The announcement was made by H. J. Tanner, secretary-manager of the Eastland Chamber of Commerce.

Germany Is Ready To Start A New Drive For Peace

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—Well informed Nazis said tonight that Germany would start immediate consultations with Russia and Italy on "common defense measures" as a direct consequence of allied rejection of Adolf Hitler's peace proposals.

Germany's whole aim, now that British Prime Minister Chamberlain has replied with "unheard of insults to Hitler" will be to end the war and restore peace as quickly as possible, these sources said.

It was learned Hitler consulted all night with his aides and members of the general staff, navy and air force commands on plans to continue the war.

American Ship Reports Saving Crew of Vessel

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The master of the S. S. President Harding advised the United States lines today it had gone to the rescue of a French tanker in the Atlantic, and enroute had saved 26 members of the crew of the British steamer Heronspool.

The message reported the President Harding, responding to an SOS from the French tanker Emile Mignot had picked up all of the Heronspool crew and when the American ship arrived at the French vessel it was in flames. There was no sign of any crew members of the tanker.

The American vessel found the burning tanker about 100 miles southwest of Ireland. Her message gave no details concerning what happened to the Heronspool.

Expansion Causes Gains Ad Losses In Gasoline Supply

FORT WORTH, Tex.—Texas weather, which oil-timers say "only fools and furriners" dare predict, has played strange tricks on the supply of gasoline throughout Tarrant county government vehicles.

During the first eight months of 1938, gasoline bought by the county "shrank" a total of 1,325 gallons. During the corresponding period this year, the supply "expanded" 4,336 gallons. Changing weather conditions was given as the main cause of the fluctuation.

Gasoline expands in hot weather and shrinks in cool weather. Computations by experts show that the variation is from three per cent "plus" in 110-degree weather to three per cent "minus" in zero temperature.

During the first eight months of this year, gasoline consumption by county vehicles was 898,739 gallons, 4,336 more than was purchased. The year before, the eight months inventory was 337,446 gallons, or 1,325 gallons less than was purchased.

Only complaint that county officials have made is that the fluctuation is unpredictable and they cannot budget it.

States Oil Stakes Well In Coleman

COLEMAN, Oct. 13.—A new outpost to the Navies pool in northwest Coleman county has been made by States Oil corporation and others of Eastland.

Anac Oil corporation of Coleman and D. E. Semmes of San Antonio are drilling on No. 1-F Morris below 1,150 feet, in shale. The well is 1,320 feet from the south and west lines of the HT&BB survey 74.

GERMAN DRIVE IS AWAITED BY THE ALLIES

LONDON, Oct. 13.—A high allied military source said today that the armies of Great Britain and France were fully prepared to face a major German offensive. Such a offensive is expected shortly, the allied official asserted.

Although the German thrust is generally expected as a result of apparent collapse of peace negotiations, military sources indicated the allied sources were not contemplating a big-scale offensive this year, as weather conditions will not be favorable.

"But Adolf Hitler cannot wait until spring," they said, in explaining why they believe the Germans would risk a major attack.

"We can wait and we will be stronger then."

It was pointed out that due to unfavorable weather no great battle was fought in the world war after October.

Messages from Paris reflected agreement by French military officials regarding possibility of a Nazi attack. They said a sudden lull on the Rhine front indicated an early counter attack.

British sources said they believed the Germans had three possible routes for a big offensive.

1.—The Saar region, where the French have slowly edged forward in an attempt to dominate the rich industrial valley.

2.—Through Belgium, a route which the Nazis have repeatedly denied they would use.

3.—Through Holland and Belgium to strike through the less heavily fortified French lines in the north.

Meanwhile precautions against Nazi air raids were increased and Chamberlain considered making an address to the empire Saturday.

GARNER SAID TO FAVOR NEW MODIFICATION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Vice President John Garner was reported, authoritatively today, to be using his influence to persuade senate administration leaders to accept modification of rigid restrictions on American shipping imposed under President Roosevelt's proposed neutrality program.

Garner was understood to have told leaders in charge of the program that acceptance of modifications would aid the senate in reaching a final vote soon. It was understood that Chairman Key Pittman, democrat, Nevada, of the foreign relations committee, has agreed to take the modifications under advisement.

The development came while two major speeches in the neutrality debate were being delivered on the senate floor. One speaker, Sen. Robert Taft, republican, Ohio, appealed for support of arms embargo repeal as a means of insuring our neutrality and to avoid involvement in European wars.

The other, Sen. Gerald Nye, republican, North Dakota, an isolationist leader, told the senate, "you can't build sound prosperity on the sands of wholesale murder."

ALL POWERS IN SCRAMBLE TO BE PREPARED

Europe's big and little powers hastened preparations for the worst today as hope of peace dimmed.

There was a lull on the fighting fronts, also.

But in the war of words:

1.—A high British source said an early German offensive was anticipated and the allies were fully ready to meet it.

2.—German officials took similar precautions against air raids and denounced allied rejection of Adolf Hitler's peace terms as an arrogant insult, that left only the possibility of neutral intervention to prevent a "bath of blood" in Europe.

3.—King Gustav of Sweden called a conference of rulers of Finland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden for Oct. 18 to study measures for defense or maintenance of neutrality.

4.—Russia resumed negotiations after a 17-day lapse with Turkey for a non-aggression pact, and it was reported Soviet demands on Finland were comparatively moderate so far. The United States, Denmark and Sweden had urged moderation from Russia.

5.—Finland presented a determination to preserve her sovereignty. The national service act was invoked, making all subject to wartime duty.

6.—David Lloyd George, British World War prime minister, opened a national peace campaign in an effort to bring belligerent nations and neutrals into a conference.

Britain Backs Off and Looks at the War Anew

Oddly silent throughout the first month of the European war, David Lloyd George has at last spoken, and when he spoke he said a mouthful.

The little Welshman who was Britain's World War premier, and one of the "Big Four" who made the peace of Versailles, has suggested that Britain make clear that it is not fighting to force back under Polish rule the unwilling people of another race, nor for restoration of a regime which had been a "wretched class government," had failed to prepare its people for defense, and then deserted them when their "feudal" government tumbled about their ears in military disaster.

These are bitter words. Lloyd George goes further to suggest that the Russian invasion is not as bad as the German because Russia took over territory largely occupied by non-Polish peoples. His implication is that even if Germany should be forced to disgorge the part of Poland it has swallowed, Britain should not ask the same of Russia, and that even if Polish state should be re-established, it would look much different from the one set up in 1920.

According to his book, "The Truth About the Peace Treaties," published last year, Lloyd George is not inconsistent in this stand. No one gave more trouble than the Poles in the Versailles deliberations, he indicated, and cities repeated instances in which the Poles demanded that more territory be included in the new Poland than was justified by populations. France, he said, wanted Poland to be as large as possible for military reasons, and French pressure led to including in Poland "populations which would be an alien and hostile element . . . a source of permanent weakness and danger."

The weakness has been shown, the danger realized. Now what?

Even more interesting than what Lloyd George said was the time he said it, just when Poland as a functioning nation had ceased to exist. Just what is Lloyd George trying to tell the British people and the world? He denied that he wanted to relieve Britain of her guarantee to Poland, though he had been against making it without Russian support.

What will Britain do now? The Polish war is over. Restoration of a Polish state is one of the British war aims.

But what kind of a Polish state? Lloyd George's letter strongly suggests that the part of Poland taken by Russia may never be restored. This would seem an effort to assure Russia that Britain does not want to fight her, but only Germany.

Any restoration of Poland can be accomplished only by a full-dress war on Germany. Such a war has really not started yet. Will it start soon, and will it start at all? And if it does, what will be the stated war aims of the British and French?

At the end of a month of the European war, these are the questions Britain and France may be expected to answer. Until such questions are definitely answered, it is difficult to pierce the fog that now lies heavy over the European war scene.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—The real question at stake in the fight over revision of the neutrality law is both simpler and more profound than the general trend of argument so far has revealed it to be. Basically, it is just this:

Is this country going to decide now, once and for all, that the most important thing is to see Hitler beaten—or is it going to decide that the most important thing is to stay at peace even if that may mean having to swallow a Hitler victory over England and France?

Underneath all of the window dressing, that is what is at stake. The struggle over repeal of the arms embargo has become a symbol. Boiled down, what it symbolizes is—do we take sides, or don't we?

The one driving force behind the effort to remove the arms embargo is a conviction that this country cannot afford to stand by and see Hitler win.

That conviction rests on the belief that the world just won't be big enough, in the long run, to hold both democracy and the totalitarian idea. Because of that belief, this administration is not now neutral.

It wants to help England and France, and that is why it wants the arms embargo lifted. And since the actual, concrete effect of lifting the embargo is less important than its symbolic effect, the administration—in the Pittman revisions to the Bloom bill—is willing to consent to practically any stiffening of the present law if only the embargo clause can be lifted.

It ought to be added that the revisionists are entirely sincere in saying that they do not believe that lifting the embargo will lead to war. There is no need to doubt that the administration means what it says when it announces that it proposes to keep the country at peace.

But it is equally true that the reason for trying to get the embargo lifted is a desire to exert America's influence against Hitler. The administration wants to see Hitler beaten. That is the basic fact that underlies all of the talk about "true neutrality," and the like.

On the other hand, there are the isolationists. Like the administration, they are centering all of their attention on the arms embargo itself. The fact that the Pittman revisions give them practically everything but the embargo leaves them cold. For the conviction which holds them together is the conviction that the one important thing for America is to stay at peace—that the calamity of going to war is so much greater than the calamity of a Hitler victory that the latter ought to be risked rather than the former.

And the bitterness of the fight now being waged can't be understood unless you understand the thing which many men in Washington are saying privately—but which few say in public. These private opinions boil down to this:

That because the arms embargo does symbolize so much beyond its actual content, we are liable to commit ourselves in something we can't back out of if we repeal it. If, that is, we have an administration that wholeheartedly wants Hitler beaten, and if we repeal the arms embargo in order to make Hitler's defeat more likely, then the die is cast and we are in for it whenever something beyond mere repeal of the arms embargo is necessary to keep Germany from winning.

"OUT OUR WAY" - - - - - By Williams

SERIAL STORY
JOAN OF ARKANSAS BY JERRY BRONDFIELD
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Illustrated by Art Krenz

"Remember that Purdue game when Keith scored two touchdowns in the last five minutes? They couldn't touch him. And Webber leading the way."

YESTERDAY, a cryptic telephone message announced the arrival of a "transfer" to Alpha Nu society. That's football hero, Keith Rhodes, his brother, Dan Webber, and Carol Reid, chapter president, meet the train. The girls—Joan Johnson—the most beautiful used they have ever seen. Keith tumbles immediately.

"Oh—you aren't?" Her tone was icy. "And with what do you concern yourself besides football?" "Ceramics engineering," he answered curtly. "How quaint," she murmured. Keith laughed. "Sure—I tell him he's wasting his time, but he

"You abide by all the rules don't you?" Joan observed. "His only bad habit," Keith said. "Okay, Web—let's go before you work yourself up into a frenzy and kill some poor third-string end." "Well, there goes the varsity,"

CHAPTER II
"YOU'RE going to like it here at Tech," Carol said enthusiastically. "But how come you transferred from Northwestern? And why didn't you let us know? Not that it makes much difference," she added hastily. "But was it a sudden decision on your part?"

Joan looked back coolly. "Just wanted a change of scenery, I guess. Have a successful rush week?" she asked in turn. "Swell . . . best in years. Fourteen pledges all sewed up."

"All swell lookers with plenty of money," Keith chimed in. "Alpha Nu certainly gets the cream of the crop—the bestest and the mostst. Incidentally, the girls are wondering if they're getting a jemon in you. They'll be breaking their necks to see what they get."

"Pay no attention to him," Carol advised, "and tell us more about yourself. That is, if you don't mind the audience."

"Not at all. I was born in Arkansas but have lived in Connecticut for the last five years. I was having a pretty fair time at Northwestern, but I had thought it would be better if I went to school nearer home. You see, mother died last year and Dad figured it would be more convenient for me to come home week-ends or for him to pay me a flying visit for a day. So I transferred here for my last two years. Dad wanted me to come here in the first place."

"What's your major?" Dan asked curiously, entering the conversation for the first time. She glanced back. "Why, none, really. Just fiddling around with a general arts course, learning how to kill time."

"Not surprised at all," he remarked, but was surprised at himself in turn for having the nerve to say as much.

keeps harping on the fact that he doesn't want to sell bonds or teach physics when he graduates. But you'll like him when you get to know him better. Great guy, Web is . . . lived with him for three years and I know." Joan turned rearward again. "Hear that, Master Webber? You're getting a plug. I'm being told I'll like you when I get to know you better."

"It's doubtful," he returned dolefully, and both girls laughed. TWO more blocks and they drove up before the Alpha Nu house. There were a half dozen girls on the terrace and as she walked up the flagstone path Joan felt, rather than noticed, their frank looks of appraisal.

"You sure had us guessing," Kay Granger said during the course of introductions, "but then, you couldn't blame us, popping in at the last minute." Joan smiled in agreement and turned to hear Chesbro chatter. "Pay your fees yet? There'll be a goshawful lineup at the registrar's office tomorrow if you haven't."

"I refuse to be worried," Joan replied lightly as they entered the house. They went on a tour of inspection and showed Joan the room she was to occupy with Marianne Burrows and Chesbro. Marianne was a junior from Cincinnati with small, almost doll-like features and dusty blond hair. "Hope you don't mind three in a room," Marianne laughed, "but it won't be so bad because I take up hardly any space at all."

They went downstairs and found Keith and Dan ready to leave. "Web's afraid we'll be late to practice and wanted to dash off. I insisted on staying to say goodbye—for the time being, that is." "I wasn't just rushing off," Dan blurted. "Keith knows darn well we're due down at the stadium by 3:30, latest. Only have four days before the first game."

Carol when they had gone. "You said something then," Elaine Chesbro added. "Especially Keith. Gee—remember that Purdue game last year when he scored two touchdowns in the last five minutes? They just couldn't grab him. And Webber leading the way."

CAROL led Joan over to the glider. "There isn't a girl on the campus who wouldn't go wild over Keith Rhodes if he gave her half a chance," she explained. "He's the glamor boy if ever there was one. But he just isn't the kind that can be pinned down. And the best have worked on him."

There was a slight gleam in Joan's eye. "That so?" she purred. "Maybe people around here don't have what it takes." Carol detected the challenge in her voice and smiled. "It's an open field, darling."

"May I be so bold as to ask if you're one of those who has tried?" Carol laughed heartily at that. "Lord, no. Keith and I come from the same town-upstate . . . went through high school together. I probably know him better than anyone on campus."

"Really," she went on to explain, "Keith is a swell kid. But to him life is just a lark . . . and he's never heard of clipped wings." It was then that an express truck rolled up. "Luggage for Miss Joan Johnson," the driver announced, coming up the walk. "That's me," Joan called, standing up. She hailed a red-headed pledge. "Helene, show them where my room is, will you please?"

The girl on the terrace stared wide-eyed as the driver and his helper started to bring up the luggage. First a Heamer trunk, then a smaller hand trunk, four full-sized suitcases, and numerous hat boxes. "Would you look at that still?" Chesbro whispered to a pledge. "If that isn't a traveling department store it sure ought to be." (To Be Continued)

LOCALLY OWNED GROCERY TO BE OPENED AT CORNER OF MAIN AND MARSTON STREETS HERE FRIDAY

Ranger is today welcoming a new grocery business, owned and operated by Lester Crossley, and with the meat department leased and operated by Lou Williams. Jack Rawls, another experienced groceryman, is to be an engaged as a checker.

The Clover Farm Stores, under which name the new grocery is to be operated, will open at the corner of Main and Marston Streets Friday morning, with a complete line of groceries and meats, the grocery department handling famous Clover Farm products, packed by Waples Plaiter, especially for the Clover Farm Stores. Other high standard brands will be stocked by the store, also, it was stated today by Crossley.

Crossley, well known Ranger, who assumes ownership of the new Clover Farm Stores, opening at the corner of Main and Marston streets in the Marston Building, has had six and a half years experience in the grocery business.

Williams, who has had 16 years experience as a meat cutter, has leased and will operate the market department of the Clover Farm Stores, located at Main and Marston streets.

Rawls, who has had three and a half years experience as a checker, has accepted a position in the new Clover Farm Stores, to be opened Friday morning, under the ownership and management of Lester Crossley.

Plenty of parking space for customers is afforded by the new building, with space for cars available both on Main and on Marston Streets. The building has been repainted in the green and ivory colors of all Clover Farm Stores, and shelves have been added, a meat counter installed and all fixtures have been made ready for the big opening.

Much time and effort has been expended in preparing the building for the new business, as the location has been vacant for several years, and now presents a striking appearance. The green and ivory color scheme has been carried out, both inside and outside the building. Display of merchandise is made possible by three large show windows and the attractive arrangement of the shelving and vegetable counters.

In addition to the standard lines of merchandise, fresh fruits, vegetables and all kind of produce will be handled in season, as well as butter, eggs, milk and all kinds of poultry and dairy products. In the meat department fresh and prepared meats will be stocked at all times, giving the public a large assortment of the very choicest of meats of all kinds. Lester Crossley, the owner and operator of the store, has had six and a half years of experience in the grocery business, most of which has been in Ranger. Lou Williams has been a meat cutter for the past 16 years, with all his experience in this line being here. Jack Rawls has been engaged as a checker in the grocery business for three and a half years, all of which has been in Ranger. Due to their service to the buying public in Ranger all three are well known and have become well acquainted with the needs of the local buying public, as well as that of the entire Ranger trade territory, and are also well acquainted with all who have groceries or local produce to sell.

Football Thriller Now At Arcadia

By BOB CONSIDINE

All right, suppose you missed the major football games of last season. You didn't have the opportunity, the time or the money. You find yourself now on the brink of another football season, and yet your mind isn't precisely percolating on the gridiron game. It is filled with the world series and the remnants of the summer sports program. You're football style.

The best short cut I can recommend for you is Pete Smith's new short "Football Thrills of 1938." The Arcadia gets it Friday and Saturday.

It's the "Readers Digest" of the last football season, for in 10 minutes it condenses all the dazzling plays of the principal games of such top-flight squadrons as the University of Southern California, Alabama, Duke, Pitt, Carnegie Tech, Minnesota, Washington, Army, Notre Dame, Penn. Columbia, Wisconsin and Northwestern.

But this is more than a compilation of great football newsreel shots, though that would be enough to satisfy the average fan. Smith's new short, which is the season's first football film, is football footage selected with a rare eye for story-telling. With Pete lending a colorful descriptive background to the reel it not only tells the thrilling story of 1938

BANQUET OF METHODISTS ON TUESDAY

Rev. J. N. B. Scott, pastor of the First Methodist Church at Ft. Worth, will be one of the principal speakers at a banquet of the First Methodist District Tuesday evening at 7:15 in the First Methodist Church at Eastland.

The banquet will serve as a rally preparatory to finishing work of the conference year. The annual conference will be Nov. 8-12 at Fort Worth.

Approximately 300 persons are expected at the banquet. A turkey dinner will be served with plates at 35 cents each.

Pass Receiver Is Now Thrower With Efforts Successful

Travis Cook several years ago was on the receiving end of an Eastland High School passing combination which was outstanding in this section. The other half of the combination was Tommy Samuels.

Now Cook is passing for East Texas State Teachers College at Huntsville and apparently is successful at that end of the passing offensive as he was on the receiving end.

Cook passed 26 yards to a receiver in E. T. S. T. C.'s recent game with Southwestern Louisiana Institute of Lafayette, La., enabling the Texas school to win 6 to 0. Most of the yards gained by the Commerce school were results of Cook's passes.
