Barber Bill Still Unconstitutional

AUSTIN, May 26.—Attorney General Gerald C. Mann ruled today that the barbers' price fixing bill, passed by the Texas Legislature, still is unconstitutional.

A form ruling to that effect resulted in the bill being withdrawn from the governor's desk and amendments added. Mann advised the governor today the bill is still unconstitutional.

Sheriff Leaves To Bring Higgins Back

TWO ATTEMPTS UPON LIFE OF IL DUCE FAIL

PARIS, May 26.—The newspaper, Paris Soir, in a dispatch from Nice, claimed today that two attempts had been made to assassinate Premier Mussolini of Italy.

The dispatch said one attempt on the premier's life was made on April 27. Another attempt, according to the dispatch, was made early in May, before Mussolini made his tour of Piedmont, which carried him close to the French frontier.

The Paris Soir dispatch said that the assailant in the second attack on Mussolini was captured, but he refused to give his name or to indicate his supporters, "despite severe pressure."

"I knew in advance that I would die, but I decided to sacrifice my life to rid Italy of her oppressor," the newspaper quoted him as saying. "We are several hundred strong. We all took the same oath and I hope that one of us succeeds."

By United Press

ROME, May 26.—The Italian Ministry of Propaganda today denied that any attempts had been made recently against the life of Premier Mussolini.

Tokyo Decision To Remain Neutral Ires Ambassadors

By United Press

TOKYO, May 26.—The Japanese Ambassadors to Germany and Italy, angry at the government's refusal to enter into a three-power military alliance, have threatened to resign rather than convey the refusal to the German and Italian foreign offices, it was said today in reliable quarters.

At an important meeting last Saturday the Japanese cabinet decided to preserve neutrality in European affairs and refuse invitations to ally with Germany and Italy.

This news was sent to Horishi Oshima, ambassador at Berlin, and Toshio Shiratori, ambassador at Rome, for delivery to the German and Italian foreign ministers.

They replied, according to informants, that the government decision was contravention to their activities, which were in favor of a three-power military alliance, and that, therefore, they felt their usefulness to be at an end.

He's springing into the line-light mightily early but Joe Sparks, Eastland boy, is making the grade at the University of Texas in his freshman year. Joe is a 4-40 freshman and played on the U. of T. champion sport ball team. Naturally he made his "T".

It is rumored in U. of T. athletic circles that Joe will make the track team when fall term begins. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Sparks of Eastland.

THE WEATHER: By United Press WEST TEXAS—Generally fair tonight and Saturday.

O'DANIEL HAS TWO NAMED FOR COURT SERVICE

Two special justices have been appointed by Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel to preside in a case in the 11th Court of Civil Appeals at Eastland in which Associate Justice O. C. Funderburk and Chief Justice W. P. Leslie are disqualified.

F. Edward Ponder of Sweetwater was named to sit for Justice Funderburk and W. O. Gross of Mineral Wells was appointed to sit for Chief Justice Leslie.

The case, Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World, vs. Mrs. Agnes D. Dickson, will be submitted Friday, June 5. Justice Funderburk and Chief Justice Leslie by being members of the W. O. W. were disqualified.

This marks Ponder's first time to have been appointed to sit at the court whereas Gross several years ago was appointed by the then Governor Moody to preside for the then Chief Justice J. E. Hickman.

Associate Justice Clyde Crissom is not disqualified in the case.

E. H. S. RITES SCHEDULED AT 8:15 TONIGHT

Seniors of Eastland High School are scheduled to receive their diplomas in exercises this evening beginning at 8:15 in the school auditorium.

Salutatory address will be by Julia Parker and the valedictory by Robert Leslie.

P. B. Bittle, superintendent, is to present certificates and awards while K. B. Tanner, school board chairman, will award diplomas.

After exercises a dance sponsored by the Modern Dry Cleaners and Dyers in honor of the graduates will be held at the Connelley hotel.

Marathon Feat On Piano Hard Work

SEATTLE, Wash.—Piano playing is an athletic feat for Bill Hajek, 37-year-old Seattle gasoline station operator.

Hajek's distinction is simply stated: He plays longer than anybody else. He'll play after everybody has left or has gone to sleep. He'll play until he or the piano is ready to drop. In short, he's a marathon piano-player.

It's a hard business, he disclosed. "I've done it for eight days and seven nights, and afterwards I was so weak I couldn't lift a cup of coffee to my mouth," Hajek reminisced.

Hajek, incidentally, set the world's record for marathon piano-playing in 1930 in San Francisco—188 hours. Now that the collegiate guppy gulpers have come along to set a few records, Hajek admitted his fondest hope was to break his record at the San Francisco and New York fairs this summer.

He may do it, too, for he has already started an intensive training routine like any college athlete.

At 3 o'clock each morning he sets out for work, dressed in running shorts, jogging along the streets and squeezing a rubber ball in each hand.

"I eat special, too," Hajek added. "I don't touch the piano until a week before a contest. When I play I play for 65 minutes in each hour, then get medical attention for the other 10 minutes. People feed me as I'm playing."

He doesn't like to be called a musician, feeling that his distinction is not that of the artist. At his station, he helps children and blind persons across the street. At home he looks after his garden, his wife and 2-year-old daughter.

Since he started playing, Hajek said, he has learned 7,800 compositions. His mind, musically speaking, is extremely retentive and he can remember a number merely by hearing it played. He can play for 48 hours without repeating a piece—which means that sometime this year, in San Francisco or New York, he will give his repertoire the "twice-over."

Mother Charged in Baby Slaying

Sobbing with grief, Mrs. Dorothy Newman, 23-year-old divorcee, is shown as she was arraigned on murder charges three weeks after her newly-born baby was found dead in San Francisco hotel.

Highway Work Is Announced Today

AUSTIN, May 26.—Contemplated highway improvements announced today by the Texas Highway Department include:

Widening of a culvert on U. S. Highway—84 in Nolan county, northwest of Roscoe.

Replacing a narrow bridge on U. S. Highway 80-A at Breckenridge.

BUND FUEHRER IS HELD ON A LARCENY COUNT

By United Press

NEW YORK, May 26.—Fritz Kuhn "Fuhrer" of the German-American Bund, was held in $5,000 bail today, after pleading not guilty to 12 counts of an indictment charging him with grand larceny and forgery in connection with alleged shortages in the organization's funds.

Kuhn was brought to the general sessions courtroom from police headquarters, where he had been paraded in the bright lights of the routine police lineup. He appeared nervous and did not have his usual bravado.

Judge Cornelius Collins said that "$5,000 is a very modest sum" and that he would have set the bail higher had there been proposals from District Attorney Thomas Dewey's office.

In answer to routine questions Kuhn gave his occupation as "president of the German-American Bund" and said he was a chemical engineer, last employed by the Ford Motor company in 1936. He is a native of Munich, Germany, he said, has lived in the United States for 14 years, and never had been arrested previously.

LEGION AWARDS PRESENTED TO FOUR STUDENTS

Two boys and two girls, selected from the graduating classes of the Cooper and Young schools, were presented American Legion awards at graduation exercises Thursday night, and one boy and one girl from Hodges Oak Park school will be given similar honors at the school's exercises tonight.

Mary Ellen Lanier and Schley Dee Lemma were picked as the girl and boy from Cooper school for the awards and Waydene Kelley and Billy Harrington received the awards at Young school. Announcement of award winners from Hodges Oak Park will not be made until tonight.

Large medallions and lapel buttons were presented to each of the four Thursday night.

The medallion for boys reads on one side "American Legion School Award, Courage-Honor-Service-Leadership-Scholarship" with the American Legion seal underneath. On the reverse side is the wording "For God and Country" with likeness of a sailor and soldier. Underneath is the Marine Corps motto, "Semper Paratus."

The medallion for girls is similar, except that the qualifications read "Courage - Character-Service-Companionship - Scholarship." with the Legion seal underneath.

On the reverse side a girl is shown holding a furled American flag and the Marine motto, "Semper Paratus."

Winners of the awards are selected without anyone knowing who the winners are, as they are selected by number and only the principal and teachers of the school know who has these numbers. Blanks with the pupil's number and the grades given on various characteristics are turned over to a Legion committee, which has the reverse side a girl is shown holding a furled American flag and the Marine motto, "Semper Paratus."

The number is selected from which the winner is selected. The number and name is not compared until the award is ready to be given.

Points on which the students are graded are sportsmanship, acceptance, correction, attitude, aptitude, method, honor, responsibility, improvement this year, taste and appearance.

The American Legion Award has become the most coveted honor among the graduates of each of the Ranger ward schools since it was inaugurated here several years ago.

Escaping Jail Is Now Against Law

By United Press

AUSTIN, May 26.—It is now an offense, punishable by two to four years in the penitentiary, to escape from a Texas jail. Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel's signature has put into effect the act against escapes, which was passed by the legislature.

The penalty applies also if a prisoner unsuccessfully attempts to escape and injures any one in the attempt.

Supreme Thrill: Douglases at Circus

Their "bench" a hardboard plank beneath the big top, Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and children take in the show as the circus comes to Washington. While Mildred enjoys soda pop through a straw, William, Jr., is open-mouthed in amazement and Dad Douglas is tense.

LESLIE MARKED UP RECORD IN SCHOOL WORK

EASTLAND, Texas, May 26.—Bob Leslie, valedictorian of the graduating class of the Eastland High School, has had an active record in his school years, teachers and officials point out.

He maintained an average of 94.47 for the past four years in his school.

Son of Judge and Mrs. W. P. Leslie, young Leslie recently represented Eastland in the "My Home Town Contest" at the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Leslie has been active also in Scout work and young people's work of the First Methodist church of Eastland and area.

Poisonous Plants Now Are Growing Throughout State

AUSTIN, Tex.—The main trouble with Rhus toxicodendron, which is blooming now, is that most of us do not recognize it.

Not knowing this plant, many Texans, particularly those city folks who seldom go to the country, may contract a severe case of skin poisoning if they are not careful of picnics, camping and fishing trips.

Warning that several cases of poisoning have been reported already this year, Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, describes Rhus toxicodendron for the benefit of those not familiar with it.

The plant has three-leaves which are now green, and later become red or bright yellow. It grows on a low but erect plant, varying from several inches to three or four feet in height. The plant bears smooth, whitish, waxy berries containing a stony seed.

The easiest way to identify the plant is by its leaves. Two of them are on short stalks and the third is on a longer one. They are one to four inches long, dark green on top and lighter underneath. The leaves also have notched margins.

If you're susceptible to it, slight contact with the plant may result in violent skin irritation caused by a resinous substance in the sap. First manifestations will appear within a few hours to five days. Itching, burning sensations and redness, swelling and development of small blisters on the affected parts are symptoms of this poisoning.

Legion Auxiliary Is Not To Sell Poppies

Officers of the American Legion Auxiliary unit of the Earl Barnes Post announced today that poppies would not be sold in Ranger this Saturday, as was being done in many towns.

Poppies are sold by the local Auxiliary Unit during the week of Armistice Day, and are not sold on Memorial Day.

News stories concerning sale of poppies on Memorial Day in other towns prompted the announcement that no poppie sales would be made in Ranger.

NAVY TO RAISE SUNKEN SUB FOR INQUIRY

By United Press

POITSMOUTH, N. H., May 26.—The navy today began the task of bringing up the submarine Squalus and her 26 dead from the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean.

Salvage operations on the newest of the fleet's undersea craft, began after an all-night suspension which was called only when a diver confirmed that all 26 men in the flooded after compartments of the submarine had died.

Navy divers planned to descend the 46 fathoms to the spot where the Squalus sank in the mud last Tuesday and lay the groundwork for raising the submarine and her cargo of bodies.

The salvage job may take days, perhaps weeks, but the submarine must be raised before there can be any explanation of why she sank to the bottom during a routine test submergence.

Meanwhile at the navy yard hospital all except three of the Squalus' 33 survivors were released. Those still held were Lt. J. C. Nichols, radio operator Charles A. Powell and Yeoman Charles S. Kimey. They were suffering from slight bronchial infections.

Eastland Barber Shop Wiser After Children 'Racket'

Barbers in an Eastland shop are likely to look askance at the next youngster who after getting a haircut tells them, "I'm one of the Jones children; my mother is out in the car and will be in a minute and pay you."

It was reported today that several haircuts were "given away" in recent months at an Eastland shop by children using, in effect, that method.

Investigation showed after the barbers were duped several times that the children would get in their parent's car. Then the parents would drive away.

The barbers, not recognizing any of the offending parties, state they were transients or residents of nearby cities.

Motorists Asked To Cooperate On Cleaning Streets

C. J. Moore, Ranger Street Commissioner, today urged the cooperation of the public in helping to keep Main street, and internal streets, clean.

"If people will not park their cars on Main and the lateral streets," Moore said today, "the street sweeper can keep the streets cleaner. I am asking the cooperation of the public in this matter and do not want to enforce the ordinance prohibiting parking cars on the business streets after midnight. On Saturday nights people can leave their cars parked on these streets until 2:30 Sunday morning, however."

Moore stated that no action would be taken against those who left their cars parked on the streets all night unless it became necessary, and he believed that the people would cooperate in this matter.

Americans Lose In British Amateur

HOYLAKE, Eng., May 26.—America's last hope of winning the British Amateur Golf Championship vanished today when Bill Holt, Jr., of Syracuse, N. Y., was eliminated 2-1, by Alex Kyle, veteran Scotsman in the semi-final round.

All other Americans already had been eliminated and the British Empire was certain to regain the championship which Charlie Yates of Atlanta carried across the ocean last year.

Pensions Not Only Pain For Governor; Now It's A Tooth

AUSTIN, May 26.—The financing of old age pensions was not the only trouble for Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel today, as he was confronted with a pension liberalizing bill and a deadlock in the Texas House and Senate over taxes to pay the bill.

Beside the pension worry the governor has an aching wisdom tooth. It was so painful that it kept him from his office.

Baby Bundle From the Skies

In basket which Stewardess Eva McIntyre carries from plane is world's youngest air passenger, baby girl of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Herick of York, Pa., flown 702 miles less than eight hours after birth, to St. Louis, Mo., where plastic surgeon operates to close cleft in infant's cheek.

British Minister To Prague To Be Withdrawn Soon

LONDON, May 26.—The British Minister to Prague is being withdrawn, Sir John Simons, chancellor of the exchequer, told the house of commons today in debate over recognition of Germany's annexation of Czechoslovakia.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain previously had said that the government was considering the question of recognition of the German annexation of the Czechoslovak provinces of Bohemia and Moravia, but he refused to promise that parliament would be consulted before such action was taken.

Simons said that the British action in withdrawing the minister to Prague, the former Czechoslovak capital, was in line with the action of Soviet Russia and the United States.

Appropriation Is Slashed In Senate

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The Senate Appropriations Committee yielded to the demands of economy-minded senators today and slashed $50,000,000 from the rivers and harbors and flood control sections of the war department non-military appropriation bill.

Our 'Service' Civilization

Service is the hallmark of our civilization. Everybody knows how accustomed we all are to getting service. We want our one-pound, fifty-cent purchases delivered. We want the milk on the back porch promptly at six. We want those photographs delivered and printed this afternoon—tomorrow morning at latest. We want service, not only with a capital "S" but in boldface type.

Perhaps when we back off and take a look at this, it may become the most distinctive fact of our time. Never before has so great a proportion of human energy gone into service.

The result? We all know in a vague way that this is costly, and that it has meant an increasing number of jobs in that field. But it has remained for the Twentieth Century Fund to study how far this trend has gone, and what it means.

The fund's economists have made such a study, and they have reached the rather startling conclusion that "it costs considerably more on the average to distribute goods than it does to make them."

Further, "about 59 cents out of the consumer's dollar goes to the services involved in distribution, and only 41 cents for the services in production."

The result is a constantly higher percentage of workers employed in distribution as compared with production. In 1870, about 75 per cent of all gainfully-employed workers were in farming, manufacturing or other actual productive activities. Only 25 per cent were occupied with distribution and service. By 1930 it had become 50-50.

As productivity per worker gets higher, what with more and better machinery and greater skill and specialization, it is clear that a smaller and smaller percentage of all workers will be actually producing basic goods. A larger and larger percentage of all workers will be engaged in service and distribution. And the lower costs of producing goods which follow greater mechanization and efficiency, are at least in part offset by the greater costs of distributing them.

This is not a standoff, however.

Take automobiles. When they first appeared, they cost $3000 or $500, and the service and gas station, the elaborate distribution and financing systems, were non-existent.

Today the industry supports hundreds of thousands in the distributive and service end, and yet a far better car is to be had for $1000 than could be had in 1905 for $5000.

The expansion of this distributive field and its effects is well worth the further study which the Twentieth Century Fund economists and others are preparing to give it.

Secrecy surrounding Hitler's birthday celebration may have kept something amusing from the world at large. Imagine, for instance, strong Storm Troopers, lined up and warbling in unison: "Happy Birthday to You."

CHAPTER XIII

FOR the third time since he had begun to dress, Jack Burden...

This was typical of his day. Going to bed at four and getting up at nine didn't make sense...

Figuratively speaking, collar buttons had been rolling away from him ever since he'd struggled...

The Henry Burdens belonged to a conservative, old New York crowd which achieved simple lives in spite of great wealth...

"Be ready at half-past ten, honey. Your father is coming with us today."

He dodged the scrutiny of her cool gray eyes by ducking into his bathroom.

"Glad to have come along, boy," his father had said as they climbed into the car.

Jack grinned. "Morning, you mean. Four o'clock."

Mrs. Burden said nothing. "Have you ever been to the Dove, Mother?"

Mr. Burden caught his son's glance and laughed. "Your mother doesn't even know what a night club is, Jack."

"The boy's handsome, sensitive face darkened. 'Not a bad definition. That guy Martin is a bird connoisseur. He likes them young. He picks on the Janice Frenches.'"

"It was very sad about that poor child," Mrs. Burden spoke in uneasy tones. "I can't understand why she should want to kill herself. Her mother has served on a great many committees with me."

"Yes, I keep one in this joint for the nights I don't feel like going back to the hotel."

Yesterday, Duke takes Clem and Jack to the joints around the town, instructing his chauffeur to start looking for them if they are not back by 12.

CHAPTER XIV

PEOPLE will tell you that New York's Chinatown has no color, that it is a weak imitation of San Francisco's Oriental quarter.

Down the dark hall came the swift beat of something that sounded like the flapping of bat's wings. "It's o'kay Chin," called Martin. "This is the Duke."

"I've heard it before," admitted Martin. "Come on, we'll follow the Chinaman. Chin," the Duke apparently was addressing a black vacuum, "these are two good friends of mine who want to meet you."

He pulled a flashlight out of his pocket and focused it down the hall. Twenty feet from them stood a wisp of an Oriental. His tiny body was hardly marked under the fatness of his dark blue robe and you would have thought him dead but for the fact that he stood upright and his small, slanting eyes burned strangely in the shrunken yellow mask.

He gave a crooked grin and bowed at Martin's introduction. "Please meet you," he said. "I show you customers. Mebbe you like smoke too." His lips parted, revealing yellow fangs.

Up two steps here. Down three steps there. Into this entrance. Out of that. "We're over on the Mott street side now," the Duke said. "Every good hop joint has two or three getaways."

Suddenly a door opened and a thin thread of light filtered out. "You can talk as much as you want," said Martin. "These does not hear you. They're lost in sweet dreams." He waved a hand toward the rows of bunks which lined the walls.

"My best customers," said Chin grinning. Clem clutched Jack's arm and pointed to a man in a lower bunk, grubby and unshaven.

"This only start," volunteered Chin. "I show you more. Veilley meny ladies, too. Want see?"

"You're here, you might as well do the whole show," remarked Martin. "You've had the first shock. Clem, rather white, gave in. 'If you want to leave, we can,' reminded Jack. 'It's funny. I don't like this, and yet I'm still curious. I'll always want to return if I don't see everything. I'd better get it over with now. Come on.'"

SHE followed Chin and Martin through the smoke-laden haze into the next room.

"Nerve, I'd call it," Mr. Burden put in. "Let's talk about something more pleasant. What pretty girl did you squire last night, Jack?"

"Clem Shirley."

"Things are rather serious between you two, aren't they?"

"Yes, Dad. If Clem will have me, I'll marry her."

His mother rested her hand in his. "She's a charming girl, dear. I thoroughly approve. But why do you two have to go to those terrible clubs for amusement?"

JACK wondered how he'd got through the day. He'd skipped two aisles when he passed the plate, and he'd been out of step with the other ushers when he marched up to the altar.

At luncheon he'd fallen asleep while a client of his father was discussing the legal point of a case and now he was reduced to chasing collar buttons!

He wondered if Clem felt woozy. He'd call and find out. Maybe she didn't want to go to the concert this evening after all. But just as he reached for the receiver, the phone rang.

"Hello, yes, this is Jack Burden," he said as a husky voice inquired for him. "Who—Duke Martin?"

His tone cooled slightly, then became a little incredulous. "Miss Shirley is at the Dove and wants me to join her there? I don't understand! Oh, you're going to show us the town tonight?"

He paused. "Of course, I'll go any place Miss Shirley wants to, but why doesn't she ask me herself?"

There was frank suspicion in his voice now. "All right, I'll hold the phone." "A long silence, then, 'Hi this you Clem, darling? What's the big idea? Certainly I'll come if you want me to.'"

It was already dark when Jack Burden sauntered into the Dove.

"What about a Scotch and soda?" he asked as he joined Clem and the Duke in the tap room. "I want to start this evening right."

Clem gave him a gay smile. "I'll have one with you. I've just been sipping a Vermouth."

"Make it three," the Duke called to the bartender. He pulled out a chair for Jack. "Glad you could come, Burden. Then turning to the bartender again, 'Send Passale down. We'll order dinner here and have it served in my apartment.'"

"Your apartment?" questioned Clem. "Yes, I keep one in this joint for the nights I don't feel like going back to the hotel."

"Janice French kept a separate apartment, didn't she?"

Clem's tones were casual. She was plainly making conversation. "I have one, too, but it's in my own house. Daddy gave it to me. Judging from Mary Franklin's story, Janice's father and mother didn't know about hers." She smiled brightly at Martin. "But you're really not concealing anything, are you?"

"How would I be concealing anything if I invited my friends to see it?"

HALF an hour later Clem and Jack were enjoying a special dinner in the quiet of Martin's quarters on the top floor of the Dove.

Jack was surprised to see how Martin lived. When Bill Condon, the valet, had ushered them into the room, he stared with frank amazement at its splendor. Martin, as much as he mistrusted him, appealed to his sense of adventure.

The mysterious owner of the Dove represented something new. It flattered him to be introduced to a retreat of a man with a dark past who might be one of the old buccaners reincarnated.

"Is there any more to this sybaritic luxury?" he inquired later, as they all sipped their after-dinner cordials in front of an open fire.

"You mean, have I any more rooms up here?" Martin reached for a cigar. "Yes. There is the game room where I sometimes invite the boys in for poker. My private gym where I come for a work-out after a hangover, and the glassed-in sleeping porch on the back. But I'll show you all that another night." He was looking, however, not at Jack, but at Clem, as he talked. "Now, I guess it's about time to get started." He glanced at his watch. "Half past ten. Where would you like to go first, Chin Lee's hop joint or May Day's new apartment?"

He smiled. "That's in the neighborhood. She's just moved up to Park Avenue."

Clem stared at Jack. "I'd rather go to Chin Lee's. Somehow it doesn't sound quite so bad."

Jack grinned. The drinks and dinner had revived him. "You will go slumming, will you? Better be prepared for anything, even at Lee's. Come on, I'm ready."

It was after eleven when Martin's black car rolled up to the curb at the Bowery and Doyers Street. "We'll walk the rest of the way," he said as he and Jack helped Clem out. Then, turning to Condon, who was acting as chauffeur, "You wait here. If we're not back by twelve, start hunting for us."

Women lay sprawled on rattan mats. Some clutched the opium pipes which rested on the floor at their sides. Chin kicked a girl with his foot.

"She don't even feel it. Been in that way two days. Want to try it? I'll hold the phone to Clem. 'No cat you anything. Fine dreams.'"

Clem shook her head. Jack glanced at Martin. "Ever try it yourself?"

"Once or twice. It's not a bad sensation."

A woman lying near Martin stirred uneasily, moaning as she moved. She was slight and small with a mass of raven black hair, but as she turned her face, Clem saw she was young. Her features were heavy and her skin yellow. Unlike the other opium smokers Chin had exhibited, her face was pathetically impressive.

"Come, we've seen enough," said Jack.

"The air has never felt so fresh and clean," exclaimed Clem, taking a deep breath as she and Jack and Martin stepped out on Doyers street again.

"The Duke pulled out his watch. 'We've just about time to make May Day's, if you want to see a ritzy version of this.'"

But Clem was no longer intrigued. "Another night, I'm sleepy."

Jack yawned. "You've got two tenderfeet on your hands, Martin. We're not broken into, this night life yet."

"The Duke smiled. 'There'll always be another time.' He turned toward the Bowery. 'I'll have Condon drive you home.'"

As the light from a shop window struck his face, a girl who'd been standing across the street with a couple of men, waved at him. "Hello, Duke," she called. "What are you doing down here?"

It was Mary Franklin. Martin frowned as she joined them, "Showing another girl the sights?" There was an edge in her tone.

"Just walked over with some boys from the paper. This is a hangout of mine." She smiled. "Watch your step, Clem. The Duke's out of your depth. Glancing back at Martin, she flung him a parting shot. 'I have a gift for being in the wrong place at the right time, which is another way of saying I'm a good newspaper woman. So long See you at Janice French's inquest tomorrow!'"

"I'm not going!" The Duke's tone was surly. But Mary didn't hear him. She was already half way down the block.

BOSTON.—In 1661 colonists had to own 20 pounds before being allowed to wear gold or silver ornaments, silk bands or scarfs. But magistrates and other public officers, their families, military officers and soldiers then in service, and those whose estates had become "decayed" were exempt from the ruling passed by the General Court of Massachusetts Bay Colony, according to the WPA Historical Records Survey.

Now that first and second year cruises at Annapolis have been canceled, some midshipman will probably put in a claim against the navy for false advertising.

Expansion Of Oil Industry Benefits Economic Progress

DALLAS, Tex.—Statewide expansion of the Texas petroleum industry during the past eight years is shown to have had a marked beneficial effect upon the State's economic progress and welfare, according to a survey recently completed by the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association.

Fifty-eight per cent of all the oil produced in Texas to date was produced within the past eight years. During this eight-year period Texas experienced phenomenal increases in population of many of its cities, accompanied by increased employment and payrolls, paved highway mileage, new buildings, bank deposits, export tonnage, automobile registrations, State gasoline tax collections, telephone, electric light meters, taxable values and State and local tax revenue.

Pacts developed by the survey show that during this eight-year period the Texas Petroleum industry drilled 81,000 wells all over the State, at a cost of $1,600,000,000. Additional millions of dollars of new capital was brought into the State during this period and expended in acquiring oil leases, building pipe lines, oil refineries, natural gasoline plants, shipping terminals and other facilities necessary to the production, processing and distribution of Texas crude and its many refined products.

Last year Texas produced about 475 million barrels of oil, which is shown to represent an increase over 1930 of 74 per cent. At the same time, home processing of Texas crude oil by refineries showed a gain over 1930
