Men Will Die for

Ribbons and Badges Has the United States been passing up a good thing? The Constitutional fathers laid down a positive prohibition against titles of nobility. But that wouldn't prevent a more liberal use in this country of the device of decora-

If there is anything in the world that delights a man, it is the right to wear a ribbon in his lapel or a medal on his coat. That isn't necessarily as childish as it sounds. If the decoration is a genuine mark of merit, the pride is quite legitimate.

Napoleon once said something to the effect that a man would walk through hell to get a ribbon to wear on his chest. It is true.

The French army, as a result, is one of the most decorated in the world. American soldiers who served in France often make scardonic comment on medals conferred for the snappy opening of a limousine door or the whipping up of a tasty dish of French-fried potatoes.

At a formal British affair, a man feels positively naked without a row of colored bands above the breast pocket, and even Russia, which likes to think of itself as the only genuine people's government in the world, broadcasts decorations with a lavish hand. The Russian of today gets as much kick out of receiving the Order of Lenin for whipping up coal production in the Donetz mines as his aristocratic predecessors used to do when they got the Order of the Golden Panda of St. Leopold from the czar for devising a new tax on the peasants.

The United States has been slow to employ this technique of riveting loyalty to the decoration-dispensing regime. The American military decorations are hard to win, and almost in every case welldeserved. Orders and decorations for civilians are here comparatively unknown. Outside of a few privately awarded medals for physical heroism, the day. lav Fever Season Is Due to Annoy Sufferers In Texas

AUSTIN, Tex -"It will not be any weeks until a large number of Texans will be speezing, wheezing and in other ways evidencing that they are victims of hay fever. Many of these persons, either because of ignorance or carelessness, will endure their affliction bolstered only by the distant hope of the "Fall frost" which will mark the end of their ordeal for this year. On the face of it, these allergics have a rather hard row to hoe. However, for many of them, this situation could be altered most favorably," prophesies the Texas State Health Department. "Indeed, science has developed a successful method of combating many forms of this seasonal affliction. For persons who possess this unusual sensitiveness to the pollens of certain plants, weeds, grasses, and trees serums have en developed to counteract it. "Before this type of treatment can be effective it is essential that the particular pollen causing the disturbance be discovered. Guesswork plays no part in this investigation. The physician will make simple and painless tests with extracts of pollens that are suspect ed of causing the trouble. By way of a needle prick a minute portion of each of the pollens under suspicion is placed under the skin. And that extract which generates a slight local reaction points to the offender. Inoculation of that type of serum then is administered. The potency of this treatment depends upon its use prior to the established early.
