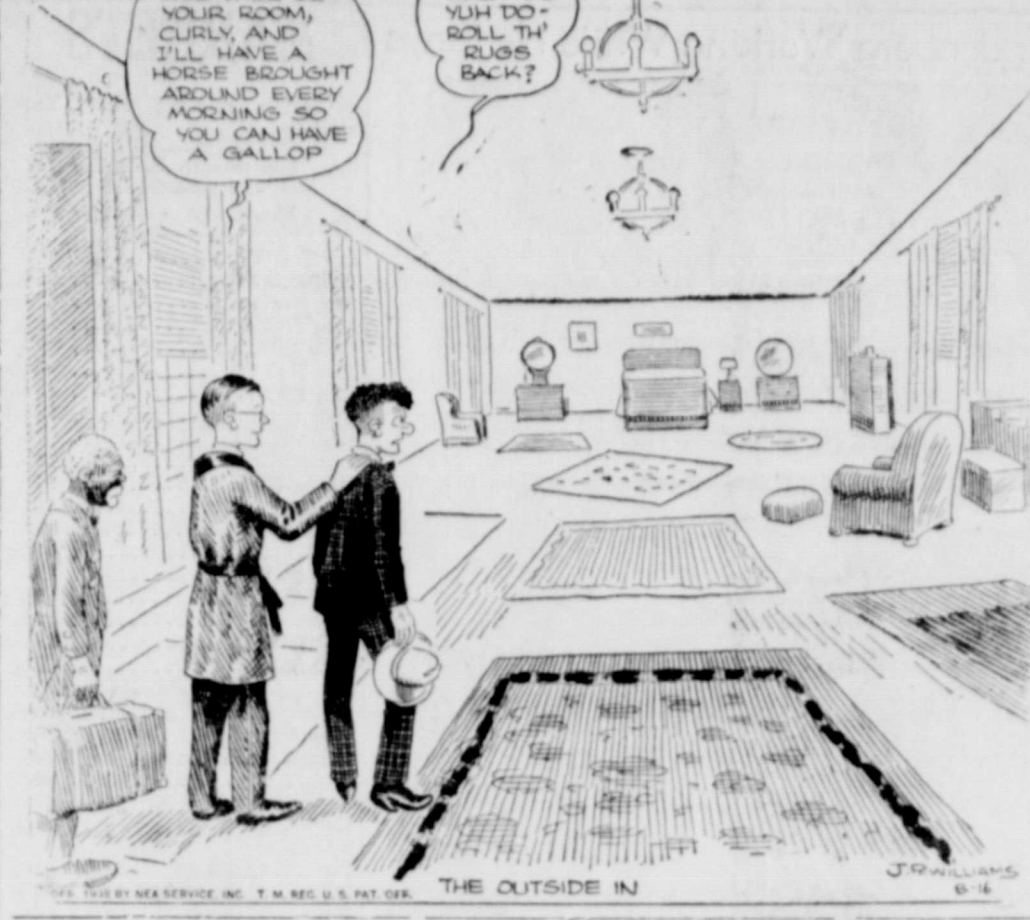

"And just what," she asked Bull Griffin, "are you planning to do next?"

Mr. Griffin grinned his incredible grin and waved his automatic gently.

"Me an' me pal," he said, "are bunkin' here fer da night."

"The baby was purchased by an Indian family, most of whose children had died," he said. "The little Eskimo seemed to be thriving on a diet of powdered milk, and its parents-by-purchase seemed extremely fond of it."

NEW YORK—Barney Ross had not a leg under him when Henry Armstrong hammered him into retirement not long ago.

Lou Ambers has two good legs, and simple multiplication shows us that the Herkimer Hurricane should give the St. Louis Dust Storm just twice as much trouble as Ross in their 15-round shins at the Polo Grounds, Aug. 10.

But I fear that this will not be sufficient to keep Armstrong from becoming the first fighter in history to hold three world titles at the same time.

While scrappers who wade in like Armstrong have been Ambers' mutton in the past, the Negro youth appears to be too strong for the product of upper-New York State bootleg rings.

Armstrong should catch the agile Ambers along about the seventh session, but I doubt that he'll knock him out. Like Ambers, Armstrong punches too rapidly to be devastating. He socked a weak Ross with everything but the ring posts without once upsetting him.

THEY'RE betting 8 to 5 that Ambers doesn't go the route, however. . . . 3 to 1 that Armstrong wins.

Addicts are puzzled by their own sports pages today. For instance, the Saratoga race meeting is on. There are countless attractions in the way of the $46,000 Hambletonian at nearby Goshen and a night baseball game at Ebbets Field.

For these reasons, present indications are that the bout will be fortunate to gross $100,000. Ambers is getting 37 1/2 per cent, Armstrong 22 1/2 because he is not defending the 147-pound title.

Ambers in the past generally has succeeded in making the other fellow fight his kind of fight. The Italian is a little Harry Grob in his style thoroughly unorthodox.

Ambers' biggest asset is a marvelous pair of legs with which he hopes to untrack Heartless Henry, for Ross and many others who couldn't, wished they could have had him arrested . . . or something . . . for following them.

THE show practically has been kept a secret to date. It is an anti-climax to the Armstrong-Ross and Louis-Schmeling engagements. The Saratoga race meeting is on. There are countless attractions in the way of the $46,000 Hambletonian at nearby Goshen and a night baseball game at Ebbets Field.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — A prophet usually issues in the doghouse in his own country. That was exactly the fate of Dr. Stanley High, who was publicly booed from the White House inner circle when he wrote a magazine article predicting a liberal conservative battle for control of the Democratic party.

But High knew what he was writing about, and events he predicted have come to pass. His piece "Whose Party is It?" appeared February 6, 1937. He had prepared it weeks before without knowing President Roosevelt would pop his Supreme Court plan on the eve of publication, and would depend on conservative politicians to put it over.

Roosevelt had no foreknowledge of High's article. Although he broke his wrath on High, he really has said the same things High said—and publicly.

The issue, High wrote, was whether the Democratic party was to become the liberal party in 1940. Old-line Democrats were ready to ease out the "economic salvationists" and their salvation plans and "restore the inoffensive Democracy with which they were familiar in the traditional era before Roosevelt."

They were sure, he continued, they could have a party by 1940 in which Carter Glass, John Garner, Al Smith, Jim Reed, and John W. Davis could again feel at home. Sensational at the time, but stale news 18 months later, was High's prediction:

"It seems probable that the engine of this movement of restoration will be the Vice President, Mr. Garner. Hopes of the old-order Democrats are pinned on him . . ."

SENATOR JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY of Wyoming, chairman of the Temporary National Economic Committee (monopoly investigation committee to you), selected as his assistant Prof. Arthur R. Hibbert of the University of Wyoming, a specialist on corporation law, public utilities and public administration.

A tall, slim, weather-beaten westerner with black moustache and quizzical expression, Hibbert for three years has worked with O'Mahoney on the latter's widely discussed plan for a federal incorporation law. Hibbert collects unusual air mail stamp covers, and, in autographing one of these, O'Mahoney recently wrote the words:

"There can be no political liberty without economic freedom."

SOME industrialists and financiers hire Washington lobbyists, press agents or other specialists to coach them on appearances before Senate investigating committees. Vice-President Charles M. White of Republic Steel didn't.

Citizens and police of Canton, O., had been testifying before the LaFollette committee that squads of Republic armed guards had tear-gassed school children, unarmed strikers, and spectators, and had beaten women and men with iron bars, shooting several. Then Bus Driver Darrell Smith told how he had been attacked and had managed to get away.

At this point White leaned back and guffawed.

"I will ask Mr. White to restrain his levity," said Chairman LaFollette. "I don't think anyone else is impressed with it."

Then the committee heard that Republic Steel had been so impressed with Smith's evidence as to pay him $500 damages, and that Herbert Blusher, non-employee, had got 400 buckshot in his back, with photographic evidence.

By that time White had received so much attention he was unable to sit in the back of the room.

Vandenberg Working While He Plays

With third term talk in the air and the 1940 election already a live topic, an outstanding G. O. P. presidential hope, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, is a busy man these days. The usually well-dressed senator is pictured—cigar in mouth and clad only in bathing trunks—as he worked on matters political on the beach of his Lake Michigan summer home west of Grand Rapids.

Horse Racing May Be Big Factor In Senatorial Races In August Voting

BY GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN.—Results of the legislative races in the runoff primary election to be held August 27 will be watched for their effect on possible return of horse race parimutuels to Texas.

Many Texans will watch the trend of this state election as eagerly as the nation's voters scan other results to determine the country's attitude on the "New Deal."

Hope for the return of parimutuels originated when it was reported that the name of W. Lee O'Daniel appeared on a petition to the Texas Legislature opposing repeal of the parimutuel act.

Two of the senators who voted to continue parimutuels will be absent from the next session. One of them is Frank Rawlings, who was credited with staving off repeal for a long time by clever parliamentary tactics. Rawlings was not a candidate for re-election. The other is Sen. T. J. Holbrook of Galveston who was defeated on July 23 by William E. Stone.

The known changes in membership of the Senate leave the count 15 against racing and 11 for parimutuels, with a total membership of 31. How the totals will be affected by incoming senators depends on the voting on Aug. 27.

On past performances, the outlook is not bright for the racing interests. They must have five to get a majority, if all the old members stand on their former votes.

George Moffett of Chillicothe, who comes to the Senate in place of Sen. Ben Oneal, voted for race repeal as a member of the House of Representatives. Jess Martin of Fort Worth will succeed Sen. Frank Rawlings from the district that includes Arlington Downs. Rep. Lonnie Smith withdrew from a runoff contest with Martin.

Smith as a House member had voted against racing. Martin announced no stand on it in his race. He had been attorney for a dog race track and is said to have had Rawlings' support.

Doss Hardin of Prairie Hill, who will take Dr. Newton's place, has no past legislative record. His twin brother, Ross, member of the House of Representatives, was absent when the vote on the race repeal bill was taken in the House.

Whether Sen. Grady Woodruff is re-elected on Aug. 27 or is defeated by Rep. R. C. Lanning of Locksboro, probably will not affect the racing situation. Both voted for race repeal last session.

Another of the runoff elections is between Repls. Penrose Metcalfe of Sen Angelo and Ross Prescott of Sanja Anna. Prescott voted in the House for race repeal. Metcalfe was absent when the final vote was taken.

W. E. Stone, who succeeds Senator Holbrook, has no legislative record and did not make racing an issue in his campaign. Holbrook had been for parimutuels.

A factor that entered into the situation last time, especially for members from livestock areas, was the pressing need at that time for support for a $700,000 appropriation for tick eradication by the Livestock Sanitary Commission. Some members probably felt the success of that appropriation was paramount to the benefit to breeders from racing in Texas. This time, however, the racing support

Woman Is 'Natural' At Capturing Wild Animals In State

CRYSTAL CITY.—It isn't the fault of pretty Mrs. Bessie Kennedy that she has captured eight mountain lions, 40 bobcats, and 154 coyotes during the past year.

Mrs. Kennedy just couldn't help it. She was led into being a trapper of wild animals by her husband, and she turned out to be a "natural" at her vocation.

Now, according to C. R. Landon, district agent at San Antonio for the Texas Predatory Animal and Rodent Control Association, Mrs. Kennedy is just as good a trapper as her husband, Robert Kennedy, or any of the other men on the force.

UNITED PRESS SERVICE BRINGS LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TO TIMES READERS
 RANGER, TEXAS, TUESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 16, 1938
 PRICE TWO CENTS NO. 65

Arcadia Will Celebrate 10th Birthday Friday

LOCAL PROGRAM TO BE PRESENTED BETWEEN TWO GREAT FEATURES

Two Splendid Pictures Are Booked for Double Feature Show to be Presented for a Single Admission Price Friday Night When the Arcadia Theatre Celebrates 10th Anniversary.

When the Arcadia Theatre celebrates its 10th birthday anniversary Friday night, Aug. 19, a program will be presented between screening of the two feature pictures. The program will be similar, but not as long, as the one presented on the night of the opening of the theatre 10 years ago.

Hall Walker, mayor of Ranger, will preside as master of ceremonies. Ten years ago Mayor John Thurman presided and gave a welcome address. Friday night he will be present as an honor guest.

Mayor Walker will present employees of the theatre at the time of its opening, and who are still in this section of the country. Among these will be J. T. Hughes, first manager of the Arcadia, who is now manager of a theatre in Breckenridge; James Adkins, operator, who is still employed by the theatre, and Noah Byers, doorman, who is now a Sinclair employee.

Invitations have also been sent to Mrs. Leta Cox, first cashier, and Grover S. Campbell, Denton, builder of the theatre. Several honor guests have been invited, including John Thurman of Ranger and Senator J. Manly Head of Stephenville, who has a role in "The Texans," which will follow the program.

K. E. Ambrose, president of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce has also been invited to make a few remarks.

Mrs. Weldon Webb will be at the organ during the ceremonies, and will present an especially arranged program of organ music, which she has worked up for the occasion.

"Professor Beware," Harold Lloyd's latest laugh creation, will be shown throughout the day, and after the local program "The Texans," which created such a sensation at its world premiere in San Antonio a few weeks ago, will be shown.

No advance in admission prices is to be made for this double feature, though the two films are considered the best in their respective classes produced so far in 1938.

Present Manager

J. T. Hughes, first manager of the Arcadia Theatre, who is now manager of a theatre in Breckenridge.

Film Retraces West's Famous Chisholm Trail

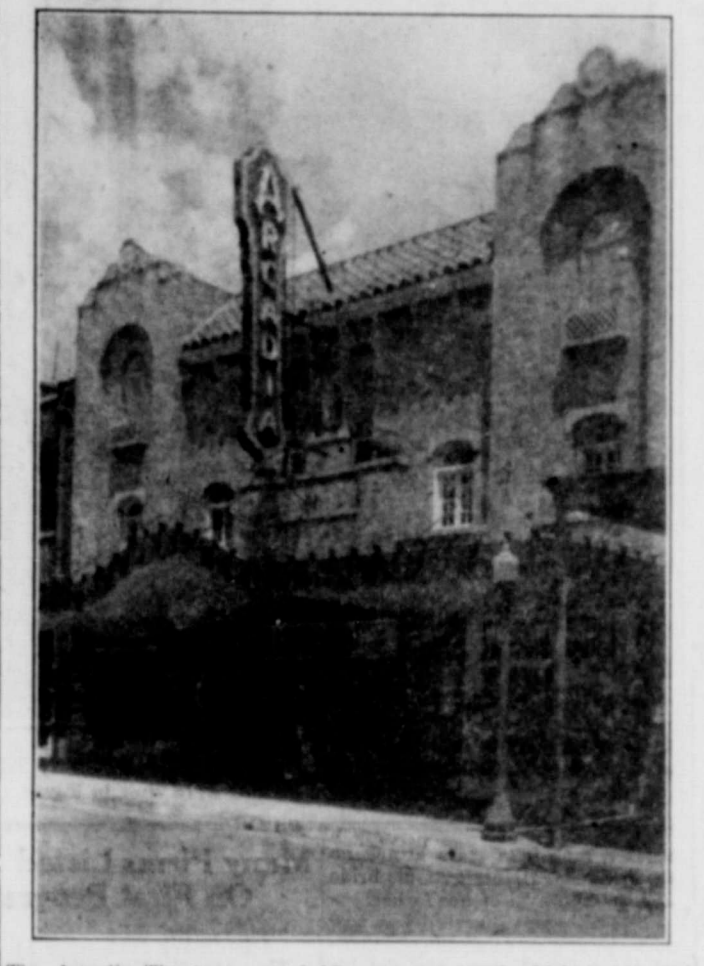

One of the most picturesque features in the development of the American West, the great cattle drive along the Chisholm Trail from the ranches of southern Texas to the earliest railway stations in Kansas, forms the setting for "The Texans," the epic drama of Dixie life in the years immediately following the War Between the States.

The trail, along which Joan Bennett, Randolph Scott and May Robson lead their herds in the picture, which comes Friday to the Arcadia Theatre, was first marked by Jesse Chisholm, a colorful frontiersman of the Daniel Boone tradition, in 1866. Its purpose was to furnish a route by which Texas ranchers could bring their cattle to the boom town of Abilene, Kansas, which had been reached by the old "Kansas-Pacific Railway" a year before.

The trek, a thousand miles from Indianola to Abilene, is marked by some of the most startling scenes in "The Texans." Union troops harry the pioneers, because they are violating tax laws by leading their cattle out of the State. Fierce battles with Indian tribes take place at several points, while nature, through dust storms, blizzards and prairie fires, does her best to hamper their march.

In order to insure the realism of the background, nearly all outdoor scenes of "The Texans" were filmed on location on the thirty-five thousand-acre La Mota Ranch in Southern Texas.

RANGER'S AMUSEMENT CENTER

The Arcadia Theatre, opened 10 years ago, and which is now celebrating its 10th anniversary with a double bill and a local program Friday night, has for the past 10 years been recognized as the leading moving picture theatre in this part of the country. Friday night the theatre's anniversary will be celebrated with a showing of "Professor Beware" and a premier of "The Texans."

Hilarious Hi-Jinx Rate Top Spot For New Comedy

Harold Lloyd, who was last seen on local screens over a year and a half ago in "The Milky Way," returns Friday to the Arcadia Theatre in his latest comedy, "Professor Beware." In this story of a down-and-out archaeologist in search of a job Lloyd has surrounded himself with an able supporting cast that includes Raymond Walburn, Lionel Stander, William Frawley, Cora Witherspoon and his brand new leading lady, Phyllis Welch.

Hilarious hi-jinx are in order when Lloyd starts a screwy cross-country jaunt in search of a job. It seems that Lloyd, employed as an Egyptologist in a museum, loses his pants... and his job, in order to get a beautiful girl, Miss Welch, to get a screen test.

Penitence, with the law at his heels, and a pretty girl hectoring it after him, his adventures follow in a whirl. He is forced to spend a night on the desert alone, with Miss Welch, but wary of love he sneaks away to continue his lonesome travels.

Continuing towards New York the freight train route, he teams up with two tramps, Stander and Walburn, who contribute their goofy share to the comedy. Adventure follows adventure, and before he knows what's what Lloyd finds himself marrying an heiress to escape the wrath of the law.

"PROFESSOR, BEWARE" AND "THE TEXANS" ON PROGRAM FOR EVENING

Mayor Hall Walker to be Master of Ceremonies When Arcadia Theatre Celebrates its 10th Anniversary Friday Night, August 19, with the Showing of Two Great Feature Pictures.

Friday night, Aug. 19, the Arcadia Theatre will celebrate its 10th birthday anniversary with a presentation of two of the outstanding pictures of the year, Harold Lloyd in "Professor Beware," the year's greatest laugh hit, and "The Texans," Paramount's mighty romantic drama of the great southwest.

Frontier Town Reconstructed for Epic Film

One of the most colorful towns of the now-vanished frontier, Indianola, Texas, was completely reconstructed on the Paramount lot for the filming of the panoramic drama of the post-bellum South, "The Texans," which will have its first local showing next Friday at the Arcadia theatre's anniversary.

The "main stone" of the reconstructed Indianola contained 15 principal buildings, all of them copied from original sketches of the town which Paramount researchers found in the Texas museum at Austin. First, there was the Indianola hotel, the principal hostelry which was almost always the most important gathering spot in a frontier town. Then there was the Civil Administrator's Building, from which a corrupt carpet-bag government tried to rule the post-war South; the Redbug house, presumably a resort for less affluent citizens; the Fly Trap cafe; the Camp Kettle; a general store, which was outfitted with pieces from the Pony Express museum; a couple of saloons, including Dirty Face Charlie's, and several other structures.

"THE TEXANS" SHOWS SOUTH'S TRAGIC AGE

Robert E. Lee made a great mistake when he surrendered to General Grant at Appomattox! The South, not the North, really won the War Between the States!

That, at least, is the decision of Hollywood, which in a long line of motion pictures beginning with the sensational "Birth of a Nation" back in 1915, has almost never failed to adopt a pro-Southern attitude in dealing with this period in the events of American history.

The latest example of it is "The Texans," Paramount's epic production of the Reconstruction period, starring Joan Bennett and Randolph Scott, which opens Friday at the Arcadia theatre's anniversary show.

Just as the South appeared in a sympathetic light in such famous productions as "So Red the Rose," "Wells Fargo" and "Jesse James," to name only a few, it does so once more as "The Texans" tells the pathetic and moving story of a typical Texas family caught in the whirlpool of the post-war years. Here the worst aspects of the Reconstruction are vividly brought into play—the corrupt carpet-baggers and scalawags, the unbearable taxation, the interference with private lives and property, the formerly aristocratic families brought to ruin.

The story of "The Texans" concerns the romance between a splifire Southern belle, played by Miss Bennett, who wants to detach Texas from the Union, and a homecoming Dixie soldier, Scott, who pleads with the Texans to forget their past hatreds and build a new life for themselves in the great cattle empire of the Southwest. Scott's triumph is pictured in the thousand-mile trek across the famous Chisholm Trail, across Texas and Oklahoma, into the booming cow towns of southern Kansas.

Two of Hollywood's most sophisticated composers, Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin, turned out a rousing cowboy song in the best Western tradition for "The Texans." The number is called "Silver on the Sage," and will be heard on the screen for the first time when the picture opens.

What Was Said of Arcadia Theatre's First Employes

Of the employees of the theatre the program directors at the opening of the Arcadia Theatre had the following to say of Miss Ethel Johnson, the organist:

Ethel Johnson, known in musical circles as The Dixie Serenader, is a native of Waco, Texas. She is a graduate of Baylor University's School of Music, and in her undergraduate days was a leading spirit in dramatic and musical projects in college.

Miss Johnson's professional career was begun in the Orpheum Theatre, Waco, where she remained two years as chief organist and orchestra pianist. An engagement as a member of the Gypsy Sweethearts Girls Orchestra followed, and Miss Johnson toured with them a season.

In 1925, Grand Theatre, Paris, Texas, claimed Miss Johnson's services and she remained for the ensuing three years, winning great popularity there. Recently she left Paris to study the Reuter Organ, desiring a more intimate acquaintance with this type of instrument to fit herself for the playing of the Arcadia's Reuter.

We believe Miss Johnson will become very popular with Arcadia patrons; we know she will strive to make the Reuter Organ and herself a valuable entertainment unit.

Gov. Allred Honors Actor For a Week

Just call him "Colonel!" That's Randolph Scott's new title, given to him by Governor James V. Allred of Texas for his part in glorifying the Lone Star State in Paramount's new epic, "The Texans," which will show Friday at the Arcadia theatre.

This is no mere honorary title, for by it Scott has actually become a member of the Governor's personal staff.

The actor was presented with his commission by Governor Allred himself, who flew from Austin to the La Mota Ranch, between San Antonio and Laredo, where the Paramount company was on location.

"The Texans" tells a story of life in the Lone Star State during one of its most dramatic and colorful eras, the decade immediately following the War Between the States. The plot concerns the struggles of a war-weary people to recover the control of their government from corrupt carpet-bag officials and to build a new life in the great cattle country of the Southwest. Besides Scott, the cast includes such popular players as Joan Bennett, May Robson, Walter Brennan, Robert Barrat, and Robert Cummings. It is directed by James Hogan, who brought the Technicolor sensation "Ebb Tide" to the screen.

Storm Blows Away Setting For Epic

Indianola furnishes the background for the opening scenes of the picture, and, to answer the above question in the Southern manner it deserves, the famous old town is gone with the wind! Once a flourishing Texas port, it was destroyed by successive cyclones in 1885 and 1886 and razed to the ground.

After a few years, settlers again arrived on the spot and Indianola's site is now occupied by Fort Laveaca. It is located on the Gulf of Mexico, about one hundred miles down the coast from Galveston.

Whether it is due to a strange coincidence or the intention of the rebuilders of the place, "Laveaca" is the Spanish word for cow. And it was as a great cow market that Indianola was celebrated throughout the United States during its palmy days in the middle of the nineteenth century. In "The Texans," the leading characters, headed by Joan Bennett, Randolph Scott and May Robson, outwit the corrupt carpet-bag government by driving their herd of steers from Indianola, one thousand miles along the famous Chisholm Trail, across Texas and Oklahoma, into the booming cow towns of southern Kansas.

Two of Hollywood's most sophisticated composers, Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin, turned out a rousing cowboy song in the best Western tradition for "The Texans." The number is called "Silver on the Sage," and will be heard on the screen for the first time when the picture opens.

The game was replayed before the cameras for the picture which introduces "Hank" Lulsetti, Stanford All-American ace, to the screen.

NEW COMEDY DISPLAYS LATEST LLOYDIAN WIT

As screwy a yarn as Harold Lloyd has ever appeared in will be shown Friday night at the Arcadia theatre when the bespectacled comedian comes to town in "Professor Beware," ably assisted by Phyllis Welch, Lionel Stander, Raymond Walburn and Sterling Holloway. Lloyd is at his best in this dizzy tale of a hitch-hiking professor. This will be one feature on the Arcadia's double bill to be shown in celebration of its tenth anniversary.

Last seen about a year and a half ago in "The Milky Way," the comedian makes a sock return to the screen in this hilarious story that begins with him sans trousers, and ends with Lloyd marrying an heiress against his will. Lloyd, an Egyptologist employed by a California museum, gets himself into a scrape with the law when he befriends an inspiring young actress. He is offered a job with an archaeological expedition leaving for Egypt, providing he can furnish his own fare to New York. And thereby hangs the tale. The balance of the picture has to do with his uproariously funny experiences on a cross-country jaunt. Penniless, with the law at his heels, and a pretty girl hot-footing it after him his adventures follow in a whirl. He is forced to spend a night on the desert alone with Miss Welch, but wary of love he sneaks away to continue his lonesome travels.

Continuing towards New York via the freight train route, he teams up with two tramps, Lionel Stander and Raymond Walburn, who contribute their consistently goofy share to the comedy. Adventure follows adventure and before he knows what's what Lloyd finds himself marrying an heiress to escape the wrath of the law.

In the meanwhile, the girl's wealthy father hears that she is about to marry a hobo and rushes to stop the ceremony, but he's too late. Nevertheless, he whisks his daughter off to his yacht, where Lloyd tries to follow her. After he's thrown overboard twice, he faces to submit to Northern rule and insists that the "great cause" is not lost, while Randolph Scott is a homecoming Confederate soldier, who devotes everything to the building up of a new Texas on the ruins of the old. Although Miss Bennett is all for starting a new uprising, Scott convinces her that she should devote her energies to constructive work, and together they lead a great cattle cavalcade through the wilds of Texas and Oklahoma into thriving Kansas, where the new railroad provides them with a ready market for their steers.

IMPORTANT CHARACTERS IN "THE TEXANS"

May Robson and Walter Brennan who have important roles in "The Texans" which is scheduled to be shown at the theatre here next Friday. "The Texans" was filmed almost entirely at Cotulla, Texas. Randolph Scott and Joan Bennett are in the leading roles. Miss Robson and Brennan contribute some laughs to the production and have stellar roles.

All the tragedy of the Reconstruction period is revealed as the picture unfolds. A group of the most miserable men ever to appear on the American scene, the carpet-baggers, descend on a prostrate land and rule a proud people for their own profit. Aristocratic families are reduced to poverty, private lives are invaded and even private property is confiscated by corrupt officials who can never get enough loot.

"The Texans" boasts a supporting cast of some of filmdom's best liked players.

Tex Rankin, known as international aerial acrobatic champion, today was awarded a role in Paramount's cavalcade of the air in Technicolor, "Men With Wings," by William A. Wellman, producer

Phyllis Welch Is Latest Find of Harold Lloyd's

"Professor Beware," the Paramount comedy which is one of the features of the Arcadia's 10th birthday, brings Harold Lloyd back to the screen after an absence of over a year and a half and adds a fresh leading lady to the roster of feminine stars that started with him. As is his custom, Lloyd searches for talent before casting a new picture and this time he pops up with a lovely new blonde, Phyllis Welch.

Miss Welch's story of screen success is no tale of sudden fame. She worked hard and long for her initial chance in the movies and served her apprenticeship under some of the best known names on the legitimate stage. Her first theatrical experience came from the best school in the world for an aspiring young actress, summer stock. She appeared in a small part with Ernest Truex in a Connecticut stock company and then, after haunting booking offices, finally got a chance at some radio work on the Lawrence Tibbett program.

From there on, the path seemed easier. She entered the legitimate stage with a small part in "A Slight Case of Murder," and after the run of that was given an understudy part for Doris Dudley in "End of Summer." Her big chance came in the role of "Judith" in "High Tor" in which she played with Burgess Meredith. It was there that talent scouts saw her and brought her West. She wasn't in Hollywood two weeks when Lloyd ran across her and offered the lead in "Professor Beware."

And so she seems made, the same as other Lloyd leading ladies before her, if precedent means anything. A few names that the comic started are Bebe Daniels, Jobyna Ralston, Constance Cummings and Mildred Davis, who turned the tables on him and instead of marrying the boss' son, married him, the boss.

"Professor Beware" is a comedy as typical of Lloyd as his world-famed glasses "eyeglasses." The story concerns itself with the antics of a penniless archaeologist, Lloyd, and his screwy cross country jaunt from California to New York, all the while pursued by Miss Welch. Lloyd has cast in supporting roles a group of seasoned character actors that include frog-voiced Lionel Stander, Raymond Walburn, Cora Witherspoon, William Frawley and Sterling Holloway.

Epic Pictures Reconstruction Era In Texas

The first motion picture epic to deal with the Reconstruction South since D. W. Griffiths made motion picture history with "The Birth of a Nation" back in 1915 is "The Texans," which will open next Friday at the Arcadia Theatre's 10th anniversary.

Although no period in American history is more filled with color, action and romance than the days following the War Between the States, when a victorious North tried to rule the defeated Southern states as conquered provinces, it has been almost an unploughed field as far as Hollywood is concerned. While the brooding pre-War period has been pictured many times, recently in "Jezebel," and the War itself even more often, "The Texans" is the first epic production in more than twenty years to depict the most thrilling aspect of all, the South's titanic struggle for liberty and self-rule after Appomattox.

In tracing the fortunes of a typical Texas family, beginning with the return of the men from battle in 1865, "The Texans" symbolizes the tragic and moving story of the entire South during the post-bellum years. At the head of the cast, Joan Bennett is a tempestuous Dixie belle, who re-

Real Texas Scenes Make "The Texans" Realistic

May Robson Has A Pioneer Role In "The Texans"

May Robson, "the grand old lady of Hollywood," is celebrating her 54th year in the theatre with the most picturesque role in her career in "The Texans," Paramount's epic production of the South's rebirth during the years following the War between the States, which will come next Friday to the Arcadia.

Heading the cast with Joan Bennett and Randolph Scott, Miss Robson portrays a valiant old pioneer woman who fights for her rights against carpet-bag officials and helps build a new Texas on the ruins of the old.

When interviewed at her 74th birthday party on location during the filming of the picture, Miss Robson said, "I've had two roles which I like better than any others I've ever played, and they both came this year! One is 'Aunt Polly' in 'The Adventures of Tom Sawyer' and the other is 'Granna' in 'The Texans,' which is keeping me busy right now.

"Granna" is a picturesque character from whichever way you look at her," Miss Robson went on as she cut into the giant birthday cake presented to her by the members of the cast. "She represents the typical American pioneer woman who has made this country what it is today. She didn't fear anything or anybody, even Union troops, and was interested only in repairing the ruins of the war. Her type has been represented down the years by such women as Pocahontas, Dolly Madison, Nancy Hanks Lincoln and Jane Addams, and I'm glad to be playing one of them. Maybe it's the frontier spirit in me," she added with a wink.

Miss Robson refers to her birth in far-away Australia. She was educated in England, France and Belgium and won her great fame in her adopted country, the United States. After making her stage debut in 1883, Miss Robson played for 22 years under the manage-

Good Stories Rare Says Harold Lloyd

By Harold Lloyd

It might amaze you to look back over the motion pictures you have seen during the past year and note the paucity of the comedies you can recall. Even if you are an inveterate picture-goer and see two or three a week, you can probably count the comedies you have witnessed on the fingers of both hands.

And the reason? Stories!

Let's analyze "Professor Beware." It has to start with, a timeliness that should appeal to American audiences as well as to film enthusiasts the world over. And that is most important, for without success in the foreign markets we could never meet the financial outlay demanded by present day first rate comedies.

Secondly, it has adventure with a large dash of romance. But most essential of all, it offers innumerable opportunities to be studied with the visual comedy or "gags," without which no comedy of the type expected from us would be acceptable.

The most usual drawback to stories suggested us are their insincerity, their forced comedy, and broadness.

There are still some comedians on the screen who can forget the sincerity angle, but once having stamped yourself as a delinquent of sincere stories, as we have attempted to do throughout the years, you cannot ever get away from it.

And then again, audiences have progressed with pictures. Radio has contributed to this education, but not of course in the visual sense until the perfection of television, the air-lines must of a necessity carry its complement of wisecracks and puns.

The good visual gag, rightly presented, is worth even more today than it was in the earliest motion picture. Talking pictures have given the comic the two additional allies of dialogue and sound, but his principal weapon is still visual "business."

And it all must be tied together in a store.

Plots cut as thin as boarding house ham were all right in days of yore, but now would go as far with audiences as a pound of hamburger in a kennel full of Great Dane dogs.

A comedian's idea of heaven ment of Charles Frohman in the Empire Stock company, of New York. Her first screen role was in "The Angel of Broadway," and she was seen recently in "A Star Is Born."

IN TEXAS EPIC

would be a drawer full of stories which were designed to be readily gaged and filmed at the rate of two a year. In recent years our ambition has been to turn out a picture each six months, but our interference breaks up just as we are about to crash through the line, and we find ourselves thrown for a loss instead.

CAN'T FORGET NAME

Russell Hayden, who appears as "Lucky" in Harry Sherman's Hopalong Cassidy pictures for Paramount, rechristened his fast motor boat "Jane" after he became engaged to Jane Clayton, New Mexico heiress who appeared with him in "In Old Mexico" and "The Secret Trail."

PLAYS REAL LIFE ROLE

Bob Burns, who plays an itinerant printer in Paramount's "The Arkansas Traveler," with Fay Bainter, frequently worked for newspapers in that and other capacities during his hobnob years as a youth, which took him into every one of the 48 states.

TREAT FOR KIDS

More than 100 boys, including Donald O'Connor and Bennie Bartlett, were given roles in the new Paramount film, "Sons of the Legion," and in one scene they were "compelled" to gorge themselves on coconut cake and chocolate ice cream.

What Was Said of First Employees

Of Mrs. Pearl Cox, Cashier: Mrs. Pearl Cox, well known in Ranger before she joined the staff of the Campbell Theatres, will have charge of the box office of the new Arcadia Theatre.

Mrs. Cox has been with the organization for nearly a year and is possessed of the personality and friendliness necessary for one to hold a position such as hers.

Before joining the Campbell Theatres she was employed by other business firms of Ranger.

And of Mr. A. J. Martin, Doorman: A. J. Martin, doorman and house manager of the Arcadia Theatre, has been with the Campbell Theatres for two years.

His record as a theatre man embraces 17 years of work. He spent four years in Tulsa, Okla., at the Majestic and Ritz Theatres, and has been associated with shows in other states.

Courteous in manner and pleasing in personality, he is known by practically every Ranger theatre-goer.

None of these employees are new with the company, Mrs. Pearl Cox leaving some two years ago.

OPPOSITE MacMURRAY

Dorothy Lamour and Fred MacMurray have been selected for starring roles in Paramount's forthcoming Technicolor production, "Mantrap," a story of the Canadian Northwest.

Robert Cobb, popular

wood restaurateur, today plays his actor protegee, Wen Wood, champion cowboy of Living Mont, in "The Sunset Trail," Harry Sherman's "Hopalong Cassidy" production starring W. Boyd.
