War May Have An Effect Upon State And Its Employees

AUSTIN, Tex.—War's effect already is being felt in Texas' state government. What is doing in the adjutant general's department is blanketed by instructions to all persons in military service, regular army, reserve or national guard, to refrain from discussion, but other state departments are finding conditions changed.

Oil, a prime necessity for warring countries, has been brought under closer national scrutiny. Disrupted were Texas oil-regulating officials over this phase that Railroad Commission Chairman Lon A. Smith and Member Jerry Sadler hastened to Washington by airplane for a conference with U. S. Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes.

All department heads were concerned last the revival of private business activity under spur of war demands may result in numerous resignations from responsible state positions. No death of available employees was feared but possible removal of key men in the departments was considered a possibility.

Recent economy drives by the legislature and Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel have pared state salaries to a low mark. Therefore, state employees who are offered better salaries in private industry cannot be retained by meeting the offered raises.

Supply contracts protect the state institutions from any sudden rise in commodity prices as a result of the war. Most of these contracts became effective on Sept. 1 but they are awarded on bids that were made in July and show no marked advance over previous contract prices. Some of the contracts will be in effect for a year and some for six months. Contracts on seasonal food supplies cover only three months.

On tires, gasoline and lubricants, the state has contracts with almost a year to run. These contracts, however, are not complete protection against price increases. The contracts call for specified reduction under list prices on tires and under tank-wagon prices on gasoline. If the prices go up, the state pays more but still gets the supplies at reduced figures.

Some officials believe that the agreement between the United States and England for cotton-rubber trades will prevent any early extensive advance in the tire quotations.

A 'Disciplined' Press vs. a Free Press

There is a certain fascination about the speeches of Adolf Hitler. To take one of these speeches and read it carefully, sentence by sentence, is always absorbing, especially if one has previously heard the speech delivered in that hysterical, emotional voice, tuned with such Thespian precision to produce the desired effects.

The Danzig speech, aimed obviously at shaking British and French determination as well as at convincing his own people that any general war would be forced on him by British and French relentlessness, was about the best conceivable statement of Hitler's case. Its general phrases have already been commented upon. But here is a passage that really deserves special attention:

"In democracies one may agitate for war, there foreign regimes, statesmen, and heads of state may be attacked, slandered and vilified, for there freedom of speech and press reigns.

"In authoritarian states one may not offer resistance against that, for there discipline rules, and only in states without discipline is it accordingly permissible to agitate for war."

If these statements were true, it would certainly make a powerful case for a "disciplined press." Perhaps as they were shouted in a rapid-fire and hysterical voice, they sounded plausible enough. Certainly the responsibility of agitating for war should not be assumed lightly.

But the moment you read them in cold print, you realize that these words not only are untrue, but the precise opposite is the case.

There is certainly some truth in the charge that the press in democratic countries has often, with some violence, criticized the totalitarian regimes and their leaders. But they have never done so with one-tenth the vigor with which the German press assailed Soviet Russia for 10 years, taking their cue from Hitler's own words, "We must never forget that the regent of present-day Russia are common bloodstained criminals; that here is the scum of humanity, which, favored by conditions in a tragic hour, butchered and rooted out millions of its leading intellects with savage bloodthirstiness... a nation which combines a rare mixture of bestial horror with an inconceivable gift for lying..." And they never have done so with the unanimity compulsory to the German press.

Agitation for war? It is too short a time ago to have forgotten the uniform and simultaneous campaigns of the German press against "oppression of Germans" in Austria, in Czechoslovakia, in Poland, and against the leadership of each country. In each case the campaign was obviously staged to whip up enthusiasm for the invasion which promptly followed.

No, it won't do. Under freedom, unquestioned abuses do happen. But under "discipline," when an entire country's press is simply a great pipe organ on which the ruler plays a war theme whenever he wishes, the possibilities and the actual performance of the press as an "agitator for war" is infinitely greater.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—It probably will be some time before they get the exact details, but U. S. Army people here are waiting anxiously for what you might call the technical breakdown on the Rhineland and Polish campaigns. To get that, they will rely chiefly on 11 U. S. Army officers who are serving as military attaches in our embassies at London, Berlin, Paris, and in Poland.

It is up to these men to send in the fullest possible reports, not only on training and organizational methods of the warring armies, but also on the strategic and tactical details of the campaigns—what tactics and maneuvers are found effective, how new types of armament work out in practice, and so on.

They are in no sense spies. They have to rely, in fact, on what the governments they are accredited to care to tell them.

Two things in particular interest the army—how the famed Polish cavalry has made out against Germany's mechanized army, and how the British and the French fare with the ultra-modern fortifications of the Siegfried line.

In the old days, neutral nations used to send regular military observers to accompany the field armies of nations at war. There wasn't much concealment then, and the observers saw all there was to see.

It's different now. A military observer would see only what his "host" army wanted him to see.

In England, the U. S. Army now has Lieut. Col. Bradford G. Chyzoweth, Maj. George C. McDonough, Maj. Samuel A. Greenwell, and Capt. Rene R. Studier. In Paris, there are Col. Horace H. Fuller, Lieut. Col. Surmer Waite, and Capt. John M. Sterling. In Berlin, there are Maj. Arthur W. ...

FAIR NEVER MISSED

NORWAY, Me.—Asa D. Frost was carried to the Oxford county fair when only 6 weeks old, 72, he has not missed the event and many of those years left the fair with blue ribbons for his cattle.

THE SUN ROSE THIS MORNING

The sun rose this morning shortly after 6 o'clock. How many persons thought of this as a most important event? But what if the sun didn't rise? Chaos would overtake the world!

The sun rises and sets EVERY day. It never misses; it never rests. We all know this, but seldom think of it, so commonplace has this indispensable service of the sun become.

So it is with your Electric Service. Like the sun, electricity never rests; it has no holidays. It works for you 24 hours a day—every day!

But good electric service doesn't just happen! Thousands of dollars are spent annually to keep your electric service GOOD. Many employes spend their entire time in keeping intricate electrical devices, hundreds of miles of wire and other electrical equipment in first class condition so that your electric service shall be as dependable as skilled human hands can make it.

A little voice whispered, "He's always failed you. What did you expect?" With tightly compressed lips, she went to her desk, lifted the paper knife and began going through the mail.

Texan Wins Movie Lead

Six years ago a 17-year-old girl walked into the offices of the dramatic department of Texas State College for Women and announced her intention of becoming a movie actress. Her name was Ardis Ankersen; her home town San Antonio. In a few weeks now Warner Brothers will release "Espionage Agent." The feminine lead will be played by Brenda Marshall, the Ardis Ankersen who has insisted that she would be a movie actress since she was eight years old. Joel McCrea will play opposite her. In college Miss Ankersen was permitted to take advanced dramatics courses while she was yet an underclassman, and she was the only underclassman ever admitted to the College Little Theater.

New Game Laws Go Into Effect

AUSTIN, Tex.—Sixteen new hunting and fishing laws were added this week to the hundreds already on Texas statute books. The laws went into effect 90 days after adjournment of the 46th legislature, which adopted them. Most important was a stronger "universal hunting and fishing license law" invoked in 21 counties, including the game-filled "hill country" west of Austin, El Paso county, and several big game districts in West and Southwest Texas.

Resident hunters in the 21 counties must have a $2 license, and fishermen a 50-cent license. Lakes on the Colorado river above Austin were exempted from the fishing license provision.

Other new laws forbid fishing from the surface of a public highway bridge or causeway; forbid killing brown pelicans, whose numbers are dwindling rapidly; and open or close seasons in various counties. These include: Galveston county—Five-year closed season on deer.

Jack and Young counties—Two year closed season on fox.

Burleson county—Opening season on fox.

Somervell, Bosque, Coryell, Hamilton, Erath, Hood and Johnson counties—Five-year closed season on deer and wild turkey.

Stephens and Parker counties—Five-year closed season on deer and turkey, effective from April 15, 1940, in Parker county.

Bosque county—Prohibiting use of gigs and seines in fishing.

Red River county—Five-year closed season on deer and wild turkey.

Smith and Kaufman counties—Limiting quail hunting to Mondays.

Panola county—Five year closed season on deer and wild turkey.

Comanche county—Four-year closed season on pheasants, quail and bobwhite.

Bastrop county—Five-year closed season on deer and wild turkey.
