States' Rights, Privileges, and Duties

The problem of states' rights is back again. It complicated the relations of the colonies before the revolution. It almost lost the revolutionary war. It caused the failure of the confederation. It split the country once. And it is still with us, in still another guise, in 1939.

Purely political questions of states' rights have been largely solved and put behind us. But in a world whose eyes focus on economic rather than political matters, states' rights is back with a new set of problems.

The Constitution plainly meant the country to be one economic unit. Until recently no one questioned the advantages of "the largest free trade area in the world." On that we built our prosperity, our strong world position.

Today we are tearing it down. The gradually rising trade barriers which are cropping up between states will be tellingly revealed to the National Conference on Interstate Barriers when it meets in Chicago, April 5-7, keenly alive to the menace.

And at the very time of this breaking-apart comes a proposal that would centralize and unify a different field. Senator Capper has introduced a bill (which would require a prior constitutional amendment) to give to the federal government the right to make uniform marriage, divorce, and child-care laws for the entire country.

At the moment when states are getting around the Constitution by setting up what amount to tariffs and which deeply affect the business of other states, it is proposed that they give up power to regulate personal phases of their citizens' lives which only slightly affect people of other states, and turn this power over to uniform national regulation.

This is a strange approach to states' rights in 1939. National economic unity and uniformity is a source of strength and a benefit to all. It would seem a proper field for national regulation only. Yet the states are busily engaged in tearing it down with oppressive truck regulations, port-of-entry laws, oleomargarine, liquor, and farm products regulations, use of taxes, and other laws that could easily Balkanize what had been a mighty nation.

Yet at the same time it is proposed that they surrender their rights to make their highly-personal marriage and divorce laws conform to local usage and culture, and to subject them to national uniform regulation. It is hard to see how one state's laws on this subject greatly affect the people of other states. That seems to make it a natural field for state legislation.

It looks very much as though we were approaching both these states' rights problems wrong-side-to.

• BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NRA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—While the Wagner act and the National Labor Relations Board get the attention of Congress and the public, the U. S. Conciliation Service of the Labor Department goes quietly and inexpensively along charting a course toward the peaceful handling of industrial relations.

But month in and month out it oils the waters of industry. Last year, for instance, it prevented 339 threatened strikes involving 229,000 workers.

It intervened in slightly more than 2300 labor disputes involving nearly 1,500,000 workers, and reported an adjustment satisfactory to both sides in 90 per cent of the cases. And it spent only $373,000.

Talk to John R. Steelman, director of the service, and you get a new glimpse both at labor troubles and at government attitudes toward them. For the whole work of the service is based on the theory that most men are reasonable mortals who will compromise rather than scrap if somebody just takes the trouble to help things along a bit. By and large, the theory works.

A conciliator has no authority at all. But, as Mr. Steelman remarks, he does have power—the power of public opinion. Only six times in the past year did the parties to a dispute refuse to let the Conciliation Service try to arrange a settlement.

The work is done informally and quietly. The 50-odd conciliators who are scattered about the country may be ordered onto a job from Washington, they may be invited in by one or both parties to a dispute, or they may intervene on their own volition.

Typical is such a situation as this:
A strike is on. Pickets are parading past the doors of the employer. A conciliator drops in on him and suggests that he would like to help in arranging a settlement.

"This strike can't be settled," says the employer despondently. "The hell it can't," retorts the conciliator good-naturedly. "You don't want those pickets parading there all year, do you? All strikes can be settled. Let's see what the difficulties are in this case."

So the employer explains. The union demands this, this, and this. He might yield on point A, but he'll die before he gives in on B and C.

Presently the conciliator visits the union leaders and listens to them. They're willing to give up on point C, but they've got to have A and B. He goes back to the employer, back again to the union men.

He argues with each side. Perhaps he will persuade the employer to recede on one point and the union to recede on another. In the end—nine times out of 10—he finally gets something that both sides will accept. Then the strike ends.

The service prefers, of course, to get on the scene before a strike or lockout actually begins. Often a conciliator will find that a seemingly hopeless deadlock needs only a disinterested third party to resolve itself.

All of this keeps the conciliators busy. The staff worked seven days a week through most of the past year, and took no vacations.

Mr. Steelman doesn't want a lot more money for his department; says if Congress gave him $3,000,000 tomorrow he wouldn't know what to do with it. He'd like to hire a few more conciliators, but he says it would be useless to try to get more than a few—they're mortally hard to find. (Copyright, 1939, N.R.A. Service, Inc.)

Ford Automobiles Reaching new High In Sales Of Units

DEARBORN, Mich., April 10.—Reaching the largest volume since July, 1937, retail sales of Ford V-8 cars and trucks and Mercury 8 cars in March totaled 75,345 units, a 56 per cent increase over March a year ago, it was announced today by J. R. Davis, general sales manager of the Ford Motor company.

The sales during the 10-day period were 36,874 units. This was more than 135 per cent better than the volume sold during the similar period in February and 83 per cent better than the volume sold in the previous 10-day period in March.

The month's sales of Mercury cars totaled 7,079 units, the largest month's volume since the new car was introduced last November. The total was more than 85 per cent better than sales in February.

Sales of Ford V-8 trucks and commercial cars for the month were 15,606 units, a gain of 47 per cent over the sales in March a year ago. Of the total 9,043 were trucks. The truck total was the largest since April 1937, and was 59 per cent better than a year ago. During the last 10-day period in March truck sales gained 96 per cent of the combined sales of commercial cars and trucks gained 63 per cent over the same period a year ago.

Lincoln-Zephyr sales during the last 10-day period in March were the largest since May 1937, and were 71 per cent better than in the previous 10-day period. The total for the month was 23 per cent better than in March a year ago.

Used car sales in March were the largest since September 1937, even exceeding the number of cars sold during March 1938, which included National Used Car Exchange Week.

Oratory Of The Gas Light Era Is Not Lacking In House

AUSTIN, Tex.—Oratory may have had its greatest force in the gas-light era, but listeners have been well pleased by some of the speeches made during the 16th legislature. Radio and public address systems have destroyed the value of the leather-lunged speaker to a large extent and given new opportunities to orators who do not depend on strength of voice.

Classified among the better political speeches of 1939 were two on the subject of a sales tax.

Sen. Rudolph Weinert of Seguin, advocate of a sales tax, made a down-to-earth explanation that his side wanted the voters who ordered use of public funds to support the aged to "carry a pocketful of tokens" to remind them of their liberality at the polls.

Young Jack Langdon of Glen Rose was credited with giving the sales tax constitutional amendment in the house its knockout blow when he compared Governor W. Lee O'Daniel's campaign speeches against the sales tax with his present stand.

"If the governor were in the legislature," said the droll Langdon, "I'm sure he would want it this way."

A three-to-one vote put into the resolution Langdon's amendment to exempt food, drugs and clothing costing less than $5 from the sales tax levies. Anti-sales taxers were quick to point out that the heavy vote polled for Langdon's

SERIAL STORY BORDER ADVENTURE

BY OREN ARNOLD

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday Betty admits to herself that she is more than interested in the two Border Patrol officers...

CHAPTER IV WED better stake out the horses over here and make the rest of the way on foot...

The two young officers made their mounts secure with ropes tied in a clump of scrubby desert trees...

Each man then hooked a quart canteen of water to his belt, and a rolled blanket containing a little food was strapped military fashion to each back...

San Felipe Canyon properly begins six miles further up, where the new paved highway skirts the mouth of it...

That's why aliens are beginning to use it. They can make it up the canyon at night to the highway...

Yeamp. And there's where we better wait. If we don't nab 'em soon as they cross the line they may take a notion to scatter...

It was a small gorge, but its 100 feet or so of depth loomed forbidding by night. Parts of its walls were sheer; a man could step over a rim and plunge to sure death below...

The long night vigil was never interrupted. Not a single untoward sound disturbed the officers. At 7 o'clock they ate a bit of cold food...

They were putting themselves in for a long, tedious task and they knew it, but patience is truly golden if you are a border guard.

They passed the time talking, as only friends can. A lot of it was business, and a very great deal of it was about Betty Mary Jordan and her unexpected appearance in their lives...

Never for a moment did they imagine that she hadn't given them an accurate tip. They knew Mexican character, knew that Barro might have planned to send aliens over last night and then decide to postpone the crossing...

They lay low and slept some, one at a time, during the day, but at sundown both were alert and on guard again. The second night was much like the first; lighted only by stars, silent and clear and rather cold...

Somehow in the canyon, at that moment, a rock went tumbling! A large, bounding pebble nearby.

Grasping his arm for silence, Hope felt Sheridan Starr's big muscles go tense beside him.

FROM their position they could be fairly comfortable and could surely discover any pedestrians or riders who might try to come up the canyon. They unrolled blankets and wrapped up to combat the cold. Then they took turns on guard.

Grasping his arm for silence, Hope felt Sheridan Starr's big muscles go tense beside him.

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS

about 61 per cent of the lives lost. The remedy seems to point to some means of providing more adequate light for the highway traveler than his own headlights can furnish.

A survey made on the Mount Vernon highway leading into our national capital showed that night accidents jumped two and a half times when lighting was discontinued along the route.

Comparable records were made elsewhere with about unbelievable results. But consider this point. Along illuminated routes at night the motorist's eyes are fixed on the lighted highway for there is nothing to distract his attention from the road itself during the hours of darkness.

An eight year survey of accidents on the Troy-Schenectady highway in New York State, four years before and four years after lighting, shows a night accident decrease of 36.4 per cent, while daytime accidents increased 9.7 per cent.

In all highway construction, the economy angle must be considered. Let's compare the cost of safety lighting along the nation's night accident areas with the cost of another recognized worthy safety measure—grade crossing elimination.

Take New York State, for example, which proposes to spend $300,000,000 for the elimination of its grade crossing accidents.

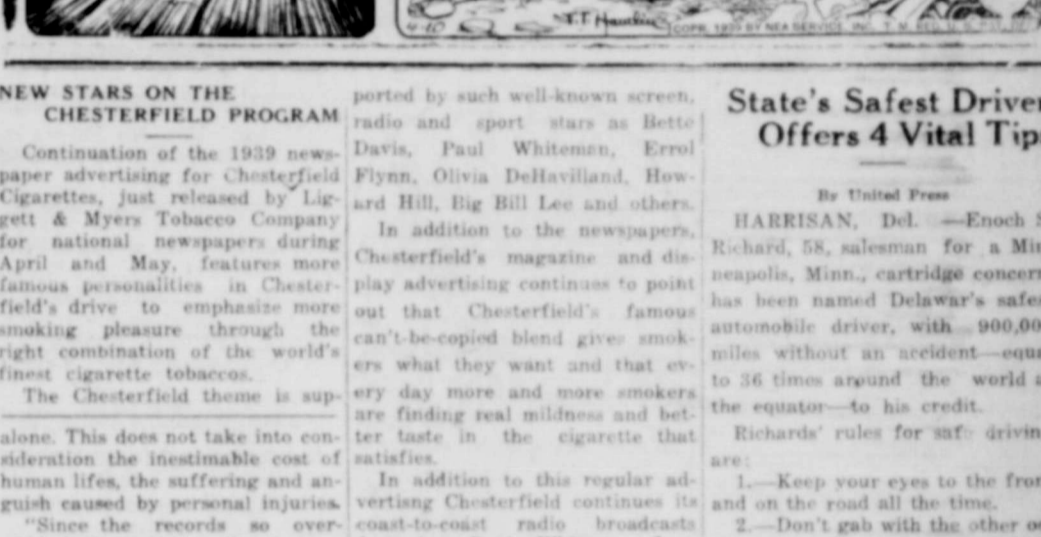

Amortized over 50 years at three per cent per annum, this is equivalent to about $12,000,000 a year. On an average of 151 accidents happen each year at New York grade crossings. It will therefore cost about $80,000 a year to prevent one grade crossing accident.

What will $12,000,000 a year spent on safety lighting do? It will prevent 10,000 accidents or 66 times more accidents than will grade crossing elimination.

Engineers know that all highways will not justify immediate lighting from an accident prevention standpoint, because of their low traffic density and night accident rate. They do advise the installation of permanent systems along any stretch of road where the hazard per vehicle mile by night is many times that of the day hazard.

To install a modern safety lighting system along a highway where preventable night accidents are occurring would cost only five to seven per cent of the cost of the highway. Its operation would cost but one-third of the money it would save in property damages.

NEW STARS ON THE CHESTERFIELD PROGRAM Continuation of the 1939 newspaper advertising for Chesterfield Cigarettes, just released by Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company for national newspapers during April and May, features more famous personalities in Chesterfield's drive to emphasize more smoking pleasure through the right combination of the world's finest cigarette tobaccos.

The Chesterfield theme is supported by such well-known screen, radio and sport stars as Betty Davis, Paul Whiteman, Errol Flynn, Olivia DeHavilland, Howard Hill, Big Bill Lee and others.

In addition to the newspapers, Chesterfield's magazine and display advertising continues to point out that Chesterfield's famous can't-be-copied blend gives smokers what they want and that every day more and more smokers are finding real mildness and better taste in the cigarette that satisfies.

In addition to this regular advertising Chesterfield continues its coast-to-coast radio broadcasts featuring Paul Whiteman, Joan Edwards, the Modernaires, Joan Clark, Dennis on Wednesday nights and Burns and Allen, Frank Parker, Ray Noble and his orchestra on Friday nights.

State's Safest Driver Offers 4 Vital Tips By United Press HARRISBURG, Del.—Enoch S. Richards, 58, salesman for a Minneapolis, Minn., cartridge concern, has been named Delaware's safest automobile driver, with 900,000 miles without an accident—equal to 36 times around the world at the equator—to his credit.

Richards' rules for safe driving are: 1.—Keep your eyes to the front and on the road all the time. 2.—Don't gab with the other occupants in the rear seat. 3.—Don't depend on the other fellow to be safe—be safe yourself. 4.—Give the right of way to the other fellow, even though he may be dead wrong.

YOUR HAND flicks a switch and you change a cold, unlivable house into a haven of friendly, health-giving warmth and comfort. Your hand turns a faucet and you have at your service an inexhaustible flow of pure, fresh water either cold or piping hot.

Your hands can perform this magic in your home because of other hands—the skilled hands of the Heating and Plumbing Contractor. His hands are backed by the years of training, study and experience necessary to assure you care-free heating comfort and health-protecting plumbing service.

Together, heating and plumbing work hand-in-hand—to make new or old homes more enjoyable—to provide them with the comfort, cleanliness and protection that have made American homes the envy of the rest of the world.

Good heating and plumbing make an old home seem like new, a new home more inviting, comfortable and enjoyable. And every home today can have modern heating and plumbing on convenient FHA terms.

Both heating and plumbing mean too much to the welfare of your family, to the uninterrupted enjoyment of your home and to the actual value of your property to be entrusted to any but the trained hands of the Heating and Plumbing Contractor. The warning is too brief. The present average automobile headlights enable the average driver to see the average 'dark' object about 150 feet ahead. A car traveling at 50 miles an hour travels from 186 to 243 feet between the time the warning is transmitted to the brain by the eyes and the car can be brought to a standstill. By then it is too late; the damage is done.

Night driving is at least four times more dangerous than day driving. There are several thousand more accidents during the daylight hours, but they actually result in fewer fatalities. Death truly favors nocturnal prowling.
