One Union, Divisible by Its Friends

The man who remarked that he could take care of his enemies if someone would just protect him from his friends might well have been a member of a labor union, 1938 model.

The split between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization is, of course the most obvious example. Even more damaging, however, in some respects, is the row which is currently tearing the United Auto Workers apart.

This appears to be a civil war in the high command. One group accuses the other of being Communist-dominated and inspired; that group retorts that the opposition is led by "Lovestonites," an offshot faction of the original Communist party which is in sworn opposition to Stalinist leadership.

All of this may be stimulating and invigorating to the leaders involved, but it can't be very welcome news to the ordinary workers.

A labor union is first and last a collective bargaining agency for its members. It is the instrument through which they deal with their employer on something like the basis of equality which prevailed in the small, man-to-man dealings of the shops of a century ago.

But a leadership which is split wide open over doctrinal disputes about which the rank and file cares little is hardly in shape to bargain efficiently. In this particular instance, it is demonstrating that the "red scare" which has been raised in connection with the auto union in the past has a substantial basis in fact; further, it is practically inviting any employer who is so minded to drive as hard a bargain as he cares to drive—or, for that matter, to refuse to bargain at all.

Labor has made tremendous advances in the last few years. These have come largely because people have at last realized that everybody gets along better when peaceful, orderly bargaining exists—bargaining in which both sides recognize their responsibilities not only to those whom they directly represent but to society as a whole.

That is why this auto union squabble is so distressing. It helps no one; it hurts most of all the people whom the squabblers are supposed to represent.

An actress is quoted as saying the moving picture people should stick to one type. That startled us, too, but it turned out she was talking about roles.

ELI, the high priest—to whom Hannah, the godly mother, brought her little son, Samuel, that he might be brought up in the service of the temple—stands as a sad and sorry figure in Scriptures and in history. The sadness, too, is that he is a type of a large number of well-intentioned but inefficient and suffering parents.

Marching Toward His Biggest Test

With a grim, determined expression, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey of Manhattan is pictured mounting the steps of New York's Supreme Court to meet the crisis of his skyrocketing career—the trial of Tammany Leader James J. Hines as political fixer for the racketeering gang of the late Dutch Schultz.

Street Sprinkler Built for Ranger

The Ranger Fire and Street Department has completed construction of a water wagon, to be used in sprinkling dusty streets, along which traffic has been heavy and the dust bad for the past few weeks.

The tank, with a capacity of 182 gallons, is mounted on a truck, with a two-inch pipe across the rear. This pipe has a large number of holes drilled in it through which the water is sprayed over the street.

Tiffin Road, over which trucks have been traveling to and from the coal pile at Tiffin, is watered each night to keep down the dust, and other streets in the town are also being watered.

This is the first time in many years that a street sprinkling system has been in use in Ranger.

Targets of Dewey's New Blast

Chief defendant in the most important legal attack on Tammany Hall's power since the days of Boss Tweed, James J. Hines, right, smiled confidently as he entered New York Supreme Court on the arm of his lawyer, Lloyd Paul Stryker, left. Hines, most potent Tiger leader, is charged by Manhattan's racket-busting District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey with "contriving a lottery"—the $100,000,000 numbers racket run by the late Dutch Schultz. The greatest penalty, for all charges, that can be imposed on Hines is 25 years. But on his fate hangs the question of the survival of Tammany as a political factor in New York.

Students Wanting Work to Pay For Rooms and Board

H. L. Baskin, dean of Ranger Junior College, reports that there are several prospective students for the Ranger institution who need places to work for their room and board. Baskin has worked the college territory thoroughly and finds a genuine widespread interest in the local college and a marked increase in enrollment is predicted.

There are many delightful and dependable young men and women who are anxious to attend college here but who are unable to do so unless they can secure sufficient work to earn board and room. All who would like to help one of these deserving young people in this way are asked to call the school tax office and leave their names and addresses.

16,800 Children In Texas Benefited by A Federal Program

AUSTIN—Some 16,800 Texas children under 16 years of age have benefited under the national social security act through the division of child welfare since this state's program of child welfare services was approved in March, 1936, by the federal children's bureau, it was revealed by the state board of control, in connection with this week's celebration of the third anniversary of the enactment of this federal legislation.

This program is under the direction of Mrs. Violet S. Greenhill, chief of the state division of child welfare, and Mrs. Norma Rankin, director of child welfare services, whose staff of 35 combat the problems confronting Texas children left destitute by the breaking up of homes through death, sickness or other parental incapacities, by behavior problems in home, school, community, from physical or mental handicaps.

Five county units have been established wherein local funds were raised to the amount of $11,159.00, which when matched by federal funds and state resources assist in the monthly care of more than 600 children within their own communities and, in many instances, with their own people. It has been estimated that it costs $24.85 a month to keep a dependent child in a state institution, whereas the care of a dependent child under supervision in its own county is one-half that amount. In addition to these five county units, six district headquarters have been established.

Important studies have been made in the development of an effective program in adoptive procedure, prevention of delinquency,

SERIAL STORY

HAYWIRE HOUSE

BY EDWIN RUTT

Copyright, 1939 NEA Service, Inc.

Yesterday, The Ames congratulated each other after their little act before Kinks and Sally.

CHAPTER XII

"I COULD kill Spencer Ames," Sally said venomously, as she headed the car out of Winstock.

"Seems to me he could," said Kinks. "Didn't old Kenworthy say he just about owns that bank?"

"Wilton was decent about it, anyhow," said Sally.

"He made an impassioned plea, all right," Kinks admitted.

"But listen, beautiful, don't you go getting any wild notions in your head. I positively forbid you to marry Wilton Ames no matter how expert he becomes at bawling out his father."

"Marry?" exclaimed Sally. "Good heavens, I'm too busy to marry anybody. If you or Wilton want to get married, you'd better find some girl who isn't trying to run a cockeyed hotel."

An alien car stood in the driveway as they approached the Restorium. And on the porch, in conversation with Mr. Harkness, sat a tall, thin female whose pale-cold hair, threaded here and there with gray, flourished in wild abandon about her head.

She wore a cream-colored, raglan coat. And in her lap reposed a book, a magazine, a cigarette case, a handbag, and a dachshund.

SALLY opened her mouth to speak, but the dachshund beat her to the punch.

"Yip," said the dachshund. The tall woman tapped its head sharply.

"Ganz ruhig, Wolfgang," she said. And to the assembled company, "I have to speak to him in German."

Mr. Harkness took the floor. "This is Miss Clara Fenimore," he said to Sally. "She thinks she'd like to stay with us for a while."

"I'm a nerve case," announced Miss Fenimore abruptly. "My nerves are all on edge. I haven't had a night's sleep in six months. No sex. What I require is absolute rest. That is why your billboard attracted me. Have you a clean, comfortable room with a southern exposure? I hope you allow dogs."

She spoke in jerky fashion, like a locomotive making a tough grade.

"Well," said Sally, "you understand, of course, that this isn't like a sanitarium. I mean, we—we don't provide medical attention."

"Mr. Harkness has explained the waves as they came into shore. After the swim we went back to camp and ate supper. Mr. L. L. Johnson, State Boys' Club Agent had charge of the program for that night, and he had each boy to get up and tell what he had done in his county for the protection and conservation of wildlife.

R. E. Callender, extension service, wildlife specialist, followed Mr. Johnson, and discussed "What 4-H members can do to make the wildlife program more effective." We went to bed early that night so as to be prepared for a big day Thursday.

At 5:30 in the morning we were up and off to the bay for a thirty minute swim. Breakfast at six o'clock. After breakfast all of the boys were called together for a group of talks on the following subjects: "Wildlife Helps in Wildlife Conservation," and a Wildlife tour. Noon is here and our first fish dinner.

Soon after dinner Mr. Barnhart took us down to Mrs. Jack Hagar's home, and she showed us how to prepare the skins of birds so that we might use them in our 4-H Club exhibits and for county and community fairs. At 2:30 we left for the Arkansas game pre-the nature of the place," said Miss Fenimore. "I am not in need of medical attention. All that I want is relaxation and no one to bother me."

"All right," said Sally briskly. "I do have a room that I think you'd like. Would you care to see it?"

Miss Fenimore arose. It was apparent at once that she was the kind of woman who sheds things. She shed now in a heterogeneous shower.

In good order the book, the magazine, the cigarette case, the handbag, and Wolfgang, the dachshund, descended to the porch. Kinks, gallantly, retrieved all but Wolfgang.

"Well," he said to Mr. Harkness, as Sally and Miss Fenimore departed, "there's another one. I hope you don't mind the mixed company around here."

MR. HARKNESS made no reply. He was gazing wistfully after Wolfgang, the dachshund. Kinks, perceiving his trend of thought, respected it with silence. It was obvious that Mr. Harkness was considering Wolfgang as a subject for electrification.

On the following day a major tragedy occurred. Mr. Harkness lost his pliers.

Up to that point the business of installing batteries in the various mounted animal heads had been progressing by leaps and bounds. Now, however, it was suddenly suspended. And the electrical genius mooned about dolefully, searching everywhere, and constantly getting under the feet of Sally and Mrs. Clipstack.

"If that little man asks me if I've seen his pliers just once more," Sally told Kinks, exasperatedly, "I'm going to take him across my knee. He's pestered me to death."

"Mr. Harkness has explained the waves as they came into shore. After the swim we went back to camp and ate supper. Mr. L. L. "What's he making so much fuss about?" said Kinks. "I mislaid my tobacco pouch this morning, but you haven't heard me squawk."

"Et tu, Brute!" said Sally. "It seems to be a day for losing things. Mrs. Clipstack can't find her potato peeler."

They had been down to the river and were now approaching the house across the back lawn.

"How's the Fenimore liking the place?" Kinks asked.

Sally laughed. "She says her nerves are better already. She's gone off in her car, happy as a lark."

KINKS' reply was cut short by the sudden appearance of Mr. Bull Griffin. A look of alarm dominated Mr. Griffin's rosy-rimmed countenance.

"Hey," he said agitatedly, "I've lost me rod."

"Your what?" said Sally. "Me god, me iron."

Sally turned to Kinks. "What on earth," she demanded, "is the man talking about?"

"He's lost his gun," Kinks translated.

"Dat's it," said Bull. "Me gun I leave it in me coat, an' me an Spalding goes fer a walk an' now it's gone."

"Well," began Sally, "you don't need . . ."

She stopped abruptly. A second-story window had opened. The head of Mrs. Clipstack was thrust out.

"Miss Pennington," called Mrs. Clipstack in a portentous voice "can you and Mr. Parker come here a minute?"

"Miss Pennington," called Mrs. Clipstack in a portentous voice "can you and Mr. Parker come here a minute?"

"I don't know what's goin' on in this house," said Mrs. Clipstack. "I was dancin' this mornin' and look what I found!"

Kinks and Sally looked. Huddled together on the bed spring were three spoons of silk, an ash tray, a small china ornament from the living room mantelpiece, Mrs. Clipstack's potato peeler, Kinks' tobacco pouch, Mr. Harkness' pliers, and Bull Griffin's revolver.

Sally put a hand to her head. "What's the woman? A jinx collector?"

Kinks saw light suddenly. "No," he said. "Unless I'm wa off, she's a kleptomaniac."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

Sunday school, 9:45 a. m. Morning worship, 11 a. m. Wednesday, testimonial service, 8 p. m.

Public cordially invited. "Mind" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 21.

The Golden Text is: "Behold, God is mighty, and desiseth not any; he is mighty in strength and wisdom" (Job 36:5).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!" (Romans 11:33).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Divine metaphysics, as revealed to spiritual understanding, shows clearly that all is Mind, and that Mind is God, omnipotence, omnipresence, omniscience,—that is, all power, all presence, all Science. Hence all is in reality the manifestation of Mind" (page 275).

Saturday morning we were taken over to St. Joseph's Island, so we could see the Gulf of Mexico. After arriving on the island, we walked over to the South side to see the Gulf of Mexico and spent two hours in picking up sea shells to bring back home.

We arrived back at camp at noon, and then our final fish dinner. After an hour's rest, we heard more wildlife subjects discussed. We then made a written report of the things we had enjoyed most while attending the camp.

We got up at five o'clock the next morning, had breakfast at five thirty and then loaded up and left for home. We arrived home about five o'clock Sunday afternoon.

BOYS REPORT ON TRIP TO GULF COAST

The story of our trip to the wildlife game conservation camp held at Rockport, Texas, on July 21-23. By Vernon Bennett and Neil Eaves. We received the surprise of our lives when Mr. Barnhart our assistant county agent came out to see us and told us about the wildlife and game conservation camp to be held at Rockport. Our trip to the camp began on Wednesday morning at 6 o'clock and arrived in Rockport at 8 o'clock. We registered with the secretary of the camp and then off to the beach to get a good swim and a mouthful of salty water. This was the first time we had ever been to the coast, and we found that it was a lot of fun trying to ride serve about fifty miles from where we were camped. This was the most interesting things of the camp. We arrived back in camp about six-thirty, ate supper, and then went down to the beach for a boat ride. We watched a picture show after we got back on the subject, "Wildlife." Again we went to bed early that night, and were up the next morning at five o'clock and down to the bay for a good swim. Breakfast at six o'clock, and then the group was off for a morning's fishing. We got a lot of bites but very few fish. We went back to camp about ten o'clock, and went down to the bay with Mr. Callender to do some mullet fishing with a net. Noon is here and another good fish dinner with iced watermelon to top it all with. The afternoon was spent in a one hour rest period, and then two hours in listening to specialist discuss wildlife subjects. We had another good meal at 6 o'clock, and then for an hour of floundering, which was great sport. After a swim we came back to camp and enjoyed recreational games and a picture show for the next two hours.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By Rodney Dutcher NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Every Washington correspondent expects everyone he meets to ask—or tell him—whether President Roosevelt will seek a third term. He expects this because, for some weeks, no one has failed to do so.

Deponent (this writer) sayeth as follows: 1. Roosevelt may have said something about it to Mrs. Roosevelt. The only other person in whom he might have confided, Louis Howe, is dead. Frequently he has indicated he prefers to quit after two terms. If he has discussed a third term with any living person—from the standpoint of running again "under certain circumstances"—that person's lips are sealed.

2. Republicans, anti-Roosevelt Democrats and staunch New Dealers—including F. D. R.'s intimate entourage—believe the President probably will be a third term candidate. This fact is significant and important.

3. Each of those three groups is sure the best strategy is to ballyhoo the likelihood of a Roosevelt candidacy.

4. Republicans talk up third term because they believe this will incite antagonism to Roosevelt.

5. Anti-administration Democrats talk third term in order to solidify intra-party opposition to Roosevelt—or a hand-picked successor—pending the 1940 Democratic national convention.

6. Top-flight New Dealers want everybody to discuss third term, hoping what they call "emotional ballyhoo" will be dissipated by 1940.

The last viewpoint is especially interesting because it's that of Roosevelt's own close buddies. Conversation of this group is interesting.

YOU FONSECA, the baseball champion, that after all the fundamentals mastered in baseball.

He says that these plus natural ability led to stardom. Fonseca, the senior hon's ambassador of good will, asserts there is no potential shortage of major league players. The p is coming back in the colleges and high schools. Next spring versity of Pittsburgh for the first time in 16 years will have base as a major sport. University of Tennessee is restoring it after eight-year layoff. The day of a national high school tournament far off.

No less than 40,000 youngsters were reached through Chi schools last year. They had trysts at 18 playgrounds.

MAJOR league owners are enthusiastic about the school system that is being worked out in Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, San Francisco. They know early instruction makes for better play. "We try to teach the boys the proper batting stride, so they set for slow pitching as well as fast," explains an instructor.

Chicagoans declare that from last year's school they've got a dozen homegrown boys who'll go into professional ball when finish high school.

"HOW," we asked Earl Averill, "do you account for hitting .375 clip this season when, after hitting .378 in 1936, you got to .299 last year?"

Waiting for the Earl of Snohomish to poke his head up through shirt of his uniform, we were prepared for the inevitable answer involving technicalities of stance, grip, and such. But as he shrugged garment down on his shoulders and reached for his shoes, he set up with an unlooked-for, if not downright amazing, reply. Reason so simple.

"THAT'S easy," he said. "It took me all last season to learn because my name was Earl Averill it didn't mean that I my base hits every day. I discovered that I still had to swing bat. So . . ." and he straightened up with a chuckle. . . . "What I'm doing . . . and it works."

Averill, sole remaining member of the famous San Francisco outfield, Averill, Smead Jolley, and Roy Johnson, of 1928, in time, is pacing the Cleveland Indians in their first year, serious bid in 18 years, pacing them at an age, 35, when, for most leaguers, the handwriting is already in the headlines.

BILL KNICKERBOCKER considers Averill the finest hitter that seen since he crashed the American League, and that includes DiMaggio.

Averill's nonchalant swing . . . with the straight left arm . . . absolutely perfect.

Many players wish they had his timing.

ANSWER: Tripe is a part of the stomach of any ruminant animal. LIGHT travels about 186,000 miles per second, or something like six trillion miles per year. . . . and this figure is known as "light year." To reach the outer edge of our present telescope range in 16 years, we would have to travel six trillion miles per second.

NO. 1 THE Pick-Up
A COURTEOUS driver picks up your clothing, transports it quickly to our plant. There it's inspected for possible defects, missing buttons, etc., and also spots that require special attention . . . thereby guarding against "tannin" stains in a later process.

NO. 2 THE Cleaning
YOUR garment is put into our washers together with other similar ones. The special dry solvent with a dry cleaning soap of the highest quality is used. The washer turns gently until the clothes are perfectly clean.

NO. 3 THE Extractor
AFTER coming from the washer, A your garment and its companions are put into the extractor. This whirls the garments around—without straining them—and ejects most of the cleaner by centrifugal force. All garments of like materials are put into this together.

NO. 4 THE Dry-room
UNLESS your garment is a particular kind of wool, silk or synthetic fabric, it's put into a tumbler for further drying and then into the drying room. This room is scientifically warmed to quickly dry your garment without actually heating it.

NO. 5 THE Spotter
WHEN your garment comes from the drying room, it's given another thorough inspection. If there are any spots that the first inspectors missed, the garment is turned over to the "spotter," the most highly skilled employee in our plant. He removes the stains carefully!

NO. 6 THE Finish
FROM the spotter or the drying room, your garment is sent to the finishing department. Here, skilled hand finishers and efficient machines combine to make your garment look like new. The original shape of a suit or dress is carefully retained. The pressing is perfect.

NO. 7 THE Check-up
