FARM PROGRAM IS RAPPED BY REPUBLICANS

He appealed for farm support of Republican candidates in Ohio, Michigan and Indiana in an effort to obtain a "common sense" solution of the farm problem.

"One does not need to be an agricultural expert," Hamilton said, "to know the New Deal farm program has collapsed."

Hamilton said that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is "frantically searching around for a substitute for the AA setup."

The Business of War Goes Deeper Into the Red

The machines which man has devised for killing his fellows in time of war may have reached a frightening peak of efficiency, but war itself remains the most inefficient means of settling disputes ever invented. In fact, "remains" isn't quite the word; war seems to be getting constantly less efficient.

A Washington correspondent for a New York paper recently dug into the records to find out just how the costs of war stand these days, and he made some surprising and morbidly interesting discoveries.

To take the life of one enemy soldier always was an expensive business; but it is getting so much more expensive that one is forced to wonder how a supposedly intelligent race can go on putting up with the institution.

This correspondent compared the expenses the United States incurred in two wars—the War Between the States, 1861-65, and in the World War in 1917-18.

In the earlier war, the federal army fired some 5,000,000 rounds of ammunition, making casualties out of 340,000 Confederates. During the World War, the British, French and American armies fired upwards of 600,000,000 rounds of ammunition, with which they killed 3,400,000 of their enemies. If you will do a little arithmetic, you will see that it takes about 12 times as many rounds of ammunition now to kill a man as it did in the days of the smooth-bore muzzle-loaders.

All of this means a tremendous increase in the cost of running a war. In the Civil War, it cost the northern government approximately $13,800 for each Confederate soldier slain; in the World War, the cost per casualty had jumped to $36,000. In the earlier war, the government spent just a little more than $3,480,000 a day; in the World War, its daily expense ran to more than $98,000,000. In the Civil War, a federal battery fired on an average four rounds per day, from start to finish; in the World War, the average had jumped to 30 rounds per day.

If the institution under consideration were anything but war, a set of figures like these would mean a public scandal—followed by a drastic shakeup. But war, by its very nature, is the most expensive, inefficient, and illogical way possible of settling a dispute.

It kills off a nation's best men and lets its least fit survive. It creates two new quarrels for every one it disposes of. It is disastrous to the winner as well as to the loser. It creates debts that are never paid off and destroys in a year more than can be built up in a generation of peace. It is living and terrible proof that for all his high attainments man is still only a little way out of the jungle.

So need we be surprised to learn that it is steadily getting less and less efficient?

Late news from the European countries seems to indicate that it may be months before they actually get down to brass hats.

South Only Nine Inches Away From Prosperity—Mr. Smith

Greenville, Miss.—Comes now one C. S. (Shirttail) Smith with a double-barreled proposal to solve the south's cotton surplus problem and bring comfort and protection to suffering males by adding inches to shirttails.

Eager and anxious to spread his gospel, Mr. Smith posed for the picture at right with a yardstick strapped to his back to prove his shirttail is only 29 inches long or 9 inches less than what he claims is standard—38 inches.

A nation-wide acceptance of his plan for adding inches to all shirts would bring health and prosperity to the south by increasing cotton consumption, and a new joy in living for all men, argues Smith.

Mr. Smith sets forth that he is 5 feet, 11 inches tall and wears a 15 1/2 shirt with a 34 sleeve, and by rights should get a 38-inch shirttail with every shirt he buys. Says Mr. Smith:

"The manufacturer, not being under restrictions, has cheated the cotton surplus out of 9 inches of cloth. Add this shortage to the hundreds of millions of shirttails—and there's the remedy. Simple and inexpensive. The picture tells the tale.

"The theory I've been fighting for is at least a partial cure for our great economic ills. Yet it is so simple, and the remedy so easily applied, it is almost unbelievable. While the world has acknowledged my theory, and two countries have taken action on it, my own country is slow to apply the remedy because it is just too simple, too inexpensive. We look for costly, complicated, distasteful remedies."

C. S. Smith—He says shirt-tails are too short and uses a yardstick to prove it.

Quints Make Mark in Hollywood

The quint's five sets of shoes, worn in their newest movie, "Five of a Kind," were blown from Callender, Ont., for use as ornaments.

Dead Deer Escapes After It Is Bagged

OROVILLE, Calif.—This year's open season for deer has produced almost as many deer stories as it has dead deer. The local one concerns two hunters who bagged a buck, tagged its horns, and then decided to take it to camp on the running board of their automobile.

SAVING SOIL IS DISCUSSED BY E. V. COOK

"Winter Cover Saves Our Soil," Says County Agent.

Protecting our sandy land against blowing and washing in the Winter and Spring by the use of a cover crop is one of the greatest forward steps our Eastland County farmers can take in soil saving, is the belief of County Agent Cook who is pointing out several individuals in the County who have either been using this practice for years or who plan to start it now.

Some are planning to protect the land and at the same time add badly needed humus to the soil by growing grasses such as Italian rye grass and Abruzzi rye and turning them under in the Spring in time to prepare the land for planting.

Others are planning to go still further in soil building by planting legumes such as hairy winter vetch, southern giant bur clover, and Austrian winter peas which when turned under not only add humus to the soil but also enrich the nitrogen content of the soil by sustaining on their roots bacteria which take nitrogen from the air and add it to the soil.

Regardless of whether grasses or legumes are planted it is necessary to have a fairly firm, well prepared seed bed ready to plant just as soon as it rains, is the advice of Cook. Italian rye grass can be broadcast on land where peanuts have been harvested without any further preparation and a light harrow used to cover the seed shallow. Abruzzi rye can be drilled or the same method used as for the Italian rye. 20 to 30 pounds of either seed per acre are sufficient. A small acreage of the grasses should be harvested when the seed mature for a seed supply for another year. The remainder SOMETHING different for breakfast? Also a recipe for chocolate steamed pudding? Here are the answers.

Fried Hominy Grits
(Serves 4 to 6)

Stir one cup of flour into one cup of hominy grits. Four slowly into boiling salted water (1 teaspoon salt to each quart of water) in top of double boiler. Set over boiling water and cook until grits are tender and water absorbed—about one hour.

Pour into mold which has been rinsed with cold water. When mixture is thoroughly cold and firm, cut into slices and saute in butter until crisp and golden brown. Serve hot with butter and corn syrup, to pour on top.

Steamed Chocolate Pudding
(10 servings)

Two cups sifted cake flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup butter or other shortening, 1-2 cup sugar, 1 egg well beaten, 3 squares unsweetened chocolate, should be turned under green to improve the land.

Winter legumes such as hairy winter vetch, southern giant bur clover, and Austrian winter peas should be fertilized with superphosphate fertilizer, at least 100 pounds per acre as they will not make satisfactory growth otherwise on sandy soil that has been cropped very long, when they are turned under in the Spring the phosphate as well as the nitrogen are returned to the soil and there is no fertilizer lost. This system just amounts to adding the phosphate several months ahead of the cash crop (usually peanuts) and getting back both phosphate and nitrogen plant food.

Unless seed are to be saved, plant about 20 pounds of vetch seed per acre mixed with rye, or other small grain. It pays to inoculate the seed at planting time. The cost of the inoculant is about 25 cents per bushel of seed.

Southern giant bur clover is recommended for Eastland county because the seed cost are less than other legumes per acre seeded, the seed can be saved and at the same time the plant growth can be turned under, and it will LUNCHEON: Tomato green peppers stuffed with baked beans, fruit bowl, cookies, tea, milk.

DINNER: Veal birds, mushroom sauce, stuffed baked potatoes, spinach, lettuce salad, steamed chocolate pudding, foamy sauce, coffee, milk.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, soda and salt, sift together three times. Cream butter, add sugar gradually, as cream together thoroughly. Add egg and chocolate, beating until smooth. Add flour, alternated with milk, a small amount at a time, beating well after each addition.

Turn into greased mold filled 2-3 full, cover tightly and steam 2 hours. Serve hot with foamy sauce, whipped cream or hot melted, 1 cup milk.

reseed itself if given a reasonable opportunity. The seed, in the bur, should be mixed with as much well rotted barnyard manure as is available and scattered by hand in the shallow furrow left where the middles are plowed up. If the middles are furrowed just before the seed matures the ripe burrs will roll into the furrow where they can be swept into piles and saved. There will even then be enough seed left to reseed the land. Southern giant bur clover matures early enough to be turned under before Spring planting time.

Austrian winter peas have not proved as successful in Eastland county as was expected probably because the land was not fertilized and the seed were not always inoculated. They should be planted in much the same manner as summer cowpeas except at least twice as

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

Coach Ernie Moore of Louisiana State University has announced that one of the members of his backfield has been dismissed from the LSU squad for breaking training, newspapers announced today. Moore did not elaborate, but just announced he was dismissed for not observing the team's training rules.

There have been rumors up and down Main Street the last day or two that something similar is about to happen to the Bulldogs, though we have heard nothing definite about it, just the rumors. But, instead of just one man it seems, rumor has it, that there are several, at least three.

Rumors are not always correct, but they have it that there might be a pickup in the lineup, one that will not help the Bulldogs any, but which might be a big help to the Buckaroos.

If it is true that some of them are breaking training, and we have been told emphatically that some have, with names, dates and every thing furnished, this is a bad time for such a thing to pop up, just before the hardest game of the season, and just at a time when every Bulldog needs to be at his very best to even come close to holding the Buckaroos.

Training rules for every football team are rather rigid. But that is what it takes to make a good team. The kind of teams Ranger has had for the past few years can be maintained without rigid training, but not the kind that win championships, or even closely contested games with evenly matched teams. But the training period is relatively short and anyone should be able to observe a simple method of living for three months, for the good of the team and themselves. Breaking training is not fair to the coaches, not fair to other boys who are trying hard to help produce a winning team, it does the boy who breaks training no good, in fact it does him harm, and creates an unpleasant atmosphere.

Personally we have not observed some of the things that have been reported to us, but if they are true, and they come from reliable sources as the news agency reporters like to phrase it, Breckenridge has two strikes on the Bulldogs before they meet—if anyone does not mind such a thorough mixing of athletic terms.

We hope the ones who made the reports to us are mistaken and that it was a couple of other guys they saw.

P. S.—There is no need to go out to watch the practices this week—they are secret and all gates are locked.

Legion Leader Makes Statement Upon Poppy Sale

Veterans of the World War are urged to pay tribute to their fallen comrades on Poppy Day, Friday, October 21, in a message issued today by Lee Dockery, commander of the Carl Barnes Post No. 69, of the American Legion.

dead and help the disabled and fatherless families. The poppies have been made by disabled veterans unable to do other work. Contributions received for the flowers will be used in the welfare activities of the auxiliary, the bulk of the proceeds to be used here in Ranger.

"Twenty-one years have passed since the call to war came, but we of the Legion have not forgotten. We are still devoted to the ideals for which we fought and hold high the memory of those who died in service to the country. We hope that all patriotic citizens will join us in wearing a poppy on Poppy Day."

Ranger Boys Seek Council Positions

Robert Herring and C. E. May of Ranger are candidates for Boy Representative to the Student Council of the Senior Class at John Tarleton College.

The campaign is held along party lines, and each year there is much rivalry in the elections.

Australia Economics Held As Example

By United Press MONTREAL.—Australia could give Canada a lesson in economic, governmental administration and industrial development. Canadian M.P., told the St. Lawrence Kiwanis club here.

Australia has almost 50 per cent of its population in its five large cities and yet unemployment there is only 7 per cent, 2 per cent less than normal, he said. Howard attributed the favorable condition to the development of Australia's secondary industries and to the ability of farmers to make money on cattle sales.

There will be a series of political rallies held on the campus before the election. One party is planning a "hill-billy" campaign, spiced with mountain music furnished by a string band.

SERIAL STORY MURDER TO MUSIC

BY NARD JONES
COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
MYRA NORTH—heroine, wife of the sensational swing band leader.
ROBERT TAIT—hero, newspaper photographer—detective.
ANNIE LESTER—Myra's close friend.
DANNIE FEELEY—officer assigned to investigate Ludden Dombey's murder.

Yesterday's Knocking Rogers Tait obtains the band records, delivers them to Feeley. They show Dombey spent $200 in one month for flowers for one woman.

CHAPTER XIII

TAIT laughed at Dannie Feeley's reference to the flowers which Dombey had ordered. "If you start looking up the women for whom Ludden Dombey bought flowers in the month of May it will keep you plenty busy. I have an idea you'll run across a lot of florist's bills in this bunch of stuff."

Tait was right. There were bills from florists by the dozens—and sometimes there were letters from florists, very pointed ones, inquiring as to when payment could be expected. There were the same kind of letters from tailors and shoemakers.

"This guy Dombey certainly let loose a lot of change whenever his creditors caught up with him," Feeley said.

Tait did not answer at once. In his hand he held a sheet of yellow paper and he was studying it intently. "Here," he said at last, in response to Feeley's inquiring gaze. "Now we're getting at something."

"What is it?"

"It's the contract with the fellow who wrote the song 'The Cat's Meow.'"

"Well, what about it?"

"Just this: Ludden Dombey was supposed to have written the song. It's made a big hit. But he didn't write it. An unknown, down-and-out musician wrote it, and he made a contract with Dombey to use it under Dombey's name—for a royalty. But Dombey got behind in those payments, too."

Feeley's eyes narrowed. "How'd you know that, and why in the hell did you tell me?"

"I haven't known it long enough to tell anybody. But Harris Rogers told me, and that's why I was anxious to get hold of these records."

"Now maybe we've got something," Feeley cried, snatching at the yellow sheet. "Does it give the guy's name?"

Tait nodded. "I take that signature to be George K. Weeks."

FEELEY grabbed for the telephone. "They ought to have his address at the musicians' union." He whirled a mechanical number pad on his desk, began dialing furiously. Then into the phone he barked. "Let me talk to Jamison . . . Hello, Jamie? . . . This is Feeley down at headquarters. Have you got the address of a musician by the name of George K. Weeks?" Feeley drummed the desk, waiting. Then: "Okay. Thanks, Jamie." He replaced the instrument in its cradle and turned to Tait. "Hain't paid his dues for a year and isn't a member any longer. The address they have for him is in the south end—lodging house district. He may still be there." Feeley reached for his hat. "Want to leave this a while and see what luck we have?"

"Sure thing."

The two climbed into one of the headquarters' cars and sped toward the south end. Feeley was a demon at the wheel, and his police siren effectively took care of the traffic. "How long do I have to work for the force before I can have a police siren?" Tait asked humorously.

Feeley spat over his shoulder. "You got to get a car to put it on first."

"I've had cars," said Tait. "I've had cars a darned lot better than this crate. Of course right now I'm renting one."

"Say—," Feeley began hesitantly. "That is, I probably could get you on the payroll, photographing evidence and that stuff." The big Irishman was embarrassed at his own kindness.

"Thanks, pal. I'd rather stick to a newspaper. And right now I'm too busy to find a job."

Feeley looked at him. "What you going to get out of this? A girl?"

"Listen, Dannie. You're the second guy that's made that crack to me. The first one who made it almost got a sock in the puss. Only the fact that I love you so much saves you from the same fate."

"Also the fact that I'd take all your wheels out and scatter them down the road," mentioned Feeley imperturbably. He wheeled toward the curb. "This is the block."

THEY stopped in front of a dingy gray flat with the inevitable badly-lettered sign: Room to Let. Feeley and Tait got out, and in another moment were rapping at the weather-beaten door.

The woman who answered looked amazingly like the place she kept. "Wanta room?" she said, somewhat suspiciously.

"No, thanks," Feeley told her. "We want to see an old friend of ours by the name of Weeks—George K. Weeks."

The woman snorted. "He ain't been here for a long time. And he owes me rent, too!"

"Do you know where he went?"

"If I did," snapped the woman, arms akimbo, "I'd be getting what he owes me or know the reason why."

"When did he skip?"

"On the night of the 14th, it was," said the landlady. "Sometime between 11 and 11:30 when I was over visitin' Mrs. Kremer. I know when it was exactly, because I'd been keepin' an eye on him. I thought he was still in the room, but he must have got away on me. And he owes me seventeen dollars and eight-five cents. I ought to charge him two dollars for scuffing the table, but I'd be satisfied to get my rent and bid goodby to him."

"Well, we want him, too, sister," said Dannie Feeley. "And if we find him we'll remind him about the rent."

"I'll bet you will," answered the woman, her tone plainly indicating that she would wager quite the contrary.

AS they climbed into the car, Feeley said: "He beat it on the 14th, between 11 and 11:30. Did you get that?"

"I did. That was about when Ludden Dombey took his last bow."

"Yeah. Looks like you hit something hot, son."

Tait nodded. "Only we don't know where it is. Mind if I ask a question, professor?"

"Shoot," said Feeley, shoving the car into gear.

"Why didn't you ask that woman what Weeks looked like?"

Feeley grunted. "Never ask a landlady about the appearance of a bird who's run away owing her money. She'd say he was a weazened, sneaky-looking guy with cross eyes. I'd rather trust a description from Jamie—and maybe he's got a picture. Suppose you go back to Dombey's records, and I'll bust over to the union office."

The Homecoming Dance to Be In Old Elks Building

The dance, to be staged Friday night, October 21, in connection with the second annual Ranger homecoming, will be at the old Elks building, next door to the Arcadia Theatre, it was stated today by D. M. Cooper, chairman of the dance committee.

Bob Blackman and his Varsityians, a 12-piece orchestra with a girl vocalist, has been secured for the dance, which will start after the Ranger-Breckenridge football game, which is to be played that night.

It was stated that the dance would start approximately 30 minutes after the game in order that those who desired to do so could have time to go home and change for the dance.

J. E. Meroney and C. E. May were in Dallas today, contacting a bonding company there in reference to raising the bond for the Ranger bonded warehouse. It was estimated there were nearly 800,000 pounds of peanuts still in the Ranger area which have not been stored.

THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—Can you conceive of Adolf Hitler as an exponent of peace on earth and good will to men?

Some of the State Department masterminds had to stretch their imaginations considerably, but they did. At least, they imagined a Hitler who could so picture himself in moments of introspection.

This story is given only for what it's worth. But it's a fact that men who worked on President Roosevelt's second cablegram to Hitler actually tried a little long-distance psychoanalysis of the Fuehrer.

Clearing their minds of personal prejudice, they checked closely with Foreign Service men who thought they knew something of the Hitler character. The analysis produced, to be brief, a picture of a soldier with Nietzsche in his philosophical background—a man who considers himself godlike. A man with possibilities of philosophical ecstasy which at best could blaze into fine idealism and at worst into sheer insanity.

In other words, the boys figured that there might be a side of the Hitler character that they could appeal to. What Mr. Roosevelt thought of it all is not known to this writer. But it was the basis of a special appeal, evidenced especially by assurance to Hitler that a great war would rise up ever against him. But it was the basis of a special appeal, evidenced especially by assurance to Hitler that a great war would rise up ever against him.

DON'T be surprised if Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace gets a tryout, as the next New Deal fair-haired boy for the 1946 Democratic nomination. And don't be surprised if he doesn't. The less talk you hear about Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson and Harry Hopkins, both more or less ruled out when incipient boom to make first one and then the other governor of New York fizzled, the more you hear about Wallace.

Wallace has been at the White House doghouse since he failed to support Congressman Otha Wearut against Senator Guy Gillette in the Iowa primaries. But his attitude in that contest didn't injure his presidential possibilities. If he survives the present farm program storm you may find Roosevelt an Wallace getting chummy as chummy.

But Wallace hasn't a prayer for the 1946 nomination unless Roosevelt does get behind him.

NEW YORK.—Sid Luckman is the first real 1938 candidate for an All-America position.

He plays more left halfback than what is good for opponents of Columbia's spectacular Light Blues, whom experts say could not have repulsed Yale without him.

Luckman was a towering figure on a weak team last fall. Old-timers, including Ducky Pond, the Yale coach, can recall no individual . . . not even the Elis' Clint Frank . . . who ever stood out so magnificently in a game as Luckman did against the Blue.

He gave a demonstration of the aerial art which would cause a Sammy Baugh, Benny Friedman, Harry Newman, or Dixie Howell to smart with envious, completing 16 of 17 for a total of 169 yards. He did not make a poor pass. Not once did he miss his man. The passes that were incomplete were dropped or bobbed.

Luckman carried 20 times for 103 yards. He punted seven times for an average of 35 yards from the line of scrimmage, which means an average of 48 yards. One kick was blocked. He thrice picked up extra points with place-kicks.

Luckman is no gazelle, but he is far from being slow and is a determined runner. He is a blocker, a tackler, an imaginative and commanding field general and signal-caller, a safety man who makes no mistakes, and the slickest kind of a faker.

You drag out the dictionary of superlatives in discussing Luckman. Grizzled observers consider his 50-yard pass in the Yale game the most unusual football feat they ever witnessed.

Thirty seconds before the half, fourth down, with six yards to go, Luckman went back in kick formation, faked a run, faked a short pass, shook off two tacklers who apparently had him pinned, and made his Titanic toss. The ball settled in Frank Stulgaitis' arms in the end zone for a touchdown.

That wasn't the way the play was supposed to go, but Luckman is an instinctive athlete capable of making his own way and picking his spots when something goes awry.

Luckman stands 5 feet 11 inches and comes in at 194 pounds, six of which he lost in the Yale game and picked right up again. He is a product of Erasmus Hall High School of Brooklyn. He plays another variety sport or two but not very well.

Luckman was football-minded as a boy, when his idol was Ken Strong, famous New York University and New York Giant back.

Modest to extreme, he is unaffected by sports page comment. Someone said to him just before the Yale game: "I hope you get a good start toward an All-America berth."

"I'd trade that All-America stuff right now for two touchdowns against Yale," replied Luckman.

He scored the first four and engineered the other three.

You have to see Sid Luckman to believe what you hear and read about him.
