Nationalism Is Not the Creation of Dictators

It is not surprising that the dictator states of Europe gave a cold reception to Secretary Hull's recent appeal for worldwide peace. It would be a profound mistake, however, to assume that what he had to say was addressed solely to them, or that the rest of the world is solidly in agreement with his remarks.

For the secretary of state was really reading a lecture to people of all nations, his own included; and the real target of his attack was not so much the current resort to armed force as the underlying attitude which makes that resort to force seem advisable.

For what Mr. Hull was driving at was the economic nationalism which has absorbed all of the great nations since the war; the idea, popular almost everywhere, that one people can prosper only at the expense of someone else, and that since there are not enough good things to go around it behooves each nation to get what it can while the getting is good.

Before the war, international trade flowed fairly freely. There was a steady interchange of goods which benefited both sides.

After the war, however, there came a change. Trade barriers went up and up. People began to feel that if they bought (no matter how cheaply) from outside their own country anything which they could possibly produce (no matter how expensively) inside their own country, they were somehow being gyped. And finally, as Mr. Hull says:

"As trade barriers mounted on every side, as the movement toward economic nationalism gained momentum, it became only too clear that either the excessive trade barriers must be reduced or the pressures of nations to gain access to needed raw materials and to equally necessary foreign markets by conquest of additional territory and tactics of the mailed fist would become intensified."

Which means, very simply, that the world put a strait-jacket on itself through this mad quest for national self-sufficiency, and that the war pressures now evident are merely the result of its imperative need to break out of that straitjacket.

The great democracies, including our own, have done their full share in the job of reducing freedom of trade and ease of communications. The tariff barriers, quota restrictions and other obstacles to a normal interchange of goods were not invented by the dictators.

In the long run, the nations can prosper only by returning to the old system of doing business with one another on the fairest and friendliest basis possible. Let's hope they don't have to fight another great war before that truth dawns on them.

Explorers have hoisted the flag of New York's World Fair in the Arctic. That ought to draw the crowds down to the show!

A Divided American Labor Movement Looks Ahead to Twelve Critical Months

The Labor Front

A. F. of L.-C. I. O. Breach Feared Growing Wider

BY WILLIS THORNTON

NEA Service Staff Correspondent LABOR DAY, 1938, finds organized labor facing the same problem faced by business, industry, and the butcher, baker, and candlestick-maker. It is the problem of depressed business conditions.

The sluggish state of business has slowed to a shuffle the onward march of labor organization which was swinging along so triumphantly a year ago. It has created a financial problem by reducing paid-up dues income, for men who are out of work cannot pay dues. It has thrown labor on the defensive by producing the specter of wage-cuts.

Paid-up labor union membership today is probably lower than it was a year ago. The C. I. O. claims 4,000,000 members and the A. F. of L. 3,600,000. Each is skeptical of the other's claims, and any impartial observer must be skeptical of both. But the potential membership of each is near those figures, and each is poised to renew its organizing campaign as soon as conditions permit.

In many fields, the situation of organized labor as it celebrates its own special day in 1938 is critical.

A. F. OF L. vs. C. I. O. FIGHT

DESPITE more than two years of attempts to close the gap between organized labor as represented by the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization, the two wings of the labor movement are farther apart than ever.

The C. I. O. will hold this fall its first national convention, which will make it in name as well as in fact a rival labor organization to the A. F. of L.

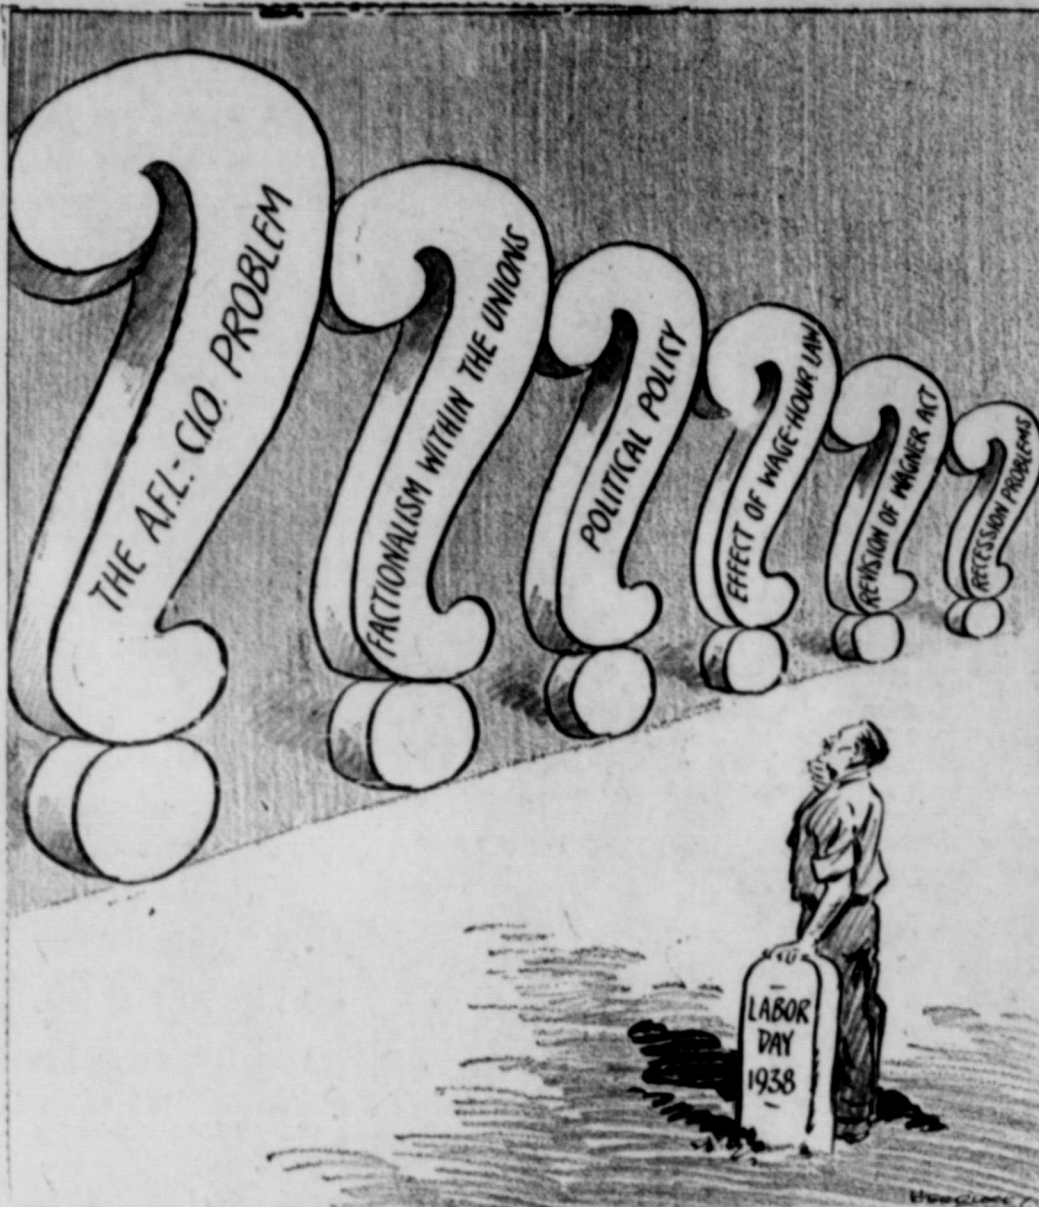

In the maritime, textile and lumber fields, dual unionism has locked these two organizations in bitter conflict that gives no sign of abating.

Gradually the breach between the two groups is widening philosophically as well as administratively, with the A. F. of L. committed to improving the lot of workmen within the present political and industrial setup, and the C. I. O. committed to whatever changes in both seem necessary to give organized labor a greater share in both the political and economic scheme.

Further widening of this breach comes from testimony before the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities that a disproportionate number of labor leaders, especially in the C. I. O., are of Communist or other extreme radical persuasion, attempting to use the labor movement for purposes not understood by the membership.

The United Auto Workers, one of the strongest of C. I. O. unions, has been split wide open by such a squabble over alleged control by radical factions.

The "dualism" of the labor movement is about to spread south of the Rio Grande as Lewis prepares to attend the Latin-American Trade Union Congress in Mexico City Sept. 5. This implies a new link between the C. I. O. and the dominant Mexican trade union federation, the C. T. M. President Green has refused A. F. of L. participation in this movement, standing pat on the old and somewhat dormant Pan-American Federation of Labor.

LABOR LAW

THE WAGNER ACT, sponsored originally by the A. F. of L., will run into efforts to amend it this winter. The A. F. of L. has soured on it and will ask changes.

The C. I. O. generally supports it "as is." Chief point of A. F. of L. objection is that the Labor Board, having the power to set the "appropriate unit of voting" in industrial elections, has generally chosen units which place craft unions at a disadvantage.

Revelations before the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee tending to show employer resistance to the Wagner Act will be used by labor this winter to try to tighten up the act's provisions, and the long record of the National Labor Relations Board in action—in which 15,561 cases involving 3,776,959 workers have been handled—will be used by employer rights also written in employers to try to have certain The Wage-Hour law just going into effect, which attempts to set a "floor under wages and a ceiling over hours," should be a great benefit to labor, but 'only indirectly to organized labor as such. Argument that wages raised by government fiat will tend to convince many workers that there is no real need for union organization is met by counter-argument that only when a man's wages have been raised above starvation levels does he become conscious of his possibilities and thus a prospect for union organizers.

Restrictive laws aimed at control of such union practices as sit-down strikes and mass picketing are being sought in Oregon, Washington, Michigan and other states where industrial disorder has been marked. These present a problem to all organized labor, as do a hundred suits in various localities (none of them as yet a binding precedent) testing the rights of employers and even union members to sue labor unions for damages under various conditions.

PLACE IN POLITICS

LABOR today finds itself in politics as never before. Here again the cleavage between A. F. of L. and C. I. O. factions is marked. Labor's Non-Partisan League, started as a united labor effort to re-elect President Roosevelt, has become more and more the political instrument of the C. I. O. alone.

Except in a few localities, the A. F. of L. has withdrawn its support, and is reverting to its old policy of "elect our friends, defeat our enemies."

New York's American Labor Party, also repudiated by the A. F. of L. and a scattering of Farmer-Labor Party movements in the Middle West and Northwest still Yesterday: To Linda's chagrin, Golden Toy goes to Monte Hill for $5000 after a battle of bidding.

CHAPTER VI

MONTE HILL, swaggered up to the auctioneer. Took out checkbook and pen. "How do I make out this check?"

"Well, now—" Mr. Jenkins hesitated. "Wait a minute!" Linda Gordon was pushing forward. Monte thought he had this coin, did he? She'd show him a thing or two.

"Mr. Jenkins, you said 'cash on the barrel-head—no checks accepted.' If he can give a piece of paper—" she left the sentence unfinished.

The auctioneer raised a hand for quiet. Hill turned to Linda. "You know me, Miss Gordon. My checks are good at Saratoga; are they good here?"

Linda looked him straight in the eye. Said: "I'm okaying no checks—I'm buying a coin, for cash." She glanced up at "Mr. Auctioneer, do I get the coin?"

Mr. Jenkins cleared his throat. Frowned down at Hill. "Mister, did you run that coin up without enough cash, or a certified check to pay for him?"

"I don't carry that much cash with me," Hill flashed back. "My checks—" "Don't want 'em, my friend. Last cash bid was eight hundred"—the auctioneer went into his sing-song—"do I hear the thousand?" He did not. "Sold! To the young lady, for cash on the barrel-head."

The auctioneer jumped to the ground. Donald held out a hand to Linda; in it were four $100 bills. "You pay," he whispered. Linda put the bills with her money and, carrying out the ancient southern custom, laid $800 on the head of the keg.

"Here's your bill of sale, Miss Big Boy, give the coin to the lady, and bring out that nice little Jay."

OLD Sandy Gordon took the halter-rein from Big Boy, led the colt to the fence. Linda turned away from the disgraced Hill, motioned to Donald to follow her. "Uncle Sandy, this is our partner, Mr. Donald—"

"Brown Donald," the young man said, taking the uncle's startled fist. Brown Donald? Where had Linda heard the name? Somewhere in connection with this racing game.

A tall figure loomed over them—Monte Hill. He ignored the girl, the young man. Said: "Mr. Sandy, you don't know me, but when you were winning with Beau Mardi at Saratoga, I was a kid selling programs at the track. I just want to say—" He smiled at them; spoke as if he harbored no bitterness. "You've got the smartest niece in America. If she hadn't spoken, my check would have been taken. But all's fair in a horse deal." He turned to Linda: "I caught on, that you two were joining forces. You've got an aristocratic partner, but I sort of wish you had teamed up with me."

She smiled, too, but it came hard. "Maybe I would have, Monte, but you said women and racing don't mix."

His face hardened. "They don't." Brown Donald lifted eyebrows. "Don't, eh? We'll show you a thing or two."

"Show me?" "Yes, you," Donald spoke with a superior air. "It'll take more than a fancy steplechase jockey to do it," said Hill with finality.

Linda shot a quick glance at the handsome youngster. So her partner was THE Donald; a gentleman jockey who rode at country club meets. One of the hangers-on of the moneyed aristocracy. So, he was trying to pick up a horse of his own—cheap. That was it. Probably tired of riding horses for wealthy friends.

Just then three cars came to a dusty stop in front of the sales barn. Bruce Radford jumped out of the first car, followed by a handful of prosperous-looking men. "Huh! You started the sale!" Radford demanded.

"Waited over an hour for your crowd," the auctioneer complained. "This here is business—" "What about Golden Toy?" "Sorry," Jenkins shrugged fat shoulders. "Sold for eight hundred—"

"I'm darned!" Radford turned, recognized Linda, who had been obscured by Golden Toy's entourage. "Hello, Linda! You did get here! Who bought Golden Toy?" "I did. That is, Mr. Donald and I together."

"You—and Donald!" He swept his Panama off, ran fingers through thick, brown hair. He made Linda think of a fat kewpie—a disgruntled kewpie. "Well, I'm darned! Since when did you team up with a—"

"That'll be enough from you, Radford," Donald said quietly. "Who spoke to you?" "I'm speaking to you. We bought the colt together; we're going to campaign together."

Radford looked at Linda. "That true?" She nodded.

HE seemed shocked. Said something to the men around him. Linda caught their words—advice spoken from hardened mouths: "Buy the gal out—she'll take dough—you got a right to the colt—"

The girl flushed. Looked an instant at Monte Hill. He shook his head, as if to repeat, "women and racing—they don't mix."

"Tell you what I'll do: I'll give you a couple of thousand—" Radford began, but Linda cut him short, saying meaningfully: "You should start at thirty-five hundred, Bruce—the price of another thoroughbred."

He flushed. She said, "Remember?" "All right, I'll give you thirty-five hundred—" "Not for thirty-five thousand—from you!"

Radford looked at her levelly a moment. There was no resentment in his face. He turned to Donald: "You don't want to make any money either, do you?"

Brown Donald looked at Linda: "We don't want his money, do we?" "No."

"Colt's not for sale—to you, Radford," Donald said evenly. "Now, you'll excuse us. Mr. Sandy, let's get going to your farm."

Sandy Gordon and Brown Donald led the colt off; Linda turned her back on Bruce and his crowd. Monte said goodby. Then Brown Donald came back to her; he, too, was leaving. His eyelids lowered, he half smiled; again she felt that electric current. "Got to run up to Berwyn tonight; riding in a big steplechase next week," he explained. "I told Mr. Sandy to give the colt some long, slow pallops; get ready for the big steplechases."

"Steplechases?" She drew back. It seemed hard to talk against his wishes. "This is a flat runner. We're going after the Jockey Club Stakes; then, the Derby next year."

"The man's face set in hard lines; again the current snapped off. "I don't think so." He spoke evenly. "He's long-legged; his mammy had stamina. I'm going to make a great jumper out of—" "Oh, no, you aren't!" Linda's eyes flashed with purpose.

"No!" He smiled; once more the girl was drawn to him by an invisible something. "We'll see. Well, I've got to catch a bus. Keep record of expenses; I'll divvy with you." He waved a hand, turned and left her.

Schoolboy's Comeback Is More Than a Dream Now

Dreaming of a comeback might be the title of this picture were not Lynwood Thomas Rowe pitching so well for Beaumont, where the Detroit hero of 1934-5-6 was sent to recover from an arm injury. The six-foot-four-and-a-half-inch Schoolboy does a pretty good job of filling the bed, and he's doing just about as thorough a job of moving down Texas League batters—one so complete, in fact, that he scarcely can miss being back with the Tigers next spring. The Schoolboy's comeback is considerably more than a dream now.

Saul: Moral Failure

Text: I Samuel 10:21-25; 13:20-23; 31:3-6

THE story of Saul, the King of Israel, is one of the most dramatic and impressive in all the records of human tragedy. Nor is anything of the power and impressiveness of it lost in the telling. The story in the Old Testament. All the details are brought out with full strength in the picture of a mighty man, called to a great task with a supreme responsibility, going down to defeat and suicide, a strong man overcome, because he allowed himself to be swept away and conquered by evil passions and jealousy.

He captured the armor offered him, and after selecting a smooth stone he met Goliath with his sling. With steady aim he struck the giant in a vulnerable spot. It was a mighty triumph, and history has recognized the courage and prowess of this young David, the giant killer.

When the armies of Israel came back victorious, the seeds of jealousy were sown in Saul's heart, as the women met the returning hero singing in praise of David and his deed. "Saul has slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands," sang the women. It was rather a foolish and thoughtless discrimination. Possibly any man in Saul's place would have resented it. There began in that hour the destruction and downfall of the mighty man.

The kindest thought of Saul is that he was affected by a form of insanity; for even when in a great rage he would seek to take the life of David; after the rage had passed, he was sorry for his act and he showed bursts of magnanimity. "I have played the fool," Saul, concerning himself, said there could be no more accurate moral judgment of a man against himself.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

MAKE note of these kernels of corn wisdom. Then life will taste far sweeter at this time of year. When buying sweet corn on the market—or selecting it from the garden—look for ears that are bound up in fresh green husks. If the husks are dry or straw-colored, the corn is probably overmature or there has been damage of some other sort.

Immature corn may not be recognizable until the corn husk is peeled back. If the corn has not reached the right stage of maturity for eating, the kernels will be small and very soft. Such corn lacks flavor after cooking. Corn that is "just right" for eating will have a well-filled ear, bright plump, milky kernels that are just firm enough to offer a little resistance to pressure. It will be yellow or white, depending on the variety.

Look for worm injury in an ear of corn. This usually starts on the tip of the ear, works its way down. If the injury is confined to the top it may not be wasteful to buy the ear but worm injury along the side of the corn ear is extremely objectionable.

Use Soon as Possible "Out of the garden, over the fire" is the time-honored rule for using sweet corn. The tender corn, if not eaten soon, will toughen. Part of the sugar in the kernels changes over into starch and makes the corn less sweet. It isn't possible to use the corn right away, it should be shucked and cooled immediately and kept in the coolest part of the refrigerator. To keep corn from drying out in the refrigerator, wrap in a damp cloth or keep in the special vegetable box.

Corn on the cob for indoor eating is best when it is not cooked overlong—and served hot plenty of butter. Generally, dum-sized ears of sweet corn should be simmered over 15 minutes. Some like corn on the cob, then cut off serving. Corn that is cut off beforehand is especially cooked in milk.

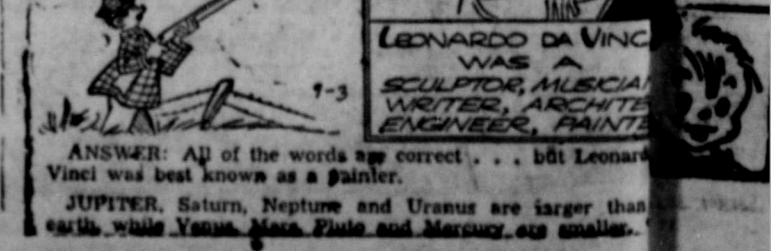

Canned a Necessity For canning corn at home, absolutely necessary to steam pressure canner. Corn is canned in two styles—whole-grain or cream style. Cream style is cut from the cob without scraping. For this style there is a more shallow and the cobs are scraped. Whole-grain corn tastes more nearly fresh corn because it can be a lighter processing and is not likely to be overcooked.

Cream-style corn canned glass jars often becomes brown because of the caramelization of the sugar during the heavy processing that is necessary to the heat penetrate the thick liquid and the glass. Corn of either style is not so likely to have this discoloration if canned in tin. Tin cans of either style should be the special C-111 developed for canning. As for putting up corn on the cob at home, this is not recommended.

Auxiliary Delegates Report on Convention

Mrs. J. D. McLister and Mrs. H. T. Schooley, president and secretary of the American Legion Auxiliary have returned from Austin where they spent 3 days as delegates to the State Legion convention. Upon reaching Austin Sunday noon, they were taken on a sight-seeing tour through the University of Texas grounds and to the airport, where they were present when the assistant secretary of war, Louis Johnson, arrived by plane.

They were actively engaged throughout the entire convention by attending all business sessions, and the "Division" Luncheon at the Stephen F. Austin hotel on Monday, and the "Past Presidents Parley" Luncheon on Tuesday at the Driskill hotel.

At the end of the business session on Tuesday election of officers was held and Mrs. Wm. Wyatt of San Marcus was elected to serve as the State Department President for 1939.

After the convention in Austin, Mrs. McLister and Mrs. Schooley visited with friends and relatives in Luling, and Seguin, Texas and had a delightful trip to San Antonio before their return trip to Ranger.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernst Enjoy California Trip
Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Ernst have returned to their home, 815 Cypress street, from a two weeks' vacation in California. They were accompanied by her sister, Mrs. O. F. McGee and daughter, Mary, of San Angelo.

The party went by route of Grand Canyon and Boulder Dam. In Hollywood they visited Mrs. Ernst's brother, A. D. Lowery and wife. Time was spent sightseeing in San Diego, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, and other points of interest.

Returning to Ranger by the southern route, the group stopped at Juarez.

Shower Honors Mrs. J. Dunn
A shower was given for Mrs. J. Dunn at the home of Mrs. Willie Mae McNurien at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Those present were Cura Woods, Delza Stacy, Lola Mae Edward, Maud Greenhaw, Lela Brown, E. E. Martin, Witcher, Josephine Williams, Myrie Dugan, H. B. Prock, G. W. Towne, Acuff, Wooten, Pearl Key.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. McNurien, the hostess.

Child Study Club No. 2 To Meet Thursday Afternoon
Child Study Club No. 2 will meet Thursday afternoon at 2:30 with Mrs. Alice Littlefield. Mrs. Max Orr will be co-hostess.

Mrs. Ben Odum will be leader for the program. Mrs. Z. B. Morgan will give the president's message, both national and state and Mrs. Carl Heinlin will talk on "Radio."

Each member is invited to attend.

Members of the Gleaners class of the First Baptist church will entertain with a breakfast Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock. This regular monthly social will be given at the church. Mrs. J. B. Houghton and Mrs. Clayton Hunt will act as co-hostesses for the affair.

Schools to Open on Sept. 12th

Big School Year Is Expected for High School Here

By J. C. Powell

Ranger High School opens Monday, September 12, with prospects considerably brighter than in the last three years. It is not known yet, of course, how large the enrollment for the year will be, but there has been a constant increase during the last three years from 456 in 1934-35 to 517 in 1937-8.

Apparently there is considerable interest among the pupils for work in the Department of Diversified Occupations. If inquiries of pupils is any indication of what is to come, there will be far more applicants for entrance than there will be places for them.

The Department of Vocational Agriculture is being opened again this year to fill a great need in our school and possibly an even greater need in our community. Mr. Bell, who is at the head of this department and is a new man in our community, has been the object of much favorable comment among those who have met him. It is to be hoped that many students will be interested in his valuable and interesting program.

There is much interest in bringing shop work to our school this year also, but no definite arrangements have been made yet. Shop Work is a very desirable course in our school, and it is hoped that we shall be able to list it as another enrichment of our

Ranger Faculty Got Education In 21 Colleges

The instructors of the Ranger schools represent twenty-one of the best senior colleges in America. Such a wide spread of training experience, and influence makes for a healthful atmosphere for the system.

The University of Texas leads with 14 who have received at least a part of their training there.

Abilene Christian College ranks second with 9.

Texas State College for Women has 5.

North Texas State Teachers College has 3.

Baylor University, 3.

McMurry College, 2.

Daniel Baker College, 2.

Texas Technological College, 2.

A. & M. College, 2.

Sul Ross State Teachers College, 2.

University of Wisconsin, 2.

While Hardin-Simmons, Southern Methodist University, East Texas State Teachers College, Southwest Texas State Teachers College, Texas Wesleyan College, Oklahoma University, Louisiana Tech., University of Missouri and Yale University and Prairie View State Normal has helped train at least one teacher.

Of the complete staff ten have received part of their training in Ranger Junior College.

Head of Schools

W. T. Walton, superintendent of Ranger school system and president of Ranger Junior College, who is expecting a good school year for the entire system this year.

College Dean

H. L. Baskin, who was named dean of Ranger Junior College by the school board, who has been working on enlarging the enrollment of the school this summer. He predicts a larger attendance.

COMPETENT FACULTIES WILL GREET STUDENTS OR RANGER'S SCHOOLS

When the doors open for Ranger schools Monday, Sept. 12th, the students will be greeted by 46 well-trained teachers who will add zest, enjoyment and efficiency to the year's work and whose ambition it will be to make the 1938-29 session the best Ranger has had.

The staff from the first grade on up through the Junior College will consist of the following personnel:

The administrative staff will be: H. L. Baskin, A. E., Abilene Christian College; M. A. The University of Texas, Dean of the College. J. Cleo Powell, A. B., M. A., The University of Texas, principal of the high school.

Mrs. Claudia Jarvis, B. A., Abilene Christian College.

Mrs. Anne Anderson, junior in Texas Wesleyan College.

BIG YEAR IS ANTICIPATED FOR 1938-39

At Least One New Building Is To Be Made Available For the Students

Ranger High School, Ranger Junior College, the three Ranger Ward schools, Hodges Oak Park, Cooper and Young, and the colored school will open their doors for the 1938-39 school year Monday morning, Sept. 12, when children will start registering.

A big school year is anticipated in Ranger, with both the high school and junior college showing a large number of students registered, and the ward schools are expecting an equally good attendance.

At least one new school building will be made available for pupils this year, and hopes are that another will be started and may be ready for occupancy before the end of the school year. A building has been purchased to house the colored students, and remodeling work has been progressing for more than a week. It is expected that the building will be ready by the time school opens.

Plans have been started to remodel the Revis Building into a modern school building to house the Ranger Junior College. Although this work has not been started, the plans are being made out and are expected to be approved and the construction started this year.

When this work is completed the college will have a building of its own, and will share, with the high school (the Recreation Building, which will be used as a gymnasium for both schools.

Students will report at the schools on Monday, Sept. 12, for registration, and classes will be begun shortly after registration is completed.

Vaccination Is Required Before Entering School

In order to keep down an epidemic of smallpox and to follow the suggestion of the State Department of Education, the Ranger Board of Education passed a resolution a few years ago requiring each child entering school to be vaccinated.

Last year the State Board of Health made a survey of the Ranger schools and specified this vaccination rule as the first requirement this board was seeking to enforce from its headquarters in Austin. Many parents, the Parent Teacher Associations and the Pre-School Club, have all aided in this movement this year, and the safety it guarantees the schools is self-evident.

Big School Year Is Expected Here

 Ranger High School curriculum. Other departments which have been operating in the past are not being neglected and will measure up to what they have been in the past with anticipated improvements in each of them.

The high school building has been brightened up considerably with paint, and many of the lockers have been thoroughly repaired so that we shall have a much better and a much more pleasant place to work during the year.

Principal J. C. Powell has prepared for the opening of school so as to make the registration of the pupils as organized and as efficient as possible. Due to the fact that Monday, September 5, is Labor Day, there will be little or no registration until after that date. Regular registration will begin Tuesday morning, however, at 8 o'clock to continue through the week each day from 8 o'clock to 5 o'clock. Registration will be conducted according to classes as follows: Seniors Tuesday, Juniors Wednesday, Sophomores Thursday, and Freshmen Friday. Stragglers can be taken care of Saturday.

end of the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1936 and $6,557.19 collected for the year ending Aug. 31, 1935. Delinquent taxes collected for the year ending Aug. 31, 1937 were not determined as two audits were made and the true collection of delinquent taxes was not reflected, since some taxes were paid in two installments, and the last installment was listed as delinquent when collected, though it was part of a tax payment for the year just past.

During the period from Sept. 1, 1936 to May 1, 1937 delinquent collections, with the deferred payments, totaled $6,664.94, when the audit was made, and collections from May 1, 1937 to the end of the year, Aug. 31, 1937, were $2,142.80.

Delinquent taxes collected this year represented payments on assessments made as far back as 1919 and for every year from then up to date.

Collections by years were as follows:

summer months.

It will be noted that during the second year of the program the students selected knew what was wanted, and are, in most cases, planning to finish the full two years of work and receive the certificate of award in recognition of the particular training that has been received. At the last commencement exercise these certificates were awarded to Bob Bolosky, Annetta Huffman, Raymond Landroop, and Melvin Woods.

Thanks to the employers of our city, this program has meant much to these students from the standpoint of training, and also financially. It has also given the employers the opportunity of selecting the employees with whom he expects to carry on his business in the future. # STUDENTS ARE GIVEN TRAINING FOR JOBS BY VOCATION COURSE

By O. L. McGahey
 During the year 1936-1937 there were twenty-one students who started into the diversified occupations course. These students spent time in the class which varied from ten days to the full year. Only six of the group continued the course during the following year, and only four of these completed the full two years of work and study of a job. In this class there were five girls, three of whom are now married, one is steadily employed, and the other is temporarily employed. Of the sixteen boys who started the course during the session of 1936-1937, two dropped after only a few days attendance, 6 others did less than one year in the course, and 8 of them are now working for the same employer, or in the same occupation for another employer. The State Department of Education commended the school and the people of Ranger for their work of 1936-1937, and noted improvement as shown by the record of the 1937-1938 session. Of the fifteen added to the class last session, there were twelve boys and three girls. Each of these has stayed on the same or similar work except two. One of the two dropped out of the course after six weeks, and the other after one semester and graduation. Of the remaining thirteen, ten expect to continue training and follow their chosen occupations, while the other three will continue in the same occupations with their training received in other classes. In almost all cases these students have continued work during the

Marching Band Is Aim of Director

Band Director Milton Pullis is determined to have one of the best bands in this part of the country, and not only a good band, but one that can march with the best of them.

One of the first orders Pullis gave when he started drilling the musicians was for them to be prepared to learn to march, and to get somewhere with their marching. With this in view he has been working them on drill formations and a steady improvement in marching is noticed.

By mid-week Pullis had the band doing a pinwheel and an anchor, and was ready to perfect these and to give other formations, to be used at football games.

He informed the band members that he was going to have them where they could make two letters, make two formations and get off the playing field in seven minutes.

"There will be no loitering along on the football field between halves," Pullis is quoted as saying. "We are going to have a snappy band, one that will move along quickly, make their formations and leave just as quickly."

Governors Prefer Yellow Pencils Is Collector's Belief

By United Press

FORT WORTH.—State governors, E. H. Cashburn, has discovered, have a fondness for yellow pencils.

Cashburn is a pencil collector. He gathers pencils that have been used by famous persons. He has received 31 pencils from state governors—and all but two of them are yellow. Governor Nice of Maryland sent him a black pencil. Governor Merriam of California gave him a cedar pencil of the dime-store variety.

Miss Margaret LeHand, President Roosevelt's personal secretary, also donated a yellow pencil to the collection.

Dr. W. L. Jackson

Former president of the Ranger School board, who has been a leader in all movements for the betterment of the Ranger schools for a number of years.

The strangest story surrounding Cashburn's collection is that of W. Orville Beall, who signed his death certificate. Beall was pronounced dead in 1906. Arrangements were made for his funeral. His mother signed his death certificate with a pencil and contracted for a tombstone. But while the funeral was pending, Beall rallied. Seeing the humor of the situation, he picked up the pencil and added his own signature to the death certificate.

Cashburn says you can tell a lot about a person by observing the way he treats a pencil. Women, he says, are more nervous than men, and frequently chew the erasers or bite the pencils.

Cashburn, who has about 200 pencils in his collection, is out to get a million. "Every time I collect a pencil, I make a friend," he explained.

VETS TO GET GRUBSTAKE

CALGARY, Ont.—Unemployed war veterans on provincial relief will receive a "grubstake" of $25 to permit them to seek employment outside Calgary, the Alberta command of the Canadian legion has announced.

Today's Fish Tale Brings Together a Pike and a Bottle

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—Luther Norman of Lonsdale tells today's prize fish story—and because he doesn't expect anyone to believe it, he has two witnesses to back him up.

While fishing in Norris Lake, he said, he hooked a jack pike weighing six pounds. When cleaning the fish he found inside a half pint of liquor with the government revenue stamp still intact.

Norman said some careless fisherman evidently knocked the bottle out of a boat. Pike, he said, have exceptionally large mouths and will "strike at anything."

New Instructor In Debate, Speaking Is Named by Board

C. B. Pruet

W. T. Walton, superintendent of Ranger schools, has announced the appointment by the school board, of J. G. Hester as debate coach, director of public speaking and instructor of history.

Hester will take the place made vacant by the resignation of A. W. Warford, who has been debate coach and teacher of speaking in the Ranger high school for the past two years.

Mr. and Mrs. Hester will arrive in Ranger within a few days in order that he may be ready to start his classes by the first day of school. He has been teaching the same subjects in the Fearall high school for the past few years.

Girl About Town

By Lucie Locket

Not even two weeks before school will be starting. (Do I hear any groans?) Most of the boys are unanimous in saying that they wish they didn't have to go back to their books. But not a few of the girls say they are rather anxious to return to school, especially those going off to college. And speaking of going away to college, does anyone know the exact number of dresses, etc., a girl must have to attend an institution of higher learning? A person with his eyes half open knows from the ads what the well dressed sorority sister will wear this season, but it would take a fellow with a dozen eyes to find out what the popular fraternity man will wear.

It looks as though our own Junior College is about to get off to a flying start. The Reavis Building is a fine place for R. J. C. and the best choice the School Board could have made. It is in town, and is close enough to the high school for the students to go back and forth for their classes, if that becomes necessary. Who knows, in a few years maybe we will have a college town.

I was surprised to note how many people are hay fever sufferers. And with the hay fever season just beginning, and specialists predicting that it will be the worst since 1934, hay feverers don't have much to look forward to. The best doctors say that hay fever is caused when the membranous tissues of the nose become irritated by pollen, dust, and other such substances.

Seems that Cisco is taking some pretty strong measures to curb the night life of its youth. The curfew idea isn't new; it was used very effectively in the Middle Ages. After all, nine o'clock is rather early for the boys and girls, and I think that Cisco would be able to enforce its law much more efficiently if the curfew hour was placed at nine-thirty or even ten o'clock. The officials may find on their hands a conspiracy on the order of the 'curfew must not ring tonight' theme.

We Americans certainly go in for fads, don't we? Witness this current Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy enthusiasm, which have already swept the country, is returning for a retake. When you get to thinking that all Charlie says and does comes not from his own wooden head but from the clever brain of Bergen, it becomes uncanny. Edgar has really brought ventriloquism in a big way. ventriloquism in a big way.

PEEPING THRU The KNOTHOLE

By Bill Mayes

Because of the weight in the line and the fact that there are 10 or 11 lettermen on the squad, sportswriters on the Oil Belt papers are getting way out on a limb early in the season and are predicting that Ranger will be one of the big threats in the district.

All of which gives Coach Bill Tipton and backfield coach H. C. Jennings, a big laugh. Not that they think their squad can't do the job, but they are beginning to get a little gray headed and their hair is getting thin because of inability, or disinclination, of the team to learn signals and assignments on the plays they have been given.

Only eight plays have been given so far, and, according to Tipton, not more than two of the players have learned their assignments on these. It was intended to give a few more plays before the Gorman game, and after that to add whatever were designed for use throughout the remainder of the year.

Now Tipton is threatening to cut down to four plays, and holding night skull practice so everyone will know what to do on those plays. He really said three, but he needs a punt. Maybe he meant the famous old time Michigan system, a punt, a pass and a prayer.

"It isn't because they can't learn these plays," Tipton stated, "but just that they are not giving enough study to them. There isn't a man on the team who couldn't learn these plays from every position in an hour or an hour and a half if he gave them serious study, but some of them don't know them from even one position."

Jennings is just as discouraged over the situation.

"Oh, they will know all those signals by the time they have finished the Gorman game," was the consolation offered him.

"Yes," he admitted, "Maybe after the Gorman game. But what do you think will happen to us if we go into that game with most of the men not knowing the signals? Why, they will run into each other every time they try to run a play and a fumble will be the result. You can't win ball games without an offense, and what is an offense when no one knows what the rest of them are going to do?"

Maybe they have something there, but having watched teams in the past, back in the past when there were good teams in Ranger, it seems that all Ranger teams look as though they don't know the signals, even a few days before a game. Then when game time comes they do fairly well. But that was with players with two and three years of experience running the same plays together. It may be a lot different now if everyone doesn't bone up on the eight plays.

The plays themselves are not so complicated, though they are real nice, deceptive looking ones. But they are complicated enough, and every play is, to make a team look bad when someone goes the wrong way, blocks the wrong man, fails to block at the right time or hands the ball over to someone who is not there to get it.

Yes, maybe more skull practice is not such a bad idea, at that.

A boom has been reported in the buggy business, and Chicago's city fathers have canceled an ordinance requiring bathing girls to wear bloomers. What do you suppose Taft's chances are?

PARENTS, CHILDREN PREPARE FOR START OF SCHOOL SEPT. 12

Parents and children were today preparing for opening of Eastland schools which has been set by the school board for Monday, September 12.

P. B. Bittle, beginning his tenth year as superintendent of the Eastland schools, expects 1,060 students to enroll, although the approved state census list for 1938-39 lists 1,030 students.

Bittle denied a rumor "floating around that the Eastland schools will discontinue some of the high school subjects that were taught the past session."

He declared "this report is unfounded and untrue. There will be the same subjects taught both in the high school and the ward schools that were taught last session, except an addition of one or two subjects possibly in the high school will be added this session that were not taught last session."

For the first time, all "fifth" grade students will report to Junior High school. Other grades in the junior high will be the sixth and seventh.

All children in grades one, two, three and four living east of Daugherty street must attend South Ward school and those living west of Daugherty in the same grades must attend West Ward.

Bittle declared that the division line for Ward school attendance will be closely enforced. "Heretofore," he said, "on account of conveniences and accommodations granted by the school officials, pupils have been given permission to attend the school most convenient to their residence, but this will not be permitted the ensuing session."

For those pupils living outside the city limits, Daugherty street, continued north and south, also will be the division line determining Ward school attendance.

First holiday on the school slate this session will be November 11. Students will receive November 24 and 25 as Thanksgiving holidays. Christmas holidays begin following close of school December 23 and continue until January 2.

Date of close of school this year will be May 26.

Principals of high school and junior high will announce time for registration later.

By recommendation of officials, a fire escape will be installed at the rear of the high school building. It will be of the slide, tube type.

The teacher staff for Eastland schools is practically the same for this year as last. One new teacher at the high school will be Horace Virgil Harrison of near Electra. Married and 26 years of age, Harrison has the bachelor of arts degree from Trinity University at Wapakoneta. He has seven of the necessary 21 hours toward a master of arts degree from the University of Texas. At Trinity he majored in history and has 46 semester hours in that subject and government.

In 1932 Harrison received a medal for the highest average in the social science department of Trinity. Having five years experience in high school teaching, Harrison in 1938 coached the Harold Class B track and field team to a state championship.

The list of teacher assignments by Bittle is as follows:

ST. RITAS WILL OPEN FOR 18TH SCHOOL YEAR

Tuesday, Sept. 6, will mark the beginning of the eighteenth consecutive scholastic year for St. Rita's Parochial school in Ranger. Originally established by the Sisters of the Incarnate Word at Thurber when that city was one of the thriving industrial centers of this section, St. Rita's school was moved to Ranger in 1921 at the request of Archbishop Gerken, at that time pastor of St. Rita's Catholic church.

Mother Berchmans was appointed the first principal of the school, and has been succeeded through the years by Sisters Marcella, Bethania, Mary of Good Shepherd, Agnes Gertrude, Patricia, and Sister Mary Agnes, who is in charge of the school this year, having recently come to Ranger from the Blessed Sacrament Academy at St. Louis, Mo., one of the largest Catholic schools in the country.

The spacious playground at St. Rita's school provides ample opportunity for healthful outdoor exercises, and the recreational activities of the pupils are under constant supervision.

The program of St. Rita's school corresponds with that of the primary and grammar grades of public and parochial schools of the country. The basis of the system is instruction and encouragement in good habits of body, mind and soul.

For several years St. Rita's was a fully accredited high school, but abandoned teaching of the higher grades when it became evident that one high school was sufficient to amply meet the needs of students in this community. Students from this school have ranked high in the classes of Ranger and other high schools each year.

St. Rita's also operates a separate school for the exclusive instruction of Mexican children. In this school, also, all grades from first to seventh are taught.

Rev. Fr. S. E. Byrne, present pastor of St. Rita's church, and Rev. Fr. J. Gonzalez, assistant pastor, have been working devotedly in the interest of the school, in order that nothing might be left undone to provide for the students of St. Rita's school the best of educational facilities in a truly Christian atmosphere.

SCHOOL OPENS MONDAY, SEPT. 12

As the Ranger Junior College is a business institution in Ranger, it needs our support . . . That being true, we are asking for a part of their support.

We invite the teachers, students and parents to come into our place of business and get acquainted. We will welcome you . . . We have always been for our high schools, our ward schools, the faculty and school supporters.

Come to Ranger to do your shopping.

Is Proud of the
RANGER JUNIOR COLLEGE

And the Fine Record It Has Made Over the Past Twelve Years

In 1926, a group of far-sighted educators and business men organized the Ranger Junior College. Since that good day the college has functioned 100 per cent and has catered to educational needs of West Texas citizens. Not only that, but the school is fully accredited with all Texas Colleges and is a member of the Association of Junior Colleges of America.

All students who live in the Ranger Independent School District are entitled to FREE TUITION . . . made possible by the liberality of the educational-minded taxpayers in the district. Investigate the possibility of Ranger Junior College before making your go-away-to-school plans for the coming year.

A letter addressed to W. T. Walton, President of the College, will bring you complete details.
