It was presumed, after she was found, that the woman had milked one of her cows and was going into the field in search of another cow on the farm to milk when she was struck on with the stroke.

Mrs. Dingler was unable to tell those in the searching party or a doctor who later called of the circumstances of the occurrence.

"What are you trying to do?" were the words she weakly uttered, when the searchers found her. She was clad only in a house dress and had not worn a hat or stockings.

Pittman Offers Amendment To Neutrality Bill

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Sen. Key Pittman, democrat, Nevada, of the senate foreign relations committee, placed before the senate amendment to the neutrality bill eliminating 90 days credit and placing trade on a cash and carry basis.

Pittman placed the amendment after criticism appeared on the 90-day credits to warring nations.

The action, expected to increase support for prompt passage of the bill, came as Sen. Worth Clark, democrat, Idaho, opponent of arms embargo repeal, delivered a slashing attack on Great Britain.

"The trial of the British empire is built on two things, blood and treachery," said Clark.

MAVERICK IS INDICTED BY GRAND JURY

By United Press
SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 16.—Mayor Maury Maverick, former congressman, was indicted today by a Bexar County grand jury on five felony counts and "many" misdemeanor charges.

Maverick quickly arranged bond of $1,000 each on the felony counts and $500 each on 10 misdemeanor charges. The felony bills charged unlawful advance of funds to pay poll taxes.

For the past two weeks the grand jury has been investigating reports that poll taxes for voters had been paid by the International Garment Workers Union. An official of the union denied the allegation the union had paid for poll taxes, but admitted they had contributed to Maverick's campaign fund.

Maverick acknowledged the contribution, but denied knowledge of any paid poll taxes irregularity. He charged investigation, directed by a political foe, District Attorney John Shook, was "dirty politics."

GERMAN PLANES ARE BEATEN BACK IN RAID ON PORT IN SCOTLAND

Three German airplanes, which attempted to raid the Rosyth Dock Yards and destroy the famous Forth Bridge were shot down today in the vicinity of Edinburgh, Scotland.

Of a crew of four men in one of the planes one man was drowned, two were killed by British gun fire and the fourth rescued.

Officials announced the raid caused no casualties and no property damage.

Indicating that more than three German planes were involved, the British said it was understood that "survivors" were driven back over the North Sea.

It was announced that no bombs fell on land, but the Germans released bombs which fell into the sea. Reports after the raid said three members of the crew of another German plane were captured.

A sudden burst of sea and air fighting indicated that the Nazis were starting the "war in earnest" threatened by Adolf Hitler.

Coincidentally with reports from Berlin that Hitler had sent the message to Joseph Stalin as a preliminary to charting Germany's future course, there came:

1—The Nazi aerial attack on Scotland.

2—An announcement by the German High Command that the British Battle Cruiser Repulse had been torpedoed. The high command first announced that the Repulse was put out of commission, but later corrected that statement. The British denied the claims.

3—Unconfirmed reports from Norwegian fishermen that three battleships and several airplanes—presumably British, attacked and disabled a lone warship, believed to be German.

4—German announcement that a British bombing plane and a French scouting plane had been shot down on the Rhineland. The British reported a flight over Central and Northern Germany last night.

The fighting was a development against a background of important diplomatic negotiations at Moscow. The spread of Soviet influence was meeting with difficulty at three points:

GUARD PLANES SEEK CONVICTS WHO ESCAPED

By United Press
HOUSTON, Oct. 16.—A Texas National Guard airplane took off here today to join the hunt for three escaped convicts whose flight across Central Texas was marked by holdups, automobile thefts, and kidnappings.

Search for the convicts centered in the vicinity of Waco and Temple, after they kidnaped a 16-year-old filling station attendant and stole his car at Hearne early today, state police said.

Two Mexican women, kidnaped by the convicts shortly after their escape from Central Prison Farm near Sugar Land Saturday, told Sheriff R. M. Kennedy of Cameron that they had been criminally assaulted, state police said.

The fugitives kidnaped and later released, Sunday, Mayor E. F. Krieger of Giddings, and his son and a filling station operator.

The fugitives were believed to be Aubrey Scalley, 41, Dallas; Leo White, 33, Brenham, and Joe Marvin Burleson, 31, of Fort Worth.

A fourth convict, V. Harvey, 45, was captured Saturday night near Seely by Texas Rangers.

Gallogly Makes A Personal Plea To The Governor

AUSTIN, Oct. 16.—Richard Gallogly wealthy fugitive from two life sentences in the Georgia penitentiary, told his story to Gov. O'Daniel here today in an attempt to prevent extradition.

Gallogly recalled that the killing of a drug store clerk in which he was alleged to have participated, occurred 11 years ago today when he was only 19 years old.

Previously Gallogly's attorneys had told the governor that they would show Gallogly pleaded guilty to two holdup murders to save a college chum from a death sentence.

Gallogly said the holdups originated from a drunken college prank.

The friend, George Harsh, had shot out the face of Oglethorpe College clock and attempted the holdups to get money to pay for the damage, he said.

Reorganization Of Schools Is Urged As Major Problem

AUSTIN, Oct. 16.—School reorganization will be recommended to the next regular session of the Texas legislature in 1941, and was expected today to be almost as big an issue as old age pensions.

Gov. O'Daniel dropped the pension discussion Sunday with an announcement all legislators had not replied to his query about a social security special session.

Americans Want Their Washing

Americans are, in some ways, an even funnier race than the French are alleged to be in the words of the old song. Come war or revolution, come weal or woe, they want their creature comforts.

The complaints of some of the passengers on the Iroquois that the passage homeward from Europe was rough and the service terrible makes us think of one of the greatest of the short stories of W. Somerset Maugham, which he called "Mr. Harrington's Washing."

Mr. Harrington was an American in Russia at the time of the revolution, seeking certain contracts. So thoroughly inculcated in him were his midwestern ways, that he had no understanding whatever of what was going on around him. He saw everything in terms of his own life and home surroundings. A meek enough man, Mr. Harrington stood by until he got his contract, from a cynical official who finally signed it knowing that his government was doomed and that it meant nothing. As revolution lowered overhead, Mr. Harrington was finally persuaded to leave the city, but insisted that no decent person would do so without proper clean shirts. His laundry had been sent out, and those slovenly Russians, who never seemed to do anything right, had not returned it. That the talk of revolution could really be serious never entered Mr. Harrington's head. Such things simply didn't happen. So he went out into the dark streets to get his washing.

But the patrols of irresponsible soldiers are revolutionaries roaming the streets were intent on other things than Mr. Harrington and his laundry. The next morning anxious friends found Mr. Harrington sprawled in a gutter, riddled with bullets, a futile and pathetic package of laundry still grasped in his cold hand.

A few of the Americans in Europe for the summer holidays seem to have a little of Mr. Harrington's spirit. They resent that Europe should interrupt their holidays with a mere war, and they do not propose to be bothered by it. And when ships are sent to bring them home, there are some to complain that the ships did not ride smoothly in a storm, and that cabin accommodations and service were pretty poor.

The State Department has now announced officially that "each American citizen in belligerent countries desiring to come back has had an opportunity to return." Ambassador Kennedy has twice warned Americans in England to go home unless their business was urgent and necessary. Six weeks of actual war have followed at least two weeks of urgent crisis. Yet ships returning from Europe come in half-loaded.

There is a war going on in Europe. Europeans are serious about it, even if a few Americans seem not to be. Will the time come when the United States is asked to go to war to defend the rights of American summer trippers to travel through war zones in staterooms with private bath?

• BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—A vast amount of "war talk" of different kinds is going around in Washington official circles.

First there is the public talk. It is discreet enough for anybody and consists largely of ringing declarations that this country is going to stay out of war.

Then, there is private talk, which ranges all the way from definite predictions that the nation will be in the war by spring, to fatalistic remarks that while the administration will make an honest effort to keep out, it will do no good because it is "inevitable" that America will ultimately get involved.

On Sept. 9, as conservative and non-sensational a magazine as Business Week announced flatly in its Washington letter that the administration was calculating that the United States would be in the war within six months.

Shortly thereafter a reputable business-advice service notified its clients that every indication here pointed to war by mid-winter.

The enlisted strength of the army and navy is being increased, under the "limited emergency" proclaimed by the President. A fleet of decommissioned World War destroyers is being put back into service. New details have been sent to strengthen the defenses at Panama and elsewhere in the Caribbean. Naval patrols far out in the Atlantic are under preparation. The War Department is pushing its program of "educational orders" by which industry is helped to retold its plants for possible war production.

All of which, military men say, simply add up to the precautions which any sensible nation would take in a time of world crisis. Yet the atmosphere which these steps create is very definitely a warlike atmosphere. You can sense it in the War and Navy departments. It extends to little things, too, as well as to big ones.

The most fantastic rumors are going around. Here are two samples, heard within the past week on Capitol Hill.

NUMBER ONE: A congressman got a long-distance call from an old-time college classmate, who is now on the staff of an "international banker" in New York. The classmate was worried. He'd just been talking with a member of a British mission sent over here to prepare for the turning of British-held American securities into cash for war purchases; the Briton told him his government felt that the American government was going to get into the war too soon—that it ought to wait about eight months, meanwhile preparing its factories for wartime production; because if it came in too soon the British and French would have to supply U. S. soldiers with rifles and artillery as they did last time.

NUMBER TWO: That France and Germany have had extended peace negotiations of late, and that both have tried to persuade London to enter into a peace agreement, but that London has held off because of pressure from Washington.

Stories such as these may be utterly absurd and groundless. You can always hear wild yarns of one kind or another in Washington. But the point is that stories such as these, circulating in a war-like atmosphere, in the midst of frequent predictions that the United States is going to war, make up the background against which the embargo repeal question is going to be decided.

In view of which it is asking a good deal to expect that the question will be debated and disposed of coldly, logically and without emotion.

Game Restocking Of Fields, Streams Being Increased

AUSTIN, Tex.—To keep Texas' fields and streams first in the thoughts of hunters and fishermen, both in the State and out, the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission during the past 12 months increased its restocking program and promoted interest in wildlife through a state-wide game management project, it was pointed out today in the Commission's Annual Report for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1938.

A total of 20,000 bobwhites, quail were distributed to sportsmen and landowners as compared to 14,075 distributed during the 1937-38 fiscal year, the report states. The Commission distributed the birds on a cooperative basis, a quail being given free to each purchaser of one.

In addition, 533 wild turkeys and 194 white-tailed deer were distributed to depleted areas over the state. During the preceding year no turkeys were distributed because the crop would not justify it.

Successful live trappings of antelopes in West Texas was reported. It was the first antelope trapping program ever attempted in Texas. Thirty-three of the wary animals were trapped, placed in padded crates and transported to areas in West Texas. The program, to be resumed within a few weeks, ultimately will result in the establishment of about 15 good herds in West Texas, the report says.

Production at nine State fish hatcheries was stepped up 20.7 per cent during the year, and construction of a tenth hatchery at Natalia, in Medina County, was virtually completed. Six months after work on the Natalia hatchery was started fish were being produced in 13 ponds, the report says. When completed the hatchery will consist of 42 ponds.

A total of 3,429,592 fish were produced at the other nine hatcheries, an increase of 360,887 over the previous year's total of 3,068,705. All of the fish were of fingerling size when released, except 175,000 black bass fry which were placed in suitable waters, and approximately 88 per cent of the fish distributed went to public lakes and streams. The Lake Dallas hatchery led in production with a total of 740,016 fish, the report says.

The report points out that 1,758,247 fish, slightly over half the number produced at the hatcheries, were rescued from drying up streams or other unsuitable waters and placed in favorable lakes or streams during the year.

The state-wide game management project has stimulated "unprecedented" interest the report says, many sportsman-landowner groups having offered to finance necessary work on their lands. "In Polk County, for instance," the report says, "one group has put up $5,000 for use in an experimental demonstration project the object of which is to increase quail. Many similar instances could be cited."

The report says the number of hunters and fishermen who bought licenses increased during the year.

Some Operations Are Termed Harmful

FORT WORTH, Tex.—Dr. John Zahorsky of St. Louis told 200 Fort Worth physicians that many operations to remove children's tonsils and adenoids were not only useless, but sometimes actually harmful.

Dr. Zahorsky, a teacher of pediatrics, said that tonsils and adenoids in children ought not to be removed unless they are a source of infection. Removal of them sometimes invites respiratory trouble, he added.

Dr. Meyer Wiener of St. Louis declared that measles patients need not be left in a dark room. A 30-year study, Dr. Wiener said, has convinced him that light causes no ill effects on the eyes of measles sufferers.

Mexico Has Little Use For Literature

AUSTIN, Tex.—Mexico has little use for literature in its magazines, a survey made by Dr. Jefferson Spell, professor of romance languages at The University of Texas, discloses.

Dr. Spell's report shows that literary periodicals in Mexico are declining both in number and quality, with only 10 such magazines in the country now, compared to 40 that existed in 1900.

His statistics were printed in the current issue of the PLMA, a publication of the Modern Language Association of America.

"These literary periodicals do not reflect the social upheaval which has been taking place in Mexico," Dr. Spell said. "Instead, emphasis has been placed on less vital subjects, as the productions of the United States and more intimate international relations."

However, he pointed out, Mexican writers in other publications have caught the spirit of the rising mass and made it the theme of much of their writing.

Red Cross Warns Home Is More Dangerous Than Highway, Urges Check for Hazards

American Red Cross supplies householders and farmers with a check list of accident hazards in fight against large annual death toll. Hazards shown: top, left, mowers, barrows and other farm machinery, left in gear when making repairs, may result in grave injury to farmer. Top right: pointed shears in the hands of children are as dangerous as matches. Below right: most home accidents are due to falls, and scatter rugs on polished floors should be anchored by use of non-skid lining as shown.

HOME mishaps kill or injure many more persons than motor vehicles, yet the average householder faces traffic with misgiving and relaxes at home.

Each year hazards injure more than 100,000 persons engaged in farm work, yet the farmer fails to take safety precautions which the factory worker adopts as a matter of course.

Together home and farm work accidents last year killed 35,400 adults and children and injured the staggering number of 4,750,000 persons.

To combat this annual accident scourge the American Red Cross launched a nation-wide program in 1935 to acquaint householders and farm workers with the hazards coincident with their work and home life. This year more than 1900 Red Cross chapters are sponsoring this task in the communities they serve.

On October 23 the annual Red Cross campaign will begin throughout the nation to assist householders to discover and eliminate hazards liable to cause accidents in the home. Members of the American Junior Red Cross and their schoolmates will distribute check lists to parents and assist in examining their own homes and in removing hazards. This Red Cross warning reaches more than 9,000,000 homes and farms each year.

The Red Cross stresses the need of removing hazards which may cause falls, as this type of accident resulted in more than half of last year's home accident fatalities. Among chief causes are poorly lighted stairs, loose railings, small rugs improperly anchored and children's toys left about. Burns and explosions caused the next heaviest loss of life, 6,300 being killed in 1938 by this type of accident, and the Red Cross self-check list points to the danger of scalding liquids in pots and pans left near the edge of

SERIAL STORY

JOAN OF ARKANSAS

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY! Keith shows Joan the highlights of Tech's campus. Classes begin and Joan, Keith and Joan have one course together. Keith has a brilliant idea to cut class, but Joan chills that notion.

CHAPTER V

JOAN saw Keith only in class that Friday. He hadn't even called her during the week, but she knew Tech opened with Wesleyan on Saturday, and according to the papers—little as she read the sports pages—Coach Bill Slocum had been driving the varsity fiercely.

Football had been nothing more than a game to her up until then, but as she walked to the stadium with Marianne, Elaine, and Carol for the opener she suddenly was aware of a new interest. Keith, of course.

It was a glorious September afternoon. Not one among the thousands who were streaming across the campus as much as carried a blanket.

Carol bought a paper just before they entered the stadium. It was virtually a football edition, with players' pictures plastered all over the front page. And splashed across three columns, largest of all, was Keith Rhodes. It was a full-length action shot with Keith stiff-arming an imaginary opponent.

She stole another look after they found their seats.

"Some stuff, eh?" Carol observed.

Joan smiled. "Begins to look as though Keith is THE varsity."

She checked his number in the program. It was 28. It took her a little while before she picked him out of the swarm of maroon-jerseyed figures who were scurrying about in pre-game warmups.

Keith was sending long, spiraling puns downfield. One of his kicks soared 60 yards and a prolonged "oooooh" rolled up from the packed stands.

"He's really wonderful," Marianne broke in excitedly. "Wait'll you see, Joan."

JOAN saw... So did 50,000 others. Wesleyan kicked off and it was Keith Rhodes who took the ball deep on his own three-yard line.

Straight up the sidelines he went for about 15 yards as his interferers cut down the first three Wesleyan men to break through.

Then he cut sharply to the left, stiff-armed a Wesleyan end and reversed his field.

At midfield there were only three Wesleyan men in his path. Keith timed himself in back of the lone Tech interferer who was still with him. The blocker was No. 40.

Cutting slightly to the right again, Keith gestured with his free hand. No. 40 cut down two of the Wesleyan men like a scythe, with a long roll block. Keith broke into the clear and then went down heavily as the last Wesleyan tackler spilled him on the 20 with a desperate lunge.

Joan found herself on her feet, screaming. Marianne was pounding Carol on the back. They could scarcely make themselves heard above the din.

"You've, 80 yards!" someone above them howled. "Nice goin', Keith!"

They quieted down as Tech went into a huddle.

"Did you SEE that?" Carol asked breathlessly.

"And that No. 40," exclaimed Elaine. "The way he ran interference. Who was that, I wonder." She ran her finger down the list.

But Joan had already found it. "Dan Webber," she said.

Tech took it over in four plays, Keith scoring standing up on a reverse good for eight yards and the touchdown.

JUST before the half ended Keith scored again. Someone took out the Wesleyan end neatly and Keith breezed wide. He faked the defensive halfback into lunging toward him, sidestepped and went down the sidelines for 38 yards.

Joan felt a thrill go through her as he touched the ball down. The Tech players swarmed about him, pounding him on the head and shoulders. The man who had blocked the end all but wrung Keith's hand off he pumped it so hard. It was No. 40, but few had heard him.

The score at the of the game was 26-0. Early in the third quarter Keith crashed over from the five-yard line on a delayed buck, and in the fourth quarter Quarterback Johnny White passed to Barney Hughes standing all alone in the end zone.

"I took the girls at least 20 minutes to get clear of the great crowd leaving the stadium. As they moved slowly, foot by foot, down the long ramp they listened to the Sunday morning quarterbacks who were already replaying the game.

"Great backfield... little weak front, though..."

"This Rhodes guy is a sure-pop All-America... Ever see such running?"

"... Saw Grange at his best... never looked better than Rhodes did today..."

"If they go as smooth all season we'll be undefeated..."

"... Yeah, and did you ever see anyone back up a line and run interference like that man Webber... must be like getting hit with a truck when he ties into you..."

Joan hardly realized there was anyone but a man named Rhodes on the Tech varsity until the powerfully built man with the iron-gray hair in front of her mentioned Dan Webber's name.

JUST as she was leaving the dinner table that night a pledge came up and told Joan she was wanted on the phone.

"First call I've had since I've been here," Joan called back to Marianne as she hurried in the direction of the booth under the stairs.

When she came out on the terrace her face was flushed and there was a noticeable sparkle in her eye.

Marianne looked at her keenly. "Okay, spill it... what's up?"

Joan plopped into the glider beside her. "Guess what," she announced. "That was Keith. He called to invite me to dinner at the Gamma house tomorrow afternoon. How'm I doing?"

It was Elaine Chesbro who naively echoed the sentiment of all present.

"Gee," she said, "for a gal who's only been on campus for less than a week you're really progressing. Slow down going around corners but bring 'em back alive."

Progress In Game Restoration Has Become Scientific

AUSTIN, Tex.—Progress in game restoration by the use of scientific methods continues in Texas. During the past three months, nineteen game restoration areas have been constructed by game managers and other specialists of the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission. These areas are intended for the restoration of quail, turkey, beaver and muskrat.

Areas which will be utilized to add to the supply of deer, turkey, quail, and antelope will be set up within the next two months in various parts of the State it was announced by the executive secretary of the game department. In addition, the State-wide quail project with which the game department hopes to increase the crop of bobwhites three or four hundred per cent in some areas is going forward. The department has two specialists in the field who are working with the ten regional game managers and biologists in securing sites for the building of areas in which quail can be increased.

That deer judiciously planted will do much to increase the big game supply of the State is evidenced by a report from Brown county received from the game department recently. In February five years ago, there were delivered to John McInnes of Byrd, Texas, four doe deer, and one buck. All four of the does have each dropped nine fawns since that time and indications are that this small planting is doing much to populate Brown county with deer.

Duck hunters who have planted any kind of wild food in the past five years in order to improve conditions for waterfowl are being requested to get in touch with the local game warden or the Austin office of the Game, Fish and Oyster Commission. The purpose of the request is to provide a record of what grows and what doesn't grow in every part of the State.

The division of wildlife restoration is making a survey of duck management practices so that in the future recommendations can be made on the basis of experience. The trial and error method is commonly used by sportsmen and many ideal experiments are thus made available for observation.

Game managers or biologists of the department will inspect sites that have been planted with duck foods and judge the value of the many species that are being sold to Texas sportsmen. Because of unwise plantings considerable sums are wasted each year whereas wise plantings would have improved conditions for ducks.

Already biologists of the department have accumulated considerable information on the use of native plants as duck food plantings. At the completion of this study sportsmen will be able

Gholson Hotel Is Being Remodded By New Manager

Extensive improvements have been made recently on the Gholson hotel, and others are now being contemplated, it was stated today by Elton Jennings, manager.

The first thing that was done under Jennings' management, he stated, was re-upholstering and repainting all the lobby furniture and repainting the lobby throughout.

The front of the hotel, and the adjoining drug store and barber shop, were then repainted in new colors.

A total of 16 new apartments have been added, and all have been decorated and fitted up in modern furnishings.

Transient rooms have been repainted in modern pastel shades, new rugs have been put in, modern, streamlined beds have been installed and the rooms repainted throughout in light colors. There are now 30 modernistic transient rooms in the hotel.

All halls have been repainted and new rugs have been added on the third floor.

The Blue Room has been redecorated, the floor sanded and floor-sealed and is now being waxed. New draperies have been ordered and these will be installed as soon as they arrive.

Four permanent apartments, which were already occupied, have been redecorated throughout, making them more modern, and a number of light fixtures have been changed.

The management is contemplating purchase of a new elevator, to replace the one now in service, which is old and somewhat obsolete. Jennings stated today in enumerating the changes made in the hotel, and a number of other replacements are being considered.

People Warned About Racing To Scenes Of Fires

Sig Faircloth, police and fire commissioner, has issued a warning to motorists to keep out of the way of fire trucks making a run to a fire, as several near accidents have occurred recently that might easily have been disastrous.

The practice of racing to the scene of a blaze, it was pointed out, is not only dangerous, but hampers the fire department in reaching the blaze. Motorists, too, who are not going to the fire, have failed, on a number of occasions, to cooperate by pulling to the side of the street and giving the firemen plenty of room.

In turning corners, especially, the drivers of the fire trucks are hampered by moving traffic, it was pointed out.

The siren at the top of the fire station is now out of order, Faircloth stated, but is to be repaired soon, and used whenever the trucks are making a run. When this siren sounds, he stated, all traffic should move cautiously, and when it is seen the trucks are coming, all other traffic should stop, and cars should be moved as near the curbs as possible to allow room for the trucks to pass.
