ALLRED MAY CALL SPECIAL SESSION SOON

By United Press
AUSTIN, Aug. 23.—Gov. Allred announced today that if the Public Works Administration makes a loan and grant of 45 per cent to construct a $2,600,000 state office building here, he will call a special session of the legislature to raise funds for 55 per cent of the building's cost.

Allred refused to say when the special session might be necessary. The plans for the building have already been drawn. The structure would have 19 stories and would house state courts and departments.

It would occupy a lot just south of the capitol.

FORT WORTH, Aug. 23.—Gov. Allred's plan to build a $2,600,000 state office building in Austin, met a cool reception today from W. Lee O'Daniel, Allred's probable successor.

O'Daniel said that what the people wanted was to save money.

More Farmers Are Included In FSA Loaning Program

Geo. I. Lane, County Supervisor of the Farm Security Administration, announced that his organization will extend its loan program and "accept responsibility for the entire load of rural financing," for those farmers who are unable to obtain adequate financing from other agencies.

The supervisor said that the extension will be both downward and upward, including larger loans to livestock growers and to farm owners who are in difficulties, and also more adequate provision for farmers of very low income.

The announcement was made following the supervisors' return from the annual conference of FSA employees for Texas at College Station, attended by 206 farm and home supervisors for this state and by the clerical staff of the county offices, as well as by state and regional executives and specialists.

The supervisor warned that there will be no resumption of the wholesale grants, non-payable, which were stopped short a year ago. The larger loans to be made to farm owners or to livestock operators will be of service, the supervisor said, for those who are unable to operate effectively because of inadequate financing or who may be threatened with foreclosure.

In the latter case, he said, debts must be adjusted by agreement with creditors and a sound plan worked out to assure that bankruptcy can actually be avoided through the new loan and plan.

Adequate funds are already on hand in Texas to care for this enlarged loan program. Supervisors will begin taking loan applications immediately and checks will be returned to the county office within ten days from the time the regional office receives the application.

Improvement has been made in this respect since the early days of the rural rehabilitation program when the pressure of grants and the lack of established procedure often caused delay of checks beyond the time when the farmers could make effective use of them.

Still another line of financing to be opened this year will be for the benefit of FSA farm boys and girls participating in 4-H Clubs and Future Farmers of America, the supervisor said. Loans will be made through the heads of the families. Increased attention will also be given to loans made for the purchase of machinery and livestock to be used jointly by groups of farmers in the community.

Planet Showing Some of Corrigan Traits Is Report

By United Press
PASADENA, Cal. — Douglas Corrigan has got the planets "going that way" now, according to an announcement from the Carnegie Institution's Mount Wilson observatory here.

A new minor planet, just discovered by Dr. Seth B. Nicholson, noted astronomer at the institution, is declared to be going the "wrong way."

The new planet is believed to be an asteroid quite close to the eighth satellite of Jupiter, and like both the eighth and ninth satellites, it appears to have its compass "set wrong" for it is revolving about Jupiter "backwards."

This, the astronomer explains, means that whereas the first seven satellites of Jupiter revolve about it in the same direction as the earth about the sun, the eighth and ninth as well as the newly discovered "wrong way" planet move in a "retrograde," or opposite direction.

The discovery of the new "wrong way" planet was made by Dr. Nicholson while studying a photographic plate of Jupiter's eighth satellite. The institution's 100-inch telescope was used in getting this photographic record.

Warden Tells of Finding Nests of Quails On Routes

John R. Wood, Jr., of Brownwood, district game warden for the state, stated Tuesday while here that in recent days he has found 85 quail nests on the right-of-way of highways in his area of six counties.

The counties were Brown, Coleman, Eastland, Erath, Comanche and Callahan.

He stated that after his findings are completed he intends to take steps by which perhaps the state highway department at this time of year will not mow the growth on the right-of-way in order to save the quail.

In one instance, said Wood, 24 eggs were incubated, probably by two hens, in one nest one-fourth of a mile north of Rising Star.

O'DANIEL HAS ANOTHER PLEA FOR FAVORITES

By United Press
FORT WORTH, Aug. 23.—W. Lee O'Daniel continued his crusade today in behalf of six candidates he wants in state offices with ridicule for "bandwagon wagers." The chief objectors to his endorsement, he said, were those who became "original O'Daniel supporters" after his nomination for governor.

"Of course there was some objection from the good, honest folks who at first did not understand the proposition," O'Daniel said concerning his endorsements. "But the big noise came from those who were not for us until the votes were counted and then they had jumped aboard the bandwagon and ridden it so hard and fast since the first primary that they had convinced themselves they were original O'Daniel boosters."

A survey in one town, he said, revealed that 2,000 persons claimed to be first primary O'Daniel voters, but only 450 votes were cast for him there.

Trades Days Being Planned for Ranger

Plans for a series of trades days, to be held in Ranger, were formulated at a meeting at the Gholson Hotel, Tuesday night, with a large group present.

Today committees were busily engaged in securing names of merchants who are to participate and other committees were working out other details in connection with the event.

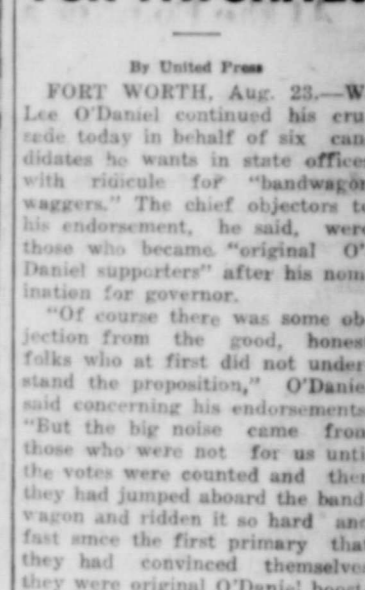

The enthusiasm shown at the meeting indicated that there is a determination to carry on the trades days for some time and for making them as effective as possible.

A report was made by officers of the Retail Merchants association late this afternoon that a circular was being prepared by the Ranger Times announcing the names of all those who are co-operating in the big trades days event that will be held in Ranger Saturday, Sept. 3.

The request has been made that all who intend to come in on the event please phone their request to Mrs. George of the Retail Merchants association because the committee does not wish that any names be left off the list. This is most important, the committee said.

This circular will be printed Thursday, and all names must be in the hand of the printer not later than 6 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Johnny Garrison Made High Record In E.T.S.T.C. Years

Johnny Garrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Garrison of Eastland, Monday night was graduated from East Texas State Teachers college at Commerce where he majored in industrial education.

Garrison, first East Texas football player to be mentioned on the Little All-American, has accepted a position as industrial education teacher and assistant football coach at Whiteoak high school, near Longview.

Garrison was graduated from Eastland high school in the spring of 1935. He was a star football player at Eastland under the coaching of the late S. J. Petty, and played in the all-star school-boy game in his senior year. As a sophomore at ETSTC, he was given honorable mention on the Little All-American and played brilliant football last year. Notable among his athletic achievements last fall was his feat of returning the kickoff in two successive games for touchdowns.

Garrison's scholastic record has been on a par with his football playing. As an industrial education major, he has had some of his handmade furniture exhibited in the Adolphus hotel at Dallas. In the spring of 1937 he was elected president of the athletic council at Commerce and served in the office the past year.

Working as student assistant registrar, Garrison was in school winter and summer since his entrance at ETSTC to earn his B.S. degree. He was one of 20 outstanding students at the college this year.

His mother attended the graduation exercises.

The World's 'Security'— At the Point of a Gun

A sufficient number of young men having died to cool the ardor of both sides, the Japanese and Russians seem to have agreed that they will not go to war—not now, anyway—to decide which nation holds title to that scrubby hillock in Manchuria.

So another war scare blows over, and the world gets one more chance to take a look at the direction in which it is traveling. What it sees can hardly be reassuring, but the immediate danger is lifted and we are all right . . . until the next time.

It isn't especially comfortable, this business of living in a world which is forever teetering on the edge of an abyss. While all of the great powers are spending fantastic sums on armaments to provide "national security," the plain fact is that there is less security in the world now than at any time since the dark ages. From one week to another, no man can be sure that peace is going to continue. Any given 24 hours may bring the catastrophe.

Perhaps the basic reason for this insecurity is the fact that we have the wrong idea of what security really is. Each nation seems to be convinced that it can get security only at the expense of someone else. In line with this idea, it must not maintain great armies and air fleets; it must be self-sufficient economically, it must have access to mines and forests and oil fields and granaries, it must produce within its own borders everything it needs, it must get the better of the rest of the world in all of its commercial deals.

That might be a good idea if it would work; but it won't—not when every great nation has the same idea. What it produces is eternal unrest, unending rivalries, and conflicts of interest which point directly toward war.

There might be a better way to get security. The nations might agree that since war is a civilization-shattering evil, they would at all costs settle their disputes peacefully—by arbitration, by mediation, by the judgment of third parties in international tribunals. They might further agree that they would unite to restrain any nation which resorted to force before all such avenues of settlement had been tried.

That was the procedure which was envisioned in the Kellogg pact, the World Court, and the League Covenant. The world has turned its back on this procedure, scoffing at it as "idealistic," "visionary" and so on.

Perhaps those adjectives are justified. But the present system certainly doesn't seem to be working out very well. In the end, isn't it quite possible that we shall all have to return to some form of the plan that Wilson and Kellogg advocated? With all its faults, that plan at least offered the world a chance to get away from the edge of the precipice.

Case of Defender For Birds State They Save Millions

By United Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—Farmers and city dwellers who grow irritated when they hear the familiar rat-at-tat of a woodpecker on their favorite fruit or shade tree just don't understand woodpeckers.

Dr. J. Logan Bennett, director of the wildlife research unit at the Pennsylvania State College, has found that each hole the woodpecker drills means the bird has located the larva of a destructive wood-boring insect. With their heavy bills, they are able to kill many insects other birds cannot reach.

"Fruit growers believe robins are their enemies because of their appetite for cherries, yet robins consume insects harmful to fruit throughout the year. Only during July and August do they cultivate fruit to any great extent."

"Farmers interested in protecting their crops against insects having large numbers of birds around the farm will do well to leave a swath of small grain in the corner of a field next to protect cover. The grain will provide food for both game and song birds this winter. If left near cover will aid materially in carrying birds through the winter and sure their aid next summer in war against harmful insects."

SERIAL STORY

HAYWIRE HOUSE

BY EDWIN RUTT

COPYRIGHT, 1938
NEA SERVICE, INC.

Monday, Gray days lie ahead for Haywire House when the Little Cheese decides to visit it and rub out Bull Griffin.

CHAPTER XIV

THE Little Cheese, driven by Mr. Red Scala, neared Winstock at about 10 o'clock in the evening. All during the journey the Little Cheese had been regretting that moment of bravado when he had undertaken to rub out Bull Griffin single-handedly. It was so long since he had personally rubbed out a guy that he felt a trifle rusty.

But there was one absolute prerequisite. Before tackling such a formidable personage as Bull Griffin he would simply have to have a drink. In a surly tone he directed Mr. Scala to stop at a roadhouse that now loomed on their right.

It was not the wisest course that he could have pursued. For some time the Little Cheese had been abusing the privilege of the grape. In fact, he had abused it to the point where an underworld physician had issued a dire prophecy. Unless the Little Cheese climbed aboard the wagon in a big way, he would become a candidate for that inquisitive state of being known loosely as the D. T.'s.

Under the stress of the zero hour, however, he forgot the doctor's warning. The roadhouse was snug and slatternly, just the kind of a roadhouse he felt at home in. He had a drink. He had another. He had a third. He bought the bartender a drink. He had one on the house. The result was that by the time he stood in the grounds of the darkened Restatorium the Little Cheese was somewhat polluted.

It was the Little Cheese's boast that, drunk or sober, he could jimmy a window to the queen's taste. He approached the house on unsteady legs and inspected it with slightly glazed eyes. It was as dark as the grave. The Little Cheese selected a likely-looking window that opened on the porch. Taking out his jimmy, he set to work.

And at almost the same moment something unusual occurred within the house. A door on the upper floor opened silently. An apparition in a flowing robe, that might have been Lady Macbeth in her sleep-walking act but minus her candle, issued forth. This presence passed in ghostly fashion down the stairs, went unerringly along a hallway and entered a large bedroom near the kitchen.

THE Little Cheese finished jimmying the window and climbed stealthily into the living room. He felt well satisfied with himself. All he had to do now was to find out where Bull Griffin slept and shoot him in the head. The prospect pleased. With a flashlight in one hand and his automatic in the other, he began mincing across the living room.

Had he taken long, powerful strides all might have been well. But he minced. And when one minces his ankles are close together. In fact, and of a sudden, the Little Cheese's ankles seemed stuck together. Something soft, yet substantial, wedged between them. The Little Cheese stumbled, uttered a guttural imprecation and brought sharply up against a wall. As he struck it, the flashlight was jarred from his fingers.

Cursing volubly and feeling along the wall, his hand came in sudden contact with a wire. He felt along it. The wire ended in a wooden knob which in turn ended in a button. Obviously a light switch. The Little Cheese decided to risk a second illumination to get his bearings. He pressed the button.

A terrible thing happened. Lights went up. But they were not the kind desired by the Little Cheese. Instead a horrible face, the eyes glassy and staring, peered into his. The Little Cheese jumped a foot in the air. Then paralyzed with fear, he glanced over his shoulder. From across the room another face, even more ghastly than the first, glared at him. It was the face that glowed redly over slaving jaws. And then to his horror he discovered another one, wicked, diabolical, the face of a werewolf.

Convulsed with terror, the Little Cheese looked suddenly at the floor. And there at his very feet glared up the most awful face of all, a great, grinning countenance with a long tongue and a row of frightful, glistening teeth. In a flash he understood. His doctor had been right. He had the D. T.'s. He had 'em bad.

Shaking in every limb, the Little Cheese backed toward the window by which he had entered. All thoughts of Bull Griffin fled from his mind. He had to get out of here. He had to scam for his life. He took another backward step and trod on something. A sudden yip rent the stillness.

A moment before Wolfgang, Miss Fenimore's dachshund, had been pursuing an orderly course across the living room. And then suddenly he had got wedged between something. The something had stumbled over him and kicked him en route. Now it had backed up and stepped on his paw. Wolfgang was not used to this sort of thing. His yip was a yip of protest.

A WAVE of red frenzy swept over the brain of the Little Cheese. He lost all sense of direction and plunged madly about, overturning chairs and tables and all that got in his way. Then he found himself going down a kind of hallway, a hallway mercifully devoid of grinning faces. And there was a thin sliver of light coming from under what appeared to be a door.

As the desert traveler races toward the oasis, the Little Cheese raced for that light. His fumbling hands found a knob. He flung the door open and plunged into a room. The next instant an unearthly scream rang through the house.

The room was garishly lighted. By the bed stood a woman in white, a woman who now loosed off a succession of the most terrible shrieks that the Little Cheese had ever heard. And at her feet snakes of all descriptions were pouring out of a box. There were big snakes and little snakes. Green snakes, brown snakes, and black snakes. Mottled snakes, speckled snakes. Hissing snakes and non-hissing snakes. And all of them were pouring out of the box, in a twisting, milling fantasy of reptilian confusion.

For a second the Little Cheese stood rooted to the floor. He knew now, beyond a doubt. He not only had the D. T.'s; he was in the last stages of them. He reeled suddenly, uttered a hoarse, piteous cry, leapt over the tangled snakes and landed on the bed. To rip open the bedclothes was the work of a split second. The Little Cheese covered himself up entirely, even to his head.

And then a great to-do sounded in the upper regions of the house. (To Be Continued)

WASHINGTON! WITH RODNEY BUTCHER

BY RODNEY BUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—Secretary Hull is peeved at Mexico and perplexity adds to his annoyance. Briefly, it's this way: The U. S. says it's fundamental international law that confiscated foreign-owned property should be paid for and has asked arbitration of American claims for land Mexico has taken and an indication of the future Mexican attitude as to payment for expropriated oil wells. Mexico answers there's no obligation in international law for payment but admits obligation under Mexican law and says she will be glad to talk it over. Hull fumes because the U. S. and Mexico have been talking about these claims since 1927 and claimants haven't seen a single peso. The State Department believes that if Mexico gets away with taking American property, other Latin American countries will start grabbing American copper mines in Peru, copper and nitrate in Chile, fruit, utility, railroad and other properties. There's no disposition to invite such an expropriation wave as an answer to the "Good Neighbor" policy. But Germany and Italy, hoping for a big U. S.-Mexico row, already are trying to capitalize the issue in Latin America. President Cardenas continues popular with Mexicans. But conservative army generals may pull a coup d'etat as his economic and political troubles pile up. The State Department, worrying about Nazi-Fascist penetration, doesn't want that, either. A RECENT visitor to Palo Alto was shown 602 telegrams and letters requesting Herivel Hoover to come and speak. Mostly from

NEW YORK—At a time when the combined opposition is weaker than it has been for more than a decade, America courts its finest Davis Cup team since it was represented by the fabulous firm of Tilden and Johnston. France and England kept the trophy for 10 years, and it should be that long before a foreign power again fastens a stronghold on it, even though Don Budge turns professional this fall. The 20-year-old Robert L. Riggs, almost certain to be the No. 2 singles player, rounds out the youngest Davis Cup squad in history, steered by Frank Kovacs and Elwood T. Cooke, and Betsy Grant and the preetial candidate, Sidney B. Wood, Jr. Trained observers agree that no amateur, with the exception of Budge, could have repelled Riggs as he walloped Cooke, 6-1, 6-2, 6-1, to win his second successive leg on the Seabright singles Challenge Bowl. There is not a single weakness in Riggs' armor. In hand, Riggs' forearm is about the best in tennis today. This shot, made with a long follow-through, embodies power, speed, and control. Chicago's transplanted Californian steps into the ball hits it at the top of the rise with much of the action of the Little Bill Johnston of the early '20s. On the full run, Riggs brings off backhand returns straight down the sideline or sharply angled across the forecourt. Bobby does this under pressure to score winners off shots on which most players would be satisfied merely to keep the ball in play. His service, overhead, and volleys function beautifully. Riggs' retrieving is seldom seen. Almost incredible were some of the shots he brought off in the Seabright final as Cooke, the most improved player of the year and virtually assured of a first 10 ranking, attempted to catch his opponent napping with trap shots when Riggs was on the base line. RIGGS was in wonderful touch. His change of pace and length was exceptionally fine. Cooke has proved himself to be a sound player this season. He is one of the more conscientious seekers of perfection. His beautifully-fashioned drives carry sting and length. Few can hope to beat him from backcourt. He eliminated Parker at Seabright. But, while he never stopped trying, Cooke was close to being helpless against Riggs' varied and deadly attack. With the cool, poised, and smiling Riggs around, the American committee will not have to worry about Parker's undeveloped forehead in the Davis Cup challenge round at the Germantown Cricket Club the first week in September. And it wouldn't feel quite as badly about Don Budge joining the money players.

NO fishing for new ideas. Then Friday's dinner will bait the appetite. In Quebec they treat a cod with loving kindness. This recipe comes from the chef of a famous hotel up there.
Baked Stuffed Cod
(Serves 4 to 6)
STUFFING: 1 medium-sized cod, 2 chopped celery sticks, 2 tablespoons butter, 1/2 cup milk, 1 onion, chopped, 1 teaspoon parsley, chopped, 2 cups bread crumbs, 2 eggs, salt and pepper.
Wipe cod with a towel. Before serving the aperture, fill with stuff which is made as follows: Melt butter in small saucepan and add chopped onion and celery. Fry very slowly without browning and add chopped parsley, bread crumbs, salt and pepper and let cook for 5 minutes. Remove from fire and add 2 eggs and mix well, then let cool a little.
The wax paper around the neck part of the fish to prevent stuffing from falling out. Lay in pan on top of three strips of bacon, bake in moderate oven (350 degrees). Baste frequently with melted butter and 1-2 cup hot water. Cook for one hour. Serve an onion cream sauce well seasoned, separately.
Bermuda has its own type of deep sea lobster, and a special recipe. But it works well enough with our northern varieties.

AUSTIN, Texas—The twentieth annual convention of the American Legion, department of Texas, will be held here Aug. 29 and 30. Preceding the convention the "Forty and Eight" will hold their annual meeting and "wreck" on Aug. 27. During the convention the Sons of the American Legion will camp at Camp Mabry, former National Guard training grounds at the edge of Austin. The convention proper will open Monday, Aug. 29, with the annual legion parade along Congress Avenue, which is sufficiently wide for movements of columns in both directions. The annual competition among the drum and bugle corps will be held at the University of Texas stadium or at House Park, municipal athletic field. Besides the competition of those organizations, there will be special prizes for high school bands and for junior drum and bugle corps. The business session will be

Local Woman and Daughter Return from Trip

Mrs. M. Charette and daughter, Miss Joe, returned Sunday evening from a two weeks' trip to California and other interesting points. They left Saturday, Aug. 13, going by Phoenix, Arizona.

The first place of interest visited was the Coolidge dam over the Gila river. They continued their trip, stopping one day and night at Long Beach, at which place the Horseshoe pier, built four or five years ago, and the skyscraper buildings which have been built since their visit there seven years ago were things which amazed them most.

They next went to Hollywood and drove through the mountains surrounding Mount Wilson observatory, which is on the highest mountain peak near Los Angeles. Santa Monica was visited one day and night, and from here they went to Santa Barbara, which place is of especial interest to Mrs. Charette, whose husband had the first scenic studio in Los Angeles thirty years ago. She visited there much of the time, retaining her home in Dallas, Texas, and relates that the country surrounding the Franciscan Monastery at that time was covered with olive orchards, which were dying out when visited by her later, and now the ground where they formerly were has been sold and covered with residences all around the monastery, which was three miles out of town then. At that time Santa Barbara was a winter resort for the richest people of the United States. While there they visited the monastery and heard a lecture, and were escorted through the grounds, which means is the source of livelihood now of the monks.

After leaving Santa Barbara, they went to Santa Cruz and visited the Redwood forests east of there. Next stop was San Francisco, where they went to Chinatown, viewed the Golden Gate bridge and drove over the new bridge to Oakland. They came back to Los Angeles and visited the end of Main street inhabited by the Indian and Mexican residents, which is supposed to be one of the most interesting parts of the city.

Leaving California, they went through the desert by the way of Needles to Grand Canyon, from there through the central part of New Mexico, going through Gallup and Roswell to Carlsbad. They drove out to the caverns, but on account of Mrs. Charette's ill health they didn't go through.

They came home by the way of Pecos, Texas.

Mrs. Charette displayed souvenirs brought home from this trip and baskets, blankets and pottery bought when she visited there thirty years ago.

FOOTBALL practice is starting all over the Oil Belt—both sections of it—and while there is more local interest in the eastern division, a weather eye will be kept on the western section too.

RUMORS, so far unconfirmed, have it that Cisco is the team in the eastern division to watch this year, with Breckenridge considered as a threat. This information comes from Breckenridge, and may be discounted somewhat, as no team likes to be considered the favorite, and the Buckaroo braintrusters may be trying to throw the jinx to some other team.

THE BULLDOGS, or at least 22 of them, worked out Monday afternoon for the first time and are to have double-header practices every day for the

Outdoor Revival of Church of Christ Is Drawing Crowds

The outdoor revival of the Church of Christ continues with capacity crowds. The loud speaker system together with the splendid congregational singing makes these services very attractive.

Evangelist F. B. Shepherd of Bryan, who is doing the preaching, spoke last night on the subject of "Believing a Lie." Basing his remarks upon second Thesalonians chapter two he emphasized the fact that in the infinite wisdom and knowledge of God man is left entirely a free agent to believe or disbelieve what, and as he chooses. He is privileged to obey or disobey God as he chooses, and in what he chooses.

The speaker also argued that because one is conscientious in anything it doesn't prove he is right, and went on to show that genuine sincerity itself involves a love of truth, hence if one is really sincere he is ever seeking to learn and to know the truth especially upon the subject of what God will have him to do to be saved. The case of the young prophet of first Kings was discussed at some length as a Bible illustration of the consequences of believing a lie, and the speaker affirmed that the place whence one comes, or the company he keeps, never insures the integrity of his teachings. If the teaching does not originate with God it is not truth.

Some things that men believe were then referred to as believing a falsehood. The popular idea that living up to the standards of a lodge would insure men a place in heaven, was referred to as false since God did not establish the lodge nor did Christ die for it or place salvation in it. The idea that keeping the Ten Commandments would insure one salvation was also argued as false and the affirmation made that God never intended the Ten Commandments, nor even the entire system of the Mosaic law, as a means unto men's salvation.

The Mosaic economy, the speaker argued, was for the purpose of preparing a nation to recognize the Christ at his coming and not for the purpose of salvation. Salvation is in Christ and in and through him alone, hence if one is not in Christ he is not a citizen of the Kingdom of Christ, not a Child of God, and so not an heir to the everlasting bliss of Heaven. Salvation depending not merely upon the moral life of a man but upon the relationship he sustains to Jesus Christ and God. "Prove All Things" was the subject announced for tonight. Comfortable seats, good lighting, and no collections are features of this series of revival services.

Hanlon Wins Close Game In the 10th

Hanlon had a close call Monday night when they defeated Killingsworth's 6 to 5 in a 10-inning game.

Killingsworth led in the ninth by a one-run margin and it appeared they had the game sewed up, when a long hit fly was dropped in the outfield, letting in run that tied the game at three-all.

In the 10th Hanlon scored three runs and Killingsworth made another serious threat by scoring two runs.
