A TRANSPORT PLANE IS SHOT DOWN BY JAPS

HONGKONG, China, Aug. 24.—A Chinese passenger plane, piloted by an American, was shot down near Canton today. The Chinese announced, officially, that the attacking planes were Japanese, and of the plane's 14 passengers and crew of three, 13 were dead or missing. The official statement said five Japanese planes converged on the passenger plane, firing machine guns. It plunged into the river, where it was machine gunned again. The American pilot, H. L. Wood of Winfield, Kas., was unharmed. The plane was operated by the Chinese National Aviation Company, which is 45 per cent American owned. Its 14 passengers were Chinese. Most of them were bankers.

Whether Eastland County to Obtain Road Funds Puzzle

Whether Eastland and other Texas counties will share a $9,600,000 cash dividend to ease up their taxes will be decided late this or early next week at Austin. When State Highway Engineer Julian Montgomery returns to Austin, the board for county and district road bond indebtedness, of which Eastland is a member, will meet. The board has before it the fact of a $10,000,000 surplus in the fund, a large volume of part road bond maturities that were not met, and a ruling of Attorney General William McCraw's department that it is possible to absorb the back bonds out of the surplus, so far as it will go. Counties, led by officials at Dallas and elsewhere, have sought now for a year to get the huge surplus split up and paid over to the counties that have outstanding road bonds whose proceeds went into the highway system. At last, the issue is reaching the board at its early meeting. The board is now meeting 100 per cent of the maturities of the assumed local bonds; but it started on a 50 per cent basis, and paid only 75 per cent for a considerable time.

Commander Clark Will Be Honored

Friends Reported in Marital Mixup

"Who's Who?" might be a good title for the comedy of errors reported in Norwich, N. Y., when it was alleged that Eleanor Kenyon, 18, at top, gave a marriage license which had been issued to her and one Gerald G. Demond, to her friend, Marguerite Verreau, 18, below. Miss Verreau is said then to have married Burton Livermore under Miss Kenyon's name and license. Another complication reported that Miss Kenyon pretended she was Miss Verreau and signed as a witness to the wedding. Demond, meanwhile, was being congratulated on his "marriage."

Absentee Voting Total Hits 221 by Deadline Mark

Over 200 absentee votes in the second primary Saturday were cast up to midnight Tuesday, the deadline, it was reported Wednesday at the office of County Clerk R. V. Galloway. Deputies stated that 221 votes had been accounted for but the total might increase because several unopened envelopes might contain absentee ballots mailed before the deadline. The number of absentee votes, it was generally agreed, was more than were anticipated.

SPANISH WAR CRISIS STILL GRIPS EUROPE

Spain's Civil War came dangerously close, today, to bursting the bonds by which Europe sought to isolate it in Spain. A month of fierce fighting on the Ebro River front has sharply changed the one-sided military picture, which insurgent General Franco's armies dominate. Loyalist troops have thrown back the rebel mass attack. Today government airplanes joined in the fighting. Whatever chance there might have been of making non-intervention by other countries a reality, exploded this week when Mussolini frankly told the British he was sending reinforcements to Franco's army. In China the Chinese reported that poison gas was used by the Japanese in a preliminary attack toward Hankow. Two Chinese regiments were wiped out by the gas, dispatches said.

Capt. Hawk's Broke Elementary Rule And Caused Crash

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Capt. Frank Hawk, one of the greatest pilots this country ever produced, lost his life because he violated an elementary rule of flying, it was said today. Flying a small biplane Hawk took off in a cross wind. The plane failed to gain altitude and tangled in electric wires. Hawk's passenger, J. Hazard Campbell, wealthy Buffalo sportsman, was thrown clear. Hawk died three hours later and Campbell five hours later.

SHORT SEEKS RELEASE FROM COUNTY JAIL

A hearing on a habeas corpus action brought by T. Z. Short, charged with a statutory offense, seeking release from county jail, will be held at 9 a. m., Thursday, in 88th district court. The action was brought by Milton Lawrence, attorney for Short, who claimed his client was being held illegally in the county jail. Short was charged Saturday in the court of Justice of Peace E. E. Wood in a complaint filed by Mrs. Short, who claimed her husband violated his 10-year-old stepdaughter. Following an examining trial on Monday afternoon at Eastland, Short was remanded to jail to await the action of the grand jury which meets Sept. 5. Short was eliminated from the Eastland-Olden precinct race July 23.

Allred Says State Office Building Is Not to Be Burden

AUSTIN, Aug. 24.—Gov. Allred today refuted the charge that construction of a combined office and court building would be costly to Texas taxpayers. "The state is now paying $72,169 a year in rents here," Allred said. "By getting 45 per cent of the $2,600,000 donated to us by PWA, we could use the money we now pay for rent to pay the other 55 per cent."

As a substitute for gardening work, county 4-H girls in 1939 will conduct demonstrations with poultry, it was announced Wednesday by Miss Mabel Caldwell, county home demonstration agent. Plans for the initiation of poultry work were given this week to Miss Caldwell and Miss Clara Brown, Callahan county home demonstration agent, and Geo. The airview above shows the giant cloud of smoke arising from the fire. Five hundred men, including C. C. boys and volunteers, battled the blaze. Only a favorable wind saved the nearby town of Tollar. Persons on the Capitol dome in Denver could see and smell the smoke.

NYA Youths Doing Good Work Around Schools of Ranger

School board members and school officials were today enthused over the work that has been done around Ranger schools by NYA youths, and more work of a similar nature is being planned. The workers have added 70 truckloads of soil to the Ranger football field, filling up small holes, in addition to the work around the Hodges Oak Park school. At the ward school, all the window frames have been given two coats of paint, the entire school grounds have been chatted and drainage work has about been completed. The retainer wall, at the east side of the school grounds, has been rebuilt and dirt fills have been thrown up to turn the water into drainage ditches. A ditch on the south side of the school grounds has been started, which will carry water from the street and school grounds around the softball field, instead of letting it drain across the school grounds and under the football stadium. Similar drainage work has been done around the west stands of the football stadium, which is expected to prevent soil erosion and washing up of the athletic track. Painting and groundwork will be done around the high school building soon, it was reported today.

ORDER PLACED ON LIGHTS FOR BULLDOG FIELD

A. N. Larson, Ranger school trustee and member of the board's buildings and grounds committee, announced today that lights, fixtures and equipment for lighting Bulldog stadium in Ranger had been ordered today. The same type of fixture as is used in lighting the softball field has been ordered, Larson stated, as inquiries over the country showed that this was the most efficient type of lighting fixture for fields of all kinds. The 17 lights on the softball field will be transferred to the football field for the season and 23 additional lights will be installed, making a total of 49 lights with a capacity of 60,000 watts. Equipment necessary for lighting the field will be shipped immediately from either Fort Worth or Dallas, Larson stated, while it may be necessary to secure the reflectors from the factory. Delivery will be made on the lights not later than Sept. 1 or Sept. 2, however, allowing plenty of time for their installation before the first game of the season, Sept. 16. The Texas Electric Service company, which will serve the field with electricity, will begin erection of poles outside the stadium as soon as a crew can be put on the job. Wiring to the field, switches, transformers and other equipment will be installed and everything be put in readiness for lighting the field soon after the remainder of the equipment arrives. Plans have been worked out whereby the two sides can be lighted without the necessity of running light wires across the playing field, it was stated. With work due to start next week on installing seats on the east stands in the stadium, the entire project will be completed before the football season opens this year, it was said today.

O'Daniel Says No "Discriminatory" Oil Tax Needed

FORT WORTH, Aug. 24.—W. Lee O'Daniel promised oil companies today that there would be no "discriminatory" tax on them to pay old age assistance and took a verbal slap at one of his own advisers, Carr Collins of Dallas. The democratic nominee for governor was asked whether he advocated a heavier oil tax to pay pensions or would seek revenue from several sources. "I think the citizens want us to be fair," he said. "They don't want to impose the tax on any one industry." O'Daniel rebuked Collins for a statement yesterday that Baptist Student Union delegates that O'Daniel would "take the right stand in regard to horse race betting and his professed "open mind" on the subject was not to be construed as sympathy for betting. "I'm not going to be governor for myself alone, or Carr Collins alone, but for the whole people," O'Daniel said. Elliott Roosevelt, president of the 25-station Texas State Network, Inc., has announced that O'Daniel would speak over the network each Sunday afternoon beginning Sept. 18. The broadcast will be made from Fort Worth until January, then he will speak from Austin.

PRISON GUARDS ARRESTED IN FOUR DEATHS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.—Two Philadelphia County Prison guards were arrested on charges of homicide in connection with the "roasting alive" of four convicts who led a hunger strike. The guards were taken to the city hall for arraignment. Their arrest followed charges by a coroner that the four prisoners died from an apparent steam scalding which probably would have killed 19 other convicts, had they been left in the intense heat an hour longer. The naked bodies of the four convicts were turned over to relatives so disfigured that the relatives said they could scarcely recognize them. The coroner after inspecting the prison described it as "worse than the black hole of Calcutta." Over 600 of the prison's 1,400 inmates began a hunger strike last Wednesday. The strike ended Sunday night.

Radio Monopoly Charged by Judge Of Harris County

HOUSTON, Aug. 24.—County Judge Roy Hofbein asked the Federal Communications Commission today for "immediate investigation" of three radio stations here, which, he said, were owned by RFC chairman Jesse Jones. The 25-year-old county judge charged that a monopoly existed in Houston radio stations controlled by Jones. He demanded the inquiry "so we may be guaranteed freedom of speech." Hofbein's charge set out that attorneys for two stations deleted parts of a speech he broadcast over those stations, in which he attacked the business policies of J. Jones.

The Parent's Job Gets Passed Along

A street railway company in a big middle western city recently hired one of those question-and-answer concerns to find out what ideas the citizens had about improvements in the street car service.

It got a lot of suggestions, some of them useful and some of them rather otherwise. The most interesting part of the whole survey, though, was the fact that a great many citizens asked if the public schools couldn't "teach children that street cars are no place for horseplay and rowdism."

That, of course, was off the railway company's beat; and when you stop to think about it, it is pretty well off the school ma'am's beat, too. Yet we have gone so far in the matter of transferring the parents' job to the teacher that a pretty large section of the general public saw nothing wrong with this suggestion.

Probably the schools will do it. They have taken on all kinds of jobs that used to be done in the home; one more, probably, won't hurt them. But the whole business does shed a revealing light on the sad decline of the Great American Parent.

Children ought to be taught that street cars are no place for horseplay and rowdism: granted. But who ought to do the teaching? Is the average parent completely resigned to the idea that his service to his child ends when he has provided food, clothing and shelter? Doesn't he admit any responsibility for his youngster's behavior any more?

Apparently not. For the sad truth seems to be that most fathers and mothers scamp their jobs these days. Raising a child is a difficult process, the complexities whereof have doubtless accounted for more gray hairs than all other causes put together. It is much easier to shove responsibilities off on the schoolma'am.

So we have got ourselves into a situation where the simplest matters of personal deportment are casually referred to the public school system.

Does little Johnny need to be instructed in the importance of keeping his teeth clean? Is Sister Susie lax in the matter of saying "Thank you" for favors received? Are the two of them inclined to be pert and snippy to their elders?

Then jack up the school board, and see to it that these matters are taken care of; father is too busy to be bothered, and mother has other matters on her mind.

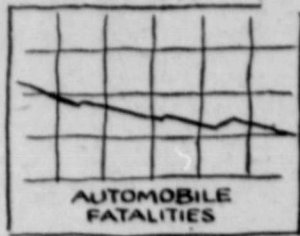

That's the theory we seem to be operating on nowadays. Operating on it, we have the unmitigated crust to bewail the fact that children don't seem to respect their parents as much as they used to. Why in thunder should they?

Rambling With The Rambler

BY WAYNE WALLACE

The future of America, in fact of the entire world, lies in the air. Since the Wright Bros. first flight in 1903, man has accomplished more in the air than the birds have since the dawn of creation. Ships can now fly higher, stay up longer and move faster than any other thing that traverses the air. Like any other new invention, aviation was scoffed at freely during its infancy but the men who pionered it had vision and they never gave up. The result of their foresight has been prodigious. Today we have flying hotels bringing the inhabitants of the world closer together. They are immense in size; yet streamlined and compact to the final degree.

From the very beginning aviation was faced with the problem of building airplanes in such a manner that they would suffer from air resistance as little as possible, and this despite the fact that the air offers less resistance, normally speaking, than does land or water. Ships in the air had to be on the move if they remained aloft. Thus it was necessary to construct them strong enough to carry a heavy load; yet offer as little space for wind resistance as possible. Aviation, through necessity, became the leading exponent of modern streamlining.

No other feats attempted by man have brought to him the dangers that have been his lot since he learned to fly. Yet the result of this has been the production of a race of heroes. When man took to the air he left his native element and he had to learn to do things in a new and strange manner. If he failed to cope with the situation he found death riding by his side. But there were others to carry on and profit from the mistakes of those who went before them. In time, science took notice and the danger of experimentation was greatly reduced though not done away with completely. The art of flying has progressed rapidly but it still has a long way to go before it is perfected.

AN APPEAL TO MY FRIENDS:

As the campaign draws to a close I want to appeal to my friends over the district to help me over the last few days.

I have spent all the money I was able to save while working my way through college. I promised you that if you sent me to Austin I would pound obligations to no one, therefore I HAVE NOT and WILL NOT accept a cent as contribution to my campaign fund from anyone. I cannot hire campaign workers to go throughout the district and will have to depend on my friends for what I have.

I have run a clean race—I have made no wild promises, nor have I pledged myself to work to the interest of any group or individual, which might or might not be to the best interests of all the people. If you elect me I will go to Austin with clean hands and will be really and truly a representative of the people.

I will greatly appreciate anything you can do for me during the last few days.

Veteran Editor Takes a Holiday

For many years one of the country's outstanding newspapermen, O. K. Bovard has turned to travel after his surprise resignation as managing editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch over differences of opinion with the paper's publishers. Bovard is pictured as he sailed from New York for Europe aboard the Aquitania.

Aviation has abounded in adventure. From a twenty thousand foot ceiling men of steel nerve and grim determination have plunged airplanes earthward just to provide theories of others correct. Many of them have died amid the thundering roar of a blasting motor, whistling air and sickening crash but through their death they have opened up doors undreamed of by primitive man. Others have lost in blinding storms, ice coated wings at one time meant disaster, faulty instruments caused many to lose their way, but one by one these faults are being corrected and with each step man arrives a little closer to the goal dreamed of by the pioneers of flying.

As I have said before, Aviation has produced a race of heroes. Many of them have met untimely ends but their unconquerable courage will always be an example to the rest of us. Some of them are still alive and are still working in the interest of making aviation safer for humanity. Her latest hero, of course, is 31 year old "Mistake" Corrigan, the young man who, with a twinkle in his eye, told the world an incorrectly set compass caused him to span the Atlantic Ocean instead of flying to California where he presumably intended to go. It is little wonder that the courage of this man captured the world. With an old plane that had seen better days he literally flew into the hearts of men. What though his plane was not equipped with all the latest instruments, what of the fact he had not permit to fly the ocean or even a pass-port, he clearly demonstrated to the world that all heroes are not of the past, that a man with determination can accomplish wonders. And he's the type of man that belongs to aviation. It is men such as he, Lindbergh and the rest that make it easy to predict a future for flying.

But while there are many heroes there are also many who cannot be classified as such. They are ones who are using airplanes for the purpose of exterminating the human race. They are the ones who fly above helpless people and drop bombs down upon them. Such men must be contended with in every phase of life. They are the ones who strive to undo all the good that their fellow men endeavor to accomplish. They would make of aviation a means of serving their own selfish purpose and, even if in so doing they destroy civilization or at least set it back a hundred years, it is of little interest to them. Just so long as their own selfish ends are successful they are satisfied.

However, it may be that aviation will outsmart them. It will make stranger into friend. Perhaps it will even show man the folly of war and that after all, all men are human. At least let us hope that such will be the result.

Odds and ends: In 71,799 years, a Florida professor says, the earth will freeze to a solid ball, quite a weather predictor I would say . . . These wars that have no beginning, apparently have no end . . . Many people pass out advice that they themselves would do well to follow . . . Unfamiliar faces are often strange . . . Dieting seems to be a losing proposition, while sunbathing is just a bare exposure . . . Politicians are always on the run; if they are not running for something they usually are running from something . . . Whaling a boy can hardly be called a fishing game . . . Endeavoring to produce something brainier than the mule should prove a disappointment as anything smarter than a mule should have too much sense to work like a mule.

Only four sizes of eggs—large, medium, pullet, and peewee—are recognized by a new Massachusetts law. Of course there are smaller sizes, but you can hardly recognize them.

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

By Bill Mayes

TWO compliments yesterday about the first football column of the season . . . one from the proofreader because it was so neatly typed . . . and the other from a football fan who said it made him realize that the football season was nearing. Such flattery! The column was started with the realization that there was very little, if anything, in a football way about which to write, but, as the football fan said, the season is approaching and it is time to do something about it.

COACH Bill Tipton has a system about these early practices that puts a lot of vim into the players and makes them work the stiffness out of sore muscles without the players realizing that they are doing so much to get into shape. He puts nearly everything on a contest basis.

Maybe the earlier hours of the practice sessions are more or less routine drudgery, but from about 5 o'clock until he releases them things are different. Yesterday he pulled that relay business with several variations. First the race over a 100-yard course, with the squad divided into two teams and competing with each other, every man running one lap. After a breathing spell a shorter relay was run, every player doing the "duck walk" and carrying the ball to the man making the next leg of the relay. Then a relay on all fours—not crawling, but on hands and feet. This, no doubt, develops leg muscles, so necessary in football. And since each is a contest there is lots and lots of rooting from the squad members who have already run their laps or who are awaiting their turns.

GETTING into shape for the season is quite a task, both for the coach and the players. So far, the men are not in such excellent condition, as each short session leaves them puffing and blowing like a switch engine pushing a string of boxcars. But there are 17 days of actual practice ahead before the first game on Sept. 16, not counting Saturdays. And Tipton has stated that two sessions a day are in store for a part of the time. Getting into condition, though, is not a problem in Ranger alone. Every town has the same football problem to present its coach when the season starts and the coach who can do the best job gets the jump on the others.

SO far there has been no one to express the opinion that Tipton is not the man for the job here. In fact, everyone who has anything to say about him as a coach is already convinced. Now, if he can produce a winning team it will make it even more unanimous, because winning football games is what the fans, and the coach, want. And everyone in Ranger is expecting a better season than last year, or for the last three years, and every game won will be another step toward the goal of every team—a good season.

SERIAL STORY

HAYWIRE HOUSE

BY EDWIN RUTT

Copyright, 1938 NEA Service, Inc.

Yesterday, The Little Cheese comes to the Haywire House...

CHAPTER XV

MISS CLARA FENIMORE was a born snooper. And since coming to the Pennington-Parker Restorium she had successfully snooped in the rooms of everyone except the Great Pierre...

The reason for this was that the Great Pierre spent almost all his time in his room. He had come to this place to rest and, with true French practicality, he was doing what he had paid to do.

This state of affairs had driven Miss Fenimore insane with curiosity. On several occasions she had crept through Pierre's half-open door and glimpsed a heterogeneous collection of trunks, bags, and bundles...

Accordingly, when convinced that the household slept, she slipped downstairs. And Wolfgang, the dachshund, had slipped with her, to the ultimate confusion of the Little Cheese.

The first of the Great Pierre's cases that Miss Fenimore opened proved disappointing. It contained a number of gadgets whose purpose she did not understand. But, casting about, she found a long, wooden box with perforations all over it. It interested her immediately. She unfastened the catch. The next instant Miss Fenimore recoiled in horror and uttered the shriek and shrieks. And just as she did so a wild man with a gun in his hand hurtled through the door, leapt over a cascade of snakes that poured from the box and covered himself up with the bedclothes.

It was all very puzzling to Miss Fenimore. But she had no time to consider. Too many snakes were feasting on the floor at her feet.

Passed a moment in which Miss Clara Fenimore made a monkey out of the most nimble-throated coloratura soprano that ever lived. Then Kinks Parker rushed into the room. He was closely followed by Sally Pennington, in bare feet. Bull Griffin, a gun in either hand, placed third. Behind him, similarly armed, came Mr. Spaldini, just out of the money. Mr. and Mrs. Harkness were to the ruck simply also-rans.

The Little Cheese

larily armed, came Mr. Spaldini, just out of the money. Mr. and Mrs. Harkness were to the ruck simply also-rans. Kinks took the floor. "What the devil's going on?" he demanded.

Miss Fenimore pointed shakily under the bed. "S-s-snakes," she quavered.

"Yes, I know," said Kinks. "They're probably harmless. Pierre uses them in his act, I guess."

"I must have been sleep-walking," panted Miss Fenimore guiltily. "And all at once I came to in here with a box of s-s-snakes."

Sally and Kinks exchanged glances. Then, suddenly, Bull Griffin stepped past Kinks and stripped the covers from the bed.

THE movement brought to light a pitiful object. The Little Cheese, white as a ghost, lay on his back. One hand covered his eyes. His face was convulsed with terror. And the nerveless fingers of his other hand still held his gun. His lips were working loosely, but he uttered no sound.

"Well, Elbridge," said Bull Griffin, "so you wuz gonna git me, wuz you?" "B-Bull," he stuttered weakly, "I ain't myself. You wouldn't shoot a sick man, would you, Bull?" "Cheese," said Bull darkly, "you bin astin' fer it." He waved his gun. "Just give me room, indece an' gents. Elbridge here is gonna git da works."

"Fer gossakes, Bull, take it easy," pleaded the Little Cheese. "Wuzn't we pals onc? T'ink when we wuz big shots in da old Bushwick Avenue gang. Remember all dem clambakes we used to go to. Wid Mary an' Moitie. An' now we're in da same racket, Bull."

Da same racket. An' another ting! I gotta wife an' five kids. You didn't ought to shoot a family man, Bull!"

MR. GRIFFIN was a man of sentiment. He blinked now and his gun wavered. The Little Cheese saw that he was making progress.

"I couldn't leave a little Maybelle," he groaned in anguish. "Wot would she do wifout her paw? An' Jake! You'd ought to see Jake, Bull. Da cutest little devil on da block. Chucked a dead fish at a taxicab las' week, he did."

Bull Griffin was touched. The corners of his mouth twitched.

"Cheese," said Bull, "seen you got a wife an' five kids, I'm gonna leave you go dis time. But keep outa da Bronx. Or else."

"I will," promised the Little Cheese eagerly. "Ionest to Gawd, I will. You're a white guy, Bull. You an' yer whole family is white. You."

At this point Sally interposed. "Listen," she said, "we're going to leave you two to sob it out in each other's arms. But—she extended a stern finger at the Little Cheese—"if you're not out of this house by morning, Mr.—Mr. Elbridge it will cost you $6. That's our usual rate."

WITH the exception of the representatives from gandom, the company filed out. And as they went they heard the dulcet voice of Bull Griffin.

"Geez," Mr. Griffin was saying, "you should of seen yerself in da bed, Elbridge. You wuz da funniest 'ting sein'. I like to died laffin. Haw, haw!"

"Haw, haw," echoed the Little Cheese, palely.

"What about the snakes?" Kinks ask, as he followed Sally up the stairs.

"If they're harmless," said Sally, "they can stay where they are till morning for all of me. Pierre can collect them, when he gets back."

"Don't ring up impossibilities at this hour, my dear," said Sally. "Good night."

"Gosh," said Kinks, "wouldn't it be some ting if a sane, sensible person sh'ed up here sometime? One, just one."

Four-Year-Old Sets A Fishing Record

CLARENDON, Tex. Aug. Give Billy Killough, age 4, the prize for one of the best fishing performances of the year. Billy, ordered not to go far from home, had some explaining to do when he returned, lugging a string of seven catfish. But he hadn't been near a pond, he said, and the only reason he didn't have more fish was because he didn't want to carry them. His mother, skeptical, accompanied him to a dry gully. There under a footbridge, was a little pool of water and in it were two more catfish. Where they came from Billy didn't know, but grownups figured they must have been washed into the gully from some distant pond during a heavy rain.

WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Big news: The Nebraska senators have agreed on something! Senator George W. Norris, veteran progressive leader, has publicly urged President Roosevelt to appoint Felix Frankfurter of Harvard Law School to the Supreme Court vacancy created by the death of Justice Cardozo.

But, predicts Burke, Roosevelt won't appoint Frankfurter because the latter was not in favor of F. D. R.'s Supreme Court plan. Burke is likely to be wrong on both counts. Frankfurter now has an inside track on the Court vacancy.

If his friends are to be believed, Frankfurter didn't publicly support the Court plan because his friend and mentor Justice Louis D. Brandeis begged him not to. Brandeis was so shocked by the plan that his younger disciple, foremost exponent of the Brandeis philosophy, heeded his plea. But the army of young Frankfurter lawyers in Washington, led by the professor's closest associates, Tom Corcoran and Ben Cohen, battled for the plan.

Capacity Crowd Hears Evangelist At Revival Here

"Old Time Preaching" was announced as the subject of Evangelist P. B. Shepherd tonight in the outdoor revival of the Church of Christ.

Another capacity crowd heard the evangelist last night as he spoke on "Can We Understand the Bible Alike." Mr. Shepherd placed considerable emphasis upon the thought that since God has seen fit to speak to men throughout many ages and thousands of years, and has given men the Bible, which is the word of God, surely God meant what He said and said what He meant. If He did not, then why didn't He?

Attention was given to the claim of some to be inspired interpreters of the Bible who contradict each other in what they claim are their inspired interpretations. It was argued that in the matter of the understanding of the Bible if the words are properly understood, then the ideas are clearly perceived, and if all understand the proper meaning of the words all understand and perceive the ideas therein expressed alike; if not then it is prima facie that there is misunderstanding somewhere.

The speaker further urged that there is not a single matter of teaching or practice about which the religious world is divided that can be read in the Bible. Everything that today is responsible for the divided condition of the religious world is something upon which the Bible is silent. The trouble being not over matters of interpretation but questions of authority.

"Shall we obey Christ and Him alone, or shall we follow men and their changes of, additions to, or substitutions for, the New Testament?" he asked.

The speaker cited as an example of this argument that the scholarship of the religious world is a unit on what the original meaning and mode of baptism was, and how Christ Himself did and what His Apostles practiced; but the division now is over what may be substituted for the original way.

One was baptized at the close of the service. The meeting is scheduled to continue through Sunday night.

Gasoline Is Free If You Purchase A Good Used Car

What Do You Think Now, is an advertisement heading being run in today's Ranger Times by Chas. Moore, Hudson-Terraplane dealer of Ranger.

Moore is offering 100 gallons of gasoline with each used car bought the remainder of August.

The cars can be seen at his place of business on Pine street. Moore is enthusiastic over the prospects for automobile sales in the fall and said he wanted to sell five or six used cars to make room for new models that will be sent him later in the automobile season.

Each of the used cars offered in today's advertisement is in excellent mechanical condition, rubber is in fine shape and the cars are the best used cars I have ever offered said Moore.
