URGES GIVEN SEVERE RAP BY DEMOCRATS

By United Press
BEAUMONT, Texas, Sept. 13.—Sharp notice that Texas Democrats will brook no attempt to elect Democratic officials who are not New Dealers and proponents of the logical successor to President Roosevelt, marked the state Democratic convention, which opened here tonight. C. K. Quinn of San Antonio was introduced, said "no citizen better qualified to provide leadership so vitally necessary these trying times. With the approaching expiration of the two-term period of service creditably discharged by Roosevelt, the Democrats of Texas again present John N. Garner as our President's logical successor."

Hours before the convention, lines of people crowded into the suite of Governor-Nominate O'Daniel. During the convention, State Executive Chairman Myron Blanton of Marshall announced the convention of O'Daniel Democrats. Former State Senator V. A. Collier of Livingston then took the floor as temporary chairman. The anti-urge temper of the convention was demonstrated by cheers which greeted Collier's declaration that "a man's party in the New Deal is not a party of his democracy."

Collins' declarations against libelation of liquor and gambling drew less applause. The Democratic party in Texas is composed of God-loving men and women, and as such we will enforce the liquor laws, said Collins. We further pledge there will be no liberalization in the law, but if anything, they shall be made stricter.

The ultimatum was telegraphed to President Eduard Benes by Konrad Henlein, leader of the Sudeten German party, who was at Eger, center of some of the worst disturbances.

CALL TO JURY GROUP LIKELY SAY OFFICIALS

Victim Was Known As Amateur Carver of Stone and Wood

Mrs. Jackson Peters, 54-year-old Curtis woman charged in connection with the fatal shooting of Mrs. Marcus Pierce, 27, and of the same rural Eastland county community, Tuesday was under $1,500 appearance bond.

Sheriff Loss Woods stated that the bond was posted Monday afternoon at Eastland, where Mrs. Peters is charged with murder in the court of Justice of Peace E. E. Wood. She had waived examining trial.

Criminal District Attorney Earl Conner, Jr., was to confer with Judge B. W. Patterson of 88th district court on probability of recalling the September term grand jurors for an investigation.

Mrs. Pierce, mother of three children, was known widely in the county as an amateur carver of stone and wood. Some of her work has been exhibited at the annual Eastland county fairs.

Officers declared that the shooting occurred early Sunday following a fire at the home of Joe Busch, brother of Mrs. Pierce. They also further learned that following the fire, which the Pierce's saw, they went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peters, about one-half mile.

From the officers investigation, declared Sheriff Woods, it was determined that a discussion ensued in front of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peters and Mrs. Pierce were talking with the husband of the woman later charged.

Accounts of the affair led Sheriff Woods and Criminal District Attorney Conner to the belief that Mrs. Peters, who had been in bed, then came out of the house.

The wound which was fatal to Mrs. Pierce, said Sheriff Woods, was inflicted by a pistol. It was declared that only one shot was fired, taking effect in Mrs. Pierce's chest. While being taken to a Cisco hospital Mrs. Pierce died.

Mrs. Peters was arrested at 9 a. m. Sunday at her home by Sheriff Woods. A pistol, with one shot fired, was taken from Mr. and Mrs. Peters' bed. Also taken from the grounds of the Peters' home, it was related, was a broom handle which it was said Mrs. Pierce had when she and her husband went to the Peters home.

There had been differences between the families, it was evident, said Sheriff Woods. No statement had been made by Mrs. Peters.

Funeral services for Mrs. Pierce were held Sunday.

War Clouds Disclose a Touch of Silver

There is one curious by-product of the current war scare which—years hence, when the scare has died down—will be recognized as something pretty valuable. That is the tremendous impetus which the scare has given the development of aviation.

A world which looks forward to war sees the airplane principally as a weapon. So, as with all other weapons, it strives frantically to improve it. Engineers and designers in all countries get a free hand; nothing is left undone to increase the speed, carrying capacity, and cruising range of the sky ships.

As long as the threat of war is black on the horizon, this makes rather shivery reading. As a weapon, the airplane has most dreadful possibilities. If nothing comes of this vast activity except increased possibilities for destruction, the world is in a bad case indeed.

But in the long run the airplane is only secondarily a weapon. It is the fastest means of transportation mankind has yet devised, and over the years its usefulness should far outweigh its destructiveness. And because of the present war-scare, progress in airplane design and construction is going forward these days very much faster than would otherwise be possible.

We sometimes forget how completely our modern world is built around the idea of fast transportation and speedy communications. The world economy of today may be a disappointed and chaotic thing, but it works to the extent that it does work only because it is served by a network of rapid carriers. And if this is true of our own domestic situation.

In America, for instance, upwards of 300,000,000 letters are carried annually by air. Some 2,600,000 people travel by air each year. More than 10,000 planes are kept busy on commercial jobs, carrying mail, people, and express across the country. If the railroad and the automobile played a major role in welding our country into a unit, the airplane is beginning to occupy an equally important place.

All of this means solidarity, community of interest, understanding. It also means wider markets, a greater chance for commercial and industrial expansion, a freer and farther flow of trade. Anything that moves goods faster and more efficiently must, in the long run, mean greater prosperity.

And so, ultimately, these very trying days which we are living through now will give us an extremely useful by-product. It may be perfectly true that what we get will hardly be worth the danger that is afflicting world civilization. But it is at least comforting to reflect that out of today's nervous, anxious confusion there will come something, at least, that will be of permanent value to the race.

A SIMPLE pleasant dinner that costs little and is easy to prepare—that's the dream of the modern wife. Perhaps you'll find this inexpensive meal suitable to your desires. Begin with small glasses of chilled tomato juice. Then—

Beef Patties With Herbs (Serves 4 to 6)
Two pounds ground round steak, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon minced celery leaves, 1 teaspoon lemon juice and herbs, thoroughly. Then shape into 12 small cakes and flatten to 1-2 inch thickness. If meat is too dry, moisten hands with cold water when making cakes. Use large metal griddle or heavy iron frying pan. Heat well. Pan broil the patties quickly, turning frequently to prevent burning. Do not use any grease. The patties will be browned on the outside yet juicy tender on the inside when cooked about three minutes. Serve immediately on a hot platter. Dot each patty with butter and season with salt and pepper.

Cream Noodles With Cheese (Serves 4 to 6)
One package 'fine' noodles (6 ounces), 1-4 cup whole milk, 1-4 cup grated Italian cheese, 2 teaspoons butter, salt, pepper, paprika.
Plunge the thread-like noodles into a large kettle of rapidly boiling salted water. Boil uncovered for twenty minutes. Drain, retaining 1 cup of the water. To noodles and the 1 cup water, add top milk, wide school ground improvement project is providing employment for about 70 boys. Construction of rock retaining walls, flagstone walks, and landscaping at these schools as well as reducing long-time costs in upkeep and replacements due to erosion, according to school officials.

Kokomo community has sponsored a series of projects, including the construction of an arbor type community auditorium which is now nearing completion. The 4-H club building and a community park are other units in the Kokomo program already completed and now open to the public.

A county wide clerical project to provide clerical assistants to county and school officials has recently been approved, and it is expected that every school in the county will receive the benefit of NYA assistants to supplement the regular budget staff of librarians and office workers.

Other NYA projects in operation in Eastland county include the following: girl's resident training project in homemaking at Ranger, employing 40 girls. Assistants at WPA nursery schools at Ranger, Cisco and Eastland, employing 16 youths. Assistants to case workers in the county welfare offices, employing four youths.

A considerable increase in NYA workers is predicted for the next few months, with the opening of new projects which have been approved, and with the expansion of projects now operating through the opening of new units.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Chinatown refused the dying request of one of its greatest men, Chin Lain, 69-year-old director of the Chinese Six Companies. He had asked for a simple American funeral. “.. And THIS IS Our Guest Room, It's Bomb-Proof!”

BRITISH HOUSEHOLDER HAS WIDE CHOICE OF SHELTERS, ABOVE AND BELOW GROUND, FOR HIS PROTECTION IN WAR-TIME

A simple type of bomb-proof refuge that will shelter air-raided Britons is this backyard concrete tube, entered through a manhole.

Cheapest arrangement for large public splinter-proof refuges is in groups such as the one pictured. They are connected with passage tubes which contain air-tight doors.

BY MILTON BRONNER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent LONDON.—John Citizen of Great Britain now can shop for air raid shelters just as he does for neckties or hats.

There is not much choice in material, because the one mostly designated is Portland cement concrete, reinforced with steel bars. But John Citizen can have his choice of various kinds of air raid shelters for his own home. He can choose whether to have it in the basement of his home or alongside it, or out in the garden beneath the surface of the earth. If he is the owner of a big shop or of a factory, he can buy bigger shelters to take care of employees.

All this pother is due to the fact that responsible men in the government are convinced that, if Britain is ever involved in a war with a first class European power, large British cities will be targets for war from the air. Therefore, the dangers to civilians, against which protection must be afforded, are mainly from falling bombs. It is recognized that, particularly in dwelling houses, it would be almost an economic impossibility to provide complete protection from direct hits by huge bombs.

The Home Office has stated that in determining accommodation of not relying upon people whole doing this for the 75 square feet of surface area, including floors, ceiling and walls, lie shelters in case of war. Therefore, a room nine feet by nine and eight feet high is adequate for six persons. If there were an air filter, this accommodation would suffice for longer than six hours at a stretch. The shelter would be fitted up with first-aid outfits, rugs, thinned foods, water and other necessary supplies. It is estimated that such a shelter could be constructed for as little as $600.

CHAPTER XIII
Linda couldn't believe her ears.

"You mean!" Callie spoke with righteous indignation. "You can't out of the house good before Sunday with Norman. They take them starts packing up. Mr. Sandy calls a auto-van, they put the car in, they climb in their own drives off."

"Where did they go, Callie?"

"Mr. Sandy, he don't say nothing. But that triflin' Norman, he looks a face at me as they drives off. He waves his hand an' shouts, 'See you off to the Downs, we is in the 'burz, too!'"

"It's all right, Callie; I'll be home in a while. And if Golden Toy and the Jockey Club Stakes, I'll give you that wedding."

"He better, or I skins him alive."

Linda untied Jerry, went into the room. Laid away her clothes. The long, furious drive home had worn off much of her sudden loathing of Brown Donald.

She pitied him—a last-minute version of the gigolo. The man wanted to have his cake and eat it, too.

She remembered Bruce Radford's awkward call, as she was leaving Lexington. She'd thought Bruce was trying to get her to leave the house.

"Good old Bruce," she murmured. He knew Donald's name; had tried to warn her.

"Callie," Linda said at breakfast, "we're going to let 'em stew their own juices at the Downs a few weeks."

"Ma'am, we is," Callie said with enthusiasm.

"Then get the colt in racing shape; then we'll pay a surprise on the meanwhile, you run the house while I ride around."

"Material—do my writing, ma'am."

ALREADY Linda had the beginning of her two ordered stables, a pair of ponies, a pair of horses, a pair of racing stables, a pair of breeding farms—talked to old business, got down anecdotes.

Three days later the storm broke. A letter from Berwyn; Linda sniffed the paper. Ugh! "Answered: He might have gotten a letter of his own. It read:

"Dear Linda:

"I was shocked to see in the newspaper, which our trainer showed me, an article telling about your buying the colt, Golden Toy. I was under the impression that I owned half of him. I still believe so. However, since you are posing—in the press—as being the owner, I'd suggest that you own all of him. Or else sell your half to me.

"We paid eight hundred for him; there are witnesses to that purchase. Now I want to play fair—I'm not trying to hold you up. I'll give you four hundred for your share, or you may have my interest for the same sum.

"Please let me know, by return mail, your decision.

"Sincerely,
"BROWN DONALD."

LINDA'S lips curved with contentment. The handwriting of Donald, but the inspiration of the woman called Merle. Inspiration? That was putting it mildly.

"Mama spanked all right," she said to herself.

Of course she had to buy his interest, and good riddance it would be. But what was she going to use for money? It didn't grow on trees in the Blue Grass.

"Here's a postal I forgot, Miss Linda," Callie gave her the yellow card. Stamped Louisville. Linda recognized Uncle Sandy's scribbled writing. So, he was getting in touch at last. "Fifty-fifty he wants something," she murmured, turning the card over. It read:

"Dear Linda, the colt is shaping up right nice. You know he was in training when we bought him. I breezed him five furlongs this a. m. He did it handily in 1:01—

"Of course, keeping that speed for a mile is something else, but we think we got a right nice colt and I'd thank you to send me $100 right away as feed is mighty high. Your uncle,

"ALEXANDER GORDON."

Maybe not all of the one hundred instantly, but eventually. "M'girl," she spoke to herself, "you've got to dig five hundred, pronto."

SHE jumped to her feet, went to the phone, put in a long distance call to Mr. Moss in New York.

In three minutes' time she heard his booming voice: "Yes, yes—what is it?"

"It's five hundred dollars, Mr. Moss." "Lo, Linda," he said casually. "You're just in time. I expect Smiling Tom Cartwright—and here he comes."

well. I'm sending in two corking good yarns next week—

"Here, here! We don't make a practice of advances; but"—she heard a chuckle over the wire—"you need it for feed for that out-burner you bought, don't you?"

"Out-burner? He's apt to be a stoke horse."

"All right! Stake a man, then. No, I won't give you an advance; but—" he paused for a instant; Linda's heart raced quickly as she waited—for ages it seemed. Now he was speaking again—in warm, humor tones.

"Here's a little surprise: while we don't give advances, your Man o' War story was so good that we're paying a flat five hundred for it—but you go on salary with the others. Fair enough? It welled up, went over the wires to New York. Linda heard another chuckle: he was playing God to his own satisfaction. She caught herself. Said quickly: "It is fair enough, Mr. Moss, if"—she hesitated—"if I get a $25 raise over what you offered me."

"Whoo, there! You sound like a mule-trader!"

"You want my mules, don't you?"

"All right, all right. But get those yarns in—and they better be good."

"One last request," she asked, him to transfer the five hundred by telegraph to the bank in Lexington.

The night train from the racing city carried a cashier's check for $400 to Brown Donald, Esq., care of a woman named Merle.

"Callie, the fall race meet has started at the Downs," Linda said at breakfast the next morning. "Would you like to go to Louisville with me?"

"Would I? Yes, ma'am! An' if I sees that triflin' Norman—" she grinned, left the sentence unfinished.

"Then pack up; we'll close the house. We'll take a cottage behind the track."

At late twilight their car stopped in front of a tackroom on Poverty Row at the Downs; where the one and two-horse stables are housed. "Uncle Sandy!" Linda called. Norman's woolly head looked out. "Howdy, Miss Linda," then he saw Callie. Went into action. "I—I got business—"

He scurried out, disappeared behind a manure pile. Callie shouted: "You triflin' stable-han!"

Then Uncle Sandy came to the door. "Lo, Linda," he said casually. "You're just in time. I expect Smiling Tom Cartwright—and here he comes."

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS By Blosser

By HARRY GRAYSON

GABBY STREET calls the New York Yankees of today the greatest team he ever saw.

That only makes it official, or something, but Street has been around a long time and has piloted champions. The current guide of the St. Louis Browns led the Cardinals to pennants in 1930 and 31, beat the Philadelphia Athletics the latter fall. The Old Sarge also gives a reason for the Yankee success: that most other observers overlook completely. His name is Joe McCarthy.

"The Yankees are outstanding because they are a collection of outstanding performers," says Street. "They have remarkable hitters and pitchers. And I consider Joe McCarthy an outstanding manager."

"The Yankees never worry about a contending team. They concentrate on the business at hand. And concentration is highly important in baseball. They overpower the opposition."

"McCarthy is an expert handler of men. In my opinion, he is one of the greatest managers in his story. He deserves much of the credit for the team's success."

"POWERFUL clubs do not always win. Years ago I billiard had a team of great hitters, fellows like Flick and Larry Lajolis, but it didn't win."

"McCarthy employs a common sense. There seldom is a flaw in his strategy."

"McCarthy must have had something to do with making the Yankee pitching staff so formidable. One only has to check McCarthy's record as a manager to realize his worth. He enjoyed tremendous success in the minor and handled bad National League clubs might well before being handed the Yankees on a silver platter. The Yanks got off badly this spring. It looked like a year to beat them, but McCarthy straightened them out."

McCarthy doesn't mix with his players. He handles everyone differently. He tunes down the temperamental ones and keeps-called bad actors in line. Witness the job he did with old Blubber Malone. And when Joe McCarthy can't handle them, he ships them pronto. That's been his tag secret. He has always been the boss.

BILL TERRY'S pitching was to such bad shape that the Giants were forced to open the important Pittsburgh series with Dick Coffman, who had not started in two campaigns.

Had Schumacher pitched and won for the Polo Grounds despite bone splinters in his right elbow.

Terry admits that Schumacher worked with the full knowledge that he might be jeopardizing his future.

"But if the race remains an open issue, I can at least salvage the gate and fulfill some of my obligations to my employers," asserts the Giants' manager. "The team has made money this year and dividends might be increased still further by a good home stand in September, with the Giants fighting right down to the wire. Schumacher has shown the boys what it means to fight. Now let's see them follow his example."

Terry, always the business man, can be depended upon to salvage as much of the gate as possible.

WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Leaders of the movie industry, faced with anti-trust prosecutions, will come here some time this month and promise to be good.

Justice Department officials privately doubt whether the film moguls will promise to be good "enough." Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold has asked dissolution of theater ownership and control by producers, and an end of the block-booking practice which often compels theaters to accept films they don't want. If the movie men conceded that such prosecution undoubtedly would be dropped. But Justice officials suspect their anti-trust suit will go to trial—probably in January.

ABANDONMENT of a federal study of price maintenance laws in the states, begun last April as a WPA project, is formally attributed to fear the work might be duplicated by the Temporary National Economic Committee investigating monopolistic and other business practices.

Actually, the halt was called because of belief trade association executives were having too much of a hand in the project. The objective was an impartial survey of the economic effects of these price maintenance laws, which operate in most states and usually require that retailers must sell drugs of other items at a price set by the manufacturer. Most of these laws were lobbied through state legislatures by trade associations. The T. N. E. C. probably will take over the survey.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S disregard of the A. F. of L.'s protest against reappointment of Donald Wakefield Smith to the National Labor Relations Board may or may not be due to the fact that Smith has been more friendly to A. F. of L. unions than the other Smith on the board, Edwin S. whom William Green also denounces.

Chief objection of the A. F. of L. to NLRB has arisen from the board's occasional nullification of a contract between an A. F. of L. union and an employer on the ground the employer had influenced workers to join the A. F. of L. union and had discriminated against a C. I. O. union.

But the board several times has upheld the A. F. of L.'s contention that votes to choose worker representatives for collective bargaining should be taken by craft units—or partly by crafts—and on such occasions, Donald Smith has voted in the majority with Chairman Warren Madden, while Edwin Smith stood by the C. I. O.'s industrial unionism position. Hence Edwin's sin, in Green's eyes, is greater than Donald's. But Edwin's term doesn't expire until 1941.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

The Huddlers— TWO'S A CROWD around such a lamp!

"Huddling" is perfectly proper on the football field, but it isn't so nice when all the family has to huddle around one reading lamp, just because someone forgot to get a fresh supply of lamp globes. Light is one of the smallest items of household expense, and really there is no reason to crowd around one lamp when you can have all the light you need for only a few cents a day more.

REDDY KILOWATT SAYS:
It's easy to buy lamp globes these days. They are cheaper and you can get them in assorted sizes at drug stores, grocery stores, as well as other stores which sell electric appliances. Put lamp globes on your shopping list and keep a supply on hand to replace burned-out bulbs.

WOODPECKERS Tap Health Into Trees

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—If a woodpecker persists in pecking at shadetreese—let it.
The drum of a woodpecker on a tree is as sweet to the ears of expert tree surgeons as the drumming of Gene Krupa is to the jitter-bugs. The reason:
Every time the hard-billed birds lurch on trees they help preserve them, says Dr. J. Logan Bennett, director of the wildlife research unit at Pennsylvania State College.
"Each hole they drill," he explains, "means the birds have located the larvae of a destructive wood-boring insect. With their heavy bills they get many insects other birds cannot reach."
Instead of hoping that Mr. Woodpecker chokes on a good-sized splinter, let him feast in pecking on your trees for he is one of America's "greatest forest conservationists," Dr. Bennett believes.
