KIDNAPING IS BELIEVED BACK OF A MURDER

By United Press
SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 2.—Officers announced today they were seeking an ex-convict for questioning in the shooting of Dr. David Carson, of Kerrville.

The ex-convict formerly was a patient at the Veterans' hospital at Kerrville, where Dr. Carson was a staff physician. Witnesses told officers Dr. Carson borrowed $500 from a Kerrville bank Monday and a short time later gave the money to the convict.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Nov. 2.—David Carson, 60, Kerrville, was found shot to death today. Officers believed he had been kidnaped and had reason to believe his death was not a suicide, one of said.

Carson's body was found in a car. He had been shot in the head. A .32 calibre revolver from which one bullet had fired, lay beside his body. The gun was turned over to the Department of Public Safety.

Officers of the Peace Raymond said he would withhold his verdict until after a complete investigation.

Officers working on the case searching for strangers seen in Kerrville, Dr. Carson's physician, appeared yesterday.

For bottle, several beer and several vials of what was believed to be a narcotic were found in his car.

Atmosphere Chill as Ruth Etting Testifies

Songstress Ruth Etting, left, and Mrs. Alina Alderman, right, who is suing Miss Etting for $150,000 charging alienation of her former husband's affections, are at great pains in this picture to avoid each other's eyes. They are shown with attorneys as Miss Etting refuted her former statement that she is married to Myrl Alderman. Alderman is recovering from a bullet wound inflicted by Martin (Moe) Snyder, former husband of Miss Etting. Mrs. Alderman now seeks a court order compelling Alderman to tell of his relations with Miss Etting, which the blues-singer described as "platonic." At the time of the shooting in the Etting Hollywood home, she said they married last July.

WORLD RUSHES TO BUY PLANES FROM AMERICA

By FRANK P. S. GLANSEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—World-wide rearmament programs have pushed the sales of American aircraft manufacturers to record heights. Today, with major nations frantically adding to their air forces as an aftermath of the Munich Four-Power agreement, leading plane factories are working on a 24-hour basis, and backlogs of unfilled orders are at unprecedented levels.

Sales of military planes to the army and navy constitute the principal source of orders in the industry, but the governments of Great Britain, Holland, France, Yugoslavia, Brazil, Guatemala and other European and South American countries are increasingly turning to American manufacturers to fill the demand that cannot be met by their own companies.

United States aircraft production last year was valued at $56,360,105. Of that total, $37,071,169, or 66 per cent represented planes for military use. Exports of planes, engines and parts totaled $39,128,692.

Both production and exports will establish new records this year, and leaders in the industry confidently predict further gains in 1939. They admit that armament programs are primarily responsible for the boom, although sales of transport planes are also rising steadily if less spectacularly.

Approximately 40,000 men are employed in American aircraft factories, of which the largest are located in California. Four major aircraft corporations operating in or near Los Angeles reported late in October that as a result of large orders from Great Britain, Canada, Yugoslavia, Rumania, the Netherlands, Australia and Japan, their combined backlogs had reached an all-time peak of more than $70,000,000.

The British air ministry has placed some of the largest orders recently received by American companies. The Lockheed Aircraft Corporation of California on Oct. 10 signed a contract with the British government for the largest spare parts order ever received by the concern. This contract, calling for $3,900,000 of extra equipment, complements the order received last June from the British air ministry for 200 reconnaissance bombers costing approximately $18,000,000.

Orders to be filled by this company before the end of 1939, in addition to that from the British air ministry, include a fleet of 13 twin-engined personnel transports for the army air corps, a $690,000 order for the Netherlands East Indian government, and orders from the U. S. navy, Aeroport Airlines of Yugoslavia and British Airways, Ltd.

The Ryan Aeronautical Company of California has been more active in the Central American market. On Oct. 18 the company announced the signing of a contract with Guatemala for six S-T-M military training planes. A similar number of S-T-M planes had been delivered to the Guatemalan air force three months earlier.

Leading aircraft manufacturers are making plans for switching to mass-production methods to speed up output for the army, whose immediate plans include increasing the air force to 4,120 planes. The army now has approximately 1,500 first-line planes, with an additional 1,000 under construction. The government is reportedly considering standardization processes to facilitate mass production.

North American Aviation, Inc., which is strictly a military concern, is manufacturing two basic combat ships a day to fulfill heavy department requirements. This marked a new record in production since the World War.

BRITISH PEACE PLANS TAKING FORM SLOWLY

By United Press
Great Britain's program for peace with dictators took form slowly today on its important points.

Coincident with an appeal by U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull for the world to follow a trade pathway toward peaceful relations, the plans of Chamberlain were reaching the same objectives, were summed up as:

- 1—Friendship treaty with Italy, with steps toward isolating the Spanish civil war and inaugurating friendly collaboration among Britain, France, Italy and Germany.
- 2—Negotiations for an agreement abolishing gas warfare and banning bombardment of civilian populations.
- 3—Settlement of Germany's demands for return of pre-war colonies.

A plan rumored in Paris was for a "ceiling" on arms to equalize the big four powers. There have been almost daily indications that there was a strong degree of bluffing about the armed strength of Germany at the time of the Munich conference.

Elsewhere:
AUSTRALIA, Nov. 2.—The government ordered 50 aerial bombers from the United States.

TOKYO, Nov. 2.—Japan, re-echoing hints that the "open door" in China may be closed, announced today it considered the government of Chiang Kai-shek only a "local" Chinese regime. Japanese relations with the League of Nations were ended formally.

Tax Collector Hatreds May Cut Expenditures

The United States government is a great institution, and it does things which no other government in all history ever did before. As for instance: during the fiscal year 1938 it collected in internal revenue taxes approximately $5,659,000,000—the largest sum which any government ever collected in any 12-month period.

After a figure gets about so high it ceases to have any meaning. Perhaps we can better understand it by realizing that this amounts to just about a quarter of the entire world's stock of monetary gold—all of the metal that has been mined since the discovery of America, the product of Inca mines and California and Alaskan gold booms, of Australian rushes and South African bonanzas. Four centuries of gold-hunting would pay for just four years like this last one. And with all of that, our government still operates at a deficit!

Nor is the end in sight. Relief and public works are still with us, to say nothing of agricultural surpluses and the army and navy. We are about to launch a new preparedness program and double the size of our air force. No, we can hardly hope that this particular kind of record-breaking finance is going to end in the immediate future.

But perhaps it will be worth all it costs if it compels us to reexamine the whole question of the relationship between government and citizens. For the world today seems to be sweeping along a road which leads to greater and greater subordination of the individual to the state. In some lands that subordination is complete; man exists for the state, he may read and speak and act and even think only as the state directs, and his life and property are in every detail at the disposal of the state.

We have not reached or even approached that point in this country. Given halfway decent luck and the exercise of ordinary intelligence, we need not approach it. Yet this colossal tax collection may help us to understand that the trend in human affairs is running that way.

The remedy, unfortunately, is not simple. It is easy to say, "Cut down the cost of government," but very hard to suit action to the words. And in the long run we can protect ourselves against this trend only by remembering constantly the oldest truth of American democracy—that government exists to serve the citizens, and that as a general thing it serves him best by leaving him alone.

There may be emergencies in which it can't leave him alone; times when it must spend huge sums to give him service of protection that he can't get for himself. Then costs go up and taxes mount. But we can keep government from developing, through these emergency activities, into a colossus that is our master rather than our servant. And our natural antipathy to the tax-collector ought to help us keep that in mind.

South for the Winter

It Could Only Happen Here

cause they are the ones that the hunter gets a chance to take during an open season. These birds compared to the non-game birds are by far the less numerous. The non-game birds are the ones that are the most useful to us, and especially useful to the farmer in his fight against insects. The Bobwhite quail is classed as a game bird, but it is also a good fighter against insects.

Let us look at a few of the non-game birds that we have in this section. Their beauty and value cannot be bought at any price. Their usefulness is seldom seen until they are gone from us. Everyone should do his part in protecting these birds and preventing the killing of them by small boys with their "nigger" shooters, air rifles and other small bore rifles.

The mocking bird is probably the most beautiful song bird that we have in Texas. Every one knows this bird on sight, and who does not love to hear the cheerful notes produced by this beautiful bird? Surely they do deserve all the protection that we can give them.

However they do some damage to the berry patches but their control of insects in these patches more than pays for the few berries that they eat. I have been told by people from the northern states that they would give anything in the world, if they could get the mocking bird to stay up there in those northern states.

There are some who do not know how to appreciate them until we have to do without them and cannot hear their cheerful notes. There are probably many who do not know that the thirty-sixth legislature in 1919 officially recognized the Texas State bird to be the mocking bird.

Other non-game birds that we have in this section are most useful to the cotton farmer in his fight against the cotton boll weevil and other insects and are most beautiful to look at. Surely, every land owner would do all that he could to get these birds to remain on his land. These birds are: plover, kildeer, red-headed woodpecker, flickers, night hawks, chimney swifts, scissor-tailed flycatcher (commonly known as

GREAT AND HUMBLE FROM FAR AND NEAR WILL HONOR WILL ROGERS AT CLAREMORE CEREMONIES ON FRIDAY

Perched proudly on the knoll where Will Rogers always wanted to build a home, but somehow never did, this solid building of native limestone is being dedicated as a permanent memorial to the man who launched a thousand quips, and never an unkind one.

One in a thousand—this picture of the late Will Rogers, now being honored by a memorial in his home town of Claremore, Okla., was selected as his favorite picture by Will's son from the family collection of more than 1000 "favorite pictures" of their famous father.

CLAREMORE, Okla., Nov. 2. — If, in some celestial hideaway, Will Rogers is still getting all his knowledge of earthly goings-on from this that the folks back in Claremore are going to do something big for him Nov. 4th.

Yes, sir, they're going to dedicate a $200,000 memorial museum to Will on that day—which would have been his 39th birthday if Wiley Post's plane hadn't plunged to earth three years ago.

They've built the memorial of native Rogers county limestone on a ridge that Will always allowed he'd like to build a house on himself, some day, but he never got around to it.

There will be plenty of celebrities present, of the kind Will liked to hob-nob around with when he was reading the papers and commenting on what they said. It will be the kind of a ceremony where you'd always have been likely to find Will himself, a few years ago, and then you'd have read all about it in the next morning's paper with a kindly crack from Will.

There'll be speeches by Governor Marland and Jesse Jones, Howard Hughes, Douglas Corrigan, Eddie Rickenbacker, Eddie Cantor, Fred Stone, and George Cohan will be there, and maybe 50,000 other people. And, of course, Mrs. Rogers and the three Rogers children.

WILL'S RELATIVES TO BE ON HAND BUT it wouldn't be right to have only the famous and great taking over a memorial for Will Rogers, and so the Becone College Glee Club will sing, and the Oklahoma Military College and A. M. College bands will play, too. And Will's own relatives, including Herbert McSpadden, who is running Will's old ranch near Okologah, will be up for the ceremony. Mrs. McSpadden, a little dubious about the great like of limestone, "It would have been too gaudy for Will," she said.

Built like a ranch house, it has four exhibition halls, and once over the rich, lush landscape that attracted Clem Rogers, Will's father, and that Will loved so well. Already an Indian and pioneer relic, Will's old ranch and from his home in Santa Monica, Calif., been sent on by his family to be installed in the museum.

BIG RODEO AND PAGEANT THERE'LL be a big rodeo pageant of the Old West. Will would have liked if he saw it, because he used to like Pavnee Bill and Col. Annuity T. Miller are arranging it, and one thousand will take part in it. Episodes of early Oklahoma history beginning with the Battle of Claremore Mound between the Osages and the Cherokees will be given, the night parade under lights resounding the plunking of horses' hooves against the blacksnake whistles.

No one need be surprised, though, if during the thick pageantry and hullabaloo, a but unearthy voice should be heard saying: "Shucks! I was just a cowhand who had a little. Why all this here fuss about does not permit the name them all. I suggest that you to the United States Department of Agriculture and ask for No. 55 for more information these valuable birds. One may help increase birds by killing all wild houn-

MURDER TO MUSIC

BY NARD JONES

COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS MYRA DOMBNEY—heroine. Wife of the sensational swing band leader. ROBERT TAIT—hero. Newspaper photographer—detective. ANNE LESTER—Myra's closest friend. DANVIE FEELY—officer assigned to investigate Ludden Dombney's murder.

Yesterday, Detective Feely and Tait met the song writer, Weeks, in the hotel lobby. Feely is certain that he is the murderer.

CHAPTER XXVI

FEELY and Tait walked toward the tall, pale man. He had already spotted them, his eyes burning with an unnatural eagerness.

"Are you Mr. Weeks?" Feely asked. "Yes..." The man's voice was weak, curiously nervous.

"I'm Elliott Farnsworth. This is Robert Tait, manager of The Swingers. Perhaps you've heard of him?"

"Oh, indeed." "Mr. Tait is naturally interested in the song we select as the swing hit. In fact, he's made arrangements with our firm to introduce it at the Golden Bowl."

The man nodded. "As was done with 'The Cat's Meow'?"

"There was an odd intonation in the remark which sent a chill down Tait's spine. 'You—you brought your song with you, Mr. Weeks?'"

Weeks tapped the side of his head. "Yes, it is here, with me." He smiled. "If I could play it for you?"

Tait looked at Feely. "We can go into the Golden Bowl and use the piano in there. You play, Mr. Weeks?"

"Oh, yes, I play, I am not a musician like, let us say, Ludden Dombney, who couldn't read music but could only make weird noises on a clarinet."

"Good... let's go into the Golden Bowl."

I Give You Texas

BY BOYCE HOUSE

A little boy in an old Southern town went home from school sobbing because the son of a banker had poked fun at his home-made clothes. That was a good many years ago. A white boy, the man returned to the town on a visit. He had become one of the most famous preachers in the nation.

As he was talking to a group of former schoolmate, a shabby individual came shuffling forward. Someone said, "You remember Bill?" It was the banker's son.

years, so badly disguised as to be not disguised at all. Tait looked at Feely. That individual, who never paid the slightest attention to popular songs, was entranced at Weeks' simple ability to play the piano. As the musician finished, Tait nudged Feely. The latter straightened. "Well..." he hesitated. "Well, it's very good." He turned to Tait. "After all, Tait, your band has to introduce it. What's your opinion?"

Tait said. "But of course I want to hear others and make some comparisons." "You want to hear the words?" said Weeks. "That's not necessary," Tait said. "Not now, at least. A lyric can always be worked over, if the tune has the stuff."

Weeks' eyes narrowed. "You mean to infer that perhaps this tune I have just played does not have the stuff?" "I didn't say that," Tait answered. The tall musician arose from the piano bench. "Listen," he said, "I said I could tell you something of interest about this very popular song, this 'The Cat's Meow.' I wrote that song! Do you understand?" Weeks' eyes were glittering. "I wrote it! And I can show the agreement Dombney made with me. An agreement which he did not keep. It was a song which made thousands—for Dombney. And now, Mr. Tait, do you know what is going to happen? You are going to give me a place in your band and let me introduce my new song. You are going to do it because, if you refuse, I will make a public announcement which will ruin your band."

TAIT could have kicked himself senseless. What had he blundered into? What had he done just when it looked as if the band might come out from under its obligations? The recording company had been staved off only temporarily, and if this mad man should blab, then Montgomery of the recording firm would swoop down, too, for Dombney's lapses of contract.

Seen in Austin recently: J. J. Gallagher, former mayor of Graham. Under a spreading oak that still stands in the yard of the hotel which Gallagher owns, the Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association was organized 40 years or more ago.

Harry Brelsford was a captain during the World War when he was two months past 18. Do you know of a younger A. E. F. captain than that? When he left the army at the close of the war, he was commissioned a major in the reserve—at 19. Now an attorney in Tulsa, Major Brelsford was born and reared in Eastland.

Fort Worth dramatic critics are still chuckling about the famous columnist and scenario writer of Manhattan and Hollywood who, between cocktails, delivered a lecture on the etiquette—or lack of it—of the American people. Halfway through the discourse, he slumped forward and fell asleep with his head in a plate of scrambled eggs.

"Texas' foremost orator" is the way one newspaper writer referred to T. J. Holbrook, retiring senator from Galveston. This reminds one of the story concerning Caruso, who greeted John McCormack with, "How's the world's greatest tenor this morning?" To which the Irishman replied, "When did you start singing bass?" Similarly, when did Pat Neff move out of the state?

The ablest orator among the candidates in the recent primaries was Ralph Yarborough, who sought the Attorney Generalship. "The greatest speech I've heard since Jim Hogg," was the tribute that elderly East Texas citizenry paid to his oratory.

Speaking of spellbinders, C. C. McDonald is no sloach and neither is Alvin Owsley, American minister to Denmark. For humor, Mark McGee is hard to beat. Jimmy Allred is not to be sneezed at, although he may find that the federal bench cramps his evangelistic style.

Old business correspondence yielded a parchment map which showed the way to a gold cache of $70,000 in France. That's gold in them thar bills.

used it since—since Dombney was killed." "Very well." The musician drew himself straighter. "That will be enough, for the present." He looked at Farnsworth. "But I think it would be well for Mr. Tait to convince you that my new song is worth $10,000 advance against royalties."

Feely turned a little pink, and Tait put in quickly, "I'm sure Mr. Farnsworth will give it every consideration." He held out his hand. "I'll see you tonight, then, Mr. Weeks. The band will need no rehearsal for 'The Cat's Meow.' I'll have 'Torchy' Stephens arrange for a piano solo for you on it. I think it'll be a hit."

Gravely Weeks shook hands with Tait and Feely, bowed low, and walked across the afternoon emptiness of the Golden Bowl. The two stood looking after him until he had gone out the wide doors which led to the lobby. Feely took a step forward, and Tait restrained him. "I'll take the job of following him, Dannie. Is that okay with you?"

Feely nodded. "Sure, but don't let him slip. That's our man, Bob. He's done murder and attempted murder—and now he's going to try a little blackmail. . . . That wasn't a bad piece he played, though, was it?"

"It was awful, Dannie. And the fact that it's awful has me stumped. The guy that wrote 'The Cat's Meow' couldn't possibly write a song as sour as the one he just played."

"Then you figure this guy is a phony?" "I don't know," Tait said. "I'll see you later." He hurried out of the Golden Bowl and into the lobby of the Pacific-Plaza. He glimpsed Weeks going through one of the swinging doors of a side entrance. Tait rushed after him and then, spotting him among the sidewalk crowd, slowed down.

HE followed Weeks for blocks, grew increasingly astonished to find that the man was heading not for the poorer part of town but for the section where were built the swankiest apartment hotels. "If he lives in this section," Tait mused, "there's something screwy, that's certain." Suddenly it occurred to Tait that he was in the block which held Harris Rogers' apartment. Even as he thought this, Weeks turned into the building, and Tait walked on the sidewalk until Weeks should have time to take the lift. Then he followed, and went straight to Harris Rogers' door.

NEW YORK.—Although many coaches are now opposed to the five-man line, the 3-3-2-1 defense is, in the opinion of the more progressive drillmasters, the most effective answer to football's modern attack. . . . stressing spinners, reverses, misdirection, and flanking raids.

Precedent explains the ultra-conservative attitude that causes coaches to pan the five-man set-up. Most of them live in the past. They lack imagination, shy from original ideas, dismiss any innovation as radical thinking.

"FOR years the defense has been rooted to fixed posts while the attack is constantly becoming more mobile. Any military expert will tell you that the answer to mobility is mobility.

spaced out wide across the sector! "Army strategists select the latter alternative. Depth is essential, they agree, plus the element of secondary support so that reserves can be rushed to meet a break through caused by an enemy concentration against one point in the line. A break through is inevitable if you have just one line of defense.

"The same strategic rule applies to football. The attacking team has the initiative. It knows where it's going and plans to mass superior numbers at this predetermined point. It has mobility. Two or three linemen pull out to lead the play.

"An orthodox 6-2-2-1 defense, on the contrary, is rather static, though less so than the old seven-man line. The boys in the primary defense line must charge blindly. They're too close to things to diagnose the trend of the play. Their range of lateral maneuver is limited.

Not so the two secondary defenders. They are back where they can see what is happening and anticipate the point of attack. It follows logically that the more men you station in the secondary line the more mobile the defense.

Storey says that he's even been experimenting with a 4-4-2-1 defense. . . . and that it works like a charm against running plays.

WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—New York has a two-price system. Boston has another. In each city milk is sold to poor people at much less than the regular retail price.

Depots open at 6:30 a. m. and remain open until 8:30. A truck drives up and unloads trays of milk bottles. An attendant passes out the milk to the people standing in line. Another checks milk cards to see how much each customer is entitled to. Cards are punched. The man who sells the milk works for the company.

In New York the formal delivered price for milk is 13 1/2 cents a quart and the store price runs between 11 and 13 cents, usually settling at 12. But if you have a certain blue identification card, you can go to one of the 110-city milk depots and buy practically the same quart—a shade less, but—at eight cents. This also is Class I fluid milk. Farmers get 5.3 cents a quart for it, which means 6.25 or 6.5 cents delivered in the city. Milk distributing corporations buy it and deliver it to the depots for sale at eight cents to the blue card holders.

To get a card, the head of a family must sign a statement that he is unable to buy milk at the regular price because of the number of people in his family and the number on welfare or home relief. The way it works out, most of the depot customers are persons on direct relief or WPA. Cards must be renewed every three months.

A more logical movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." PEEPING THRU The KNOTHOLE

By Bill Mayes

THERE WILL be some changes in the lineup of the Bulldogs this week-end when they play Stephenville, at least one and maybe two being on the sidelines with injuries, and at least two and maybe three names being missing from the lineup.

Hubert Anderson, 216-pound tackle, is definitely out of the game with a broken arm, though it was expected that he would be able to play before the season is over. Dewey Brawner, right end, received a torn muscle in his arm in the Breckenridge game and probably will not be able to play against the Yellow Jackets.

Billy Houghton and George Cox have turned in their suits and have been dropped, permanently, from the squad, Coach Bill Tipton said today, and there is one other who has not been out for practice for a couple of days and is reported to be in the same frame of mind and ready to drop from the squad. That was not definite, however, this morning.

While Houghton has been on the starting lineup his place will be filled and his loss to the club will not be so great. Loss of Anderson and Brawner will cut down the number of available linemen for the game and will require some to play 60 minutes at their positions. However, the line is in good shape and any one of the linemen should be ready for service throughout the game.

BLOCKING has definitely improved, we were told by the sideline observers yesterday afternoon, and a much better team is expected by them to go into the Stephenville game than that which played against Breckenridge. The Buckaroos, on almost every play, got the jump on the Bulldog linemen and made them look pretty bad.

More speed in blocking in the line has been taught throughout the past two weeks to eliminate this weakness, we are told. Personally, we have been out but once, and then the second team was running Stephenville plays against the regulars, and little indication of line play could be obtained, as it was all dummy scrimmage.

SUITS formerly worn by the two who will not be on the squad have not been re-issued, as yet, Tipton stated, but probably would be shortly.

Increase In Red Cross Members Is Need Says Official

The following data in regard to the Red Cross and its work has been released by R. C. Kinnard, Eastland, chairman of the Eastland County Chapter.

"A larger Red Cross membership more in proportion to the population of Texas is necessary for the expansion of services within the state this coming year. The Red Cross membership in Texas now represents only 2.9 per cent of the population while nationally the enrollment is 4.38 per cent.

"The organization hopes for an increase of 50,000 members or more when the 239 Texas chapters offer residents of every community the opportunity and privilege of joining the Red Cross this coming Roll Call from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving. Last year, 172,067—not as many people as live in some of our larger cities—answered the Roll Call of their local chapters, but this was an increase of 36,000 over the previous year, hence encouraging.

"Local chapters are dependent upon their enrollment each year for volunteers as well as for funds to carry on disaster relief and other Red Cross safety, health, educational and welfare services in their respective communities. The greater portion of membership funds are kept by the chapter and all contributions in excess of membership fees ($1.00) are kept, only fifty cents of each membership fee being sent to the National organization for administration of Red Cross work throughout the nation.

"This nationally allotted reverts back to Red Cross work in individual communities. In the last three and one-half years to date, for example, the National Organization made available $253,777 to add to the $176,146 raised within Texas for emergency relief and rehabilitation of Texas families stricken by disasters occurring in this state.

"During the first nine months of this year the Red Cross assisted 3,025 Texas families, which included more than 13,000 persons, who suffered losses caused by six tornadoes and three floods. The $65,125 contributed by Texas was supplemented by $56,917 from National Headquarters to provide necessary medical care, food, clothing, shelter, replacement of household goods, livestock, implements and other equipment to enable stricken families to again 'get on their feet.' To bring it closer home, before the Government took over relief, Eastland county, on account of drought, sent out an SOS call and the Red Cross responded to the tune of $55,000 in food, clothing bedding,

"The smallest benefit received," said WTCC Manager D. A. Bandeen, "is the prize. The permanent benefit will be the conservation of soil and water."

Ten thousand loyal subjects standing with arms raised in salute to Hitler may look a little silly to most of us in a democracy but it must look like a picnic to a pickpocket.

Grumpy? Not now!

... thanks to Black-Draught. Often that droopy, tired feeling is caused by constipation, an everyday thief of energy. Don't put up with it. Try the fine old vegetable medicine that simply makes the lazy colon go back to work and brings prompt relief. Just ask for BLACK-DRAUGHT.. "An old friend of the family."
