Were You Addressing Us, Mr. Churchill?

Fire-Spouting Winston Churchill has spoken again to the people of the British Empire, but it is a pretty good guess that the first lord of the admiralty was hoping Americans had their ears pinned to the keyhole.

Mr. Churchill's speech was blunt. He called Hitler a "cornered maniac" and "that evil man." He called Germany's acts of conquest in Poland "bestial atrocities." He referred to the Hitler-Ribbentrop team as "those marvelous twin contortionists."

"If we are conquered," he said, "all will be enslaved and the United States will be left single-handed to guard the rights of man." And: "The great English-speaking republic across the Atlantic ocean makes no secret of its sympathies or of its self-questionings and translates these sentiments into action of a character which anyone may judge for himself."

We in America must be careful how vigorously we nod our heads in assent over Mr. Churchill's statements. We must reserve the right to judge for ourselves events abroad. We must be careful not to let even as distinguished a salesman as Mr. Churchill slip his foot in our door.

Allied propagandists have encouraged circulation of the idea that Britain and France are America's first lines of defense. Slogans like this, bandied about the country and repeated often enough, can be dangerous and misleading. We may forget to analyze them and accept them at their face value.

The ardor of statesmen in time of emergency must be taken with a grain of salt. It is good policy for the British government to let Mr. Churchill raise his voice now and then. Issues must not be permitted to cool. People must not be permitted to forget they have an enemy.

We didn't start this war, and we don't want any part of it. We got into one war, 22 years ago, and it will be a long time before we forget the expensive lessons we learned. The propaganda this time is just as smooth as it was then—making the world safe for democracy—but we aren't going to fall for it again.

America isn't interested in having thousands of its sons die each generation for European ideologies that are forgotten in the thick of battle. We're not going to be kidded into the belief that our real frontier lies along the Maginot line.

Mr. Churchill and other eminent foreign statesmen may as well get used to that fact. They may as well scratch us off the sucker list, and concentrate their energies in other directions. We're going to be too busy at home to attend this party.

Olden Hornets Win From Cougars To Tie For Lead

The Olden Hornets met the Caddo Cougars on the Caddo field Friday before a large number of fans. The Hornets were anxious to win to maintain their position in the three way tie for district championship with Clyde and Pioneer. The Cougars were anxious to score in order to break the Hornets record of keeping them from scoring in 4 successive years.

Early in the first quarter the Hornets passed and plowed down to the three yard line where Captain Hendrix plunged over, but the play was called back because an overly anxious Hornet was off side. The ball was placed on the eight and the Hornets were unable to take it over from that point. The first quarter ended in a scoreless tie.

In the second quarter captain Hendrix plunged over for the first score of the ball game. The attempt at conversion was successful. Early in the second half Captain Hendrix plunged over for the Hornets' second touchdown. The attempt at extra point was good and the score was 14 to 0.

In the fourth quarter Captain Hendrix found a hole and went over the goal line again. The try for extra point was again good and the final score was 21 to 0.

Outstanding on the Hornets team were Fox, Hendrix, Bryant, and McFadden, who played their last game of high school football. The Olden starting line-up: Hendrix, Fox, Bryant, Woughmouth, McFadden, Langston, Burns, Bockman, Patterson, Fidler and Akalins. Substitutes were Benson, Jarrett, and Wynne. The Hornets had a very good

Coronado Search For Seven Cities Revealed By Sword

HIGGINS, Tex.—A 23-inch double-edged sword today gave evidence that Coronado's search in 1540 for the "Seven Cities of Gold" ended in the sandy plains of the Texas Panhandle.

The sword, presumably of Spanish origin, collected dust in the attic of F. E. St. Jacques, former Higgins postmaster, until a similar relic was unearthed near Hereford recently.

St. Jacques found the sword several years ago on the Jones Ranch, 10 miles west of here. An amateur collector of Indian relics, he was interested in the sword, but he didn't attempt to trace its origin.

It lay unnoticed with the rest of his collection until he dug it out recently at the suggestion of Dr. R. Goettsche of Higgins, who has collected Indian relics for more than half a century. Dr. Goettsche had no doubts but what the sword was of Spanish origin. It has an 18-inch steel blade, now rust covered, but formerly razor-sharp on both sides. On the five inch bronze handle a human face was engraved on both sides, and the cross piece, also made of bronze, was decorated with scroll work.

SERIAL STORY
5 WOULD KILL BY TOM HORNER
 COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday Jameson, the butler, placed a capsule in Dawson's side pocket which was unlocked at the door of the murder. Later, Dawson accused the motor truck, unaware of not being a motor truck. Alston returned control of Alston Motors to Benthorpe's death. Flynn sings in Joey di Torino.

Joey di Torino

CHAPTER VI
HELLO, JOEY. There was no cordiality in Dawson's greeting. "Listen, Dawson—what's the idea of sending that dumb Flynn down to my place in the middle of the night—just when my party is going?" "I doubt if you've met Mr. Alston, Joey," Dawson interrupted. "Mr. Alston, this is Joey di Torino, owner of the Club Chateau. You've probably been there." Alston rose to acknowledge Joey's nod. Neither man made any move to shake hands. "If you don't mind, Captain Dawson, I'd like to get some sleep," Alston said. "If I can—"

"Go right ahead, Mr. Alston," Dawson agreed. "You probably need it." "Would you mind if I ordered some sleeping tablets? I left home hurriedly and forgot to take one." "Tell Flynn to get you some, Mr. Alston." He waited as Alston moved slowly across the room, out of the door, then called after him, "Good night!" but Dawson apparently did not hear. Dawson turned back to di Torino. "Cigar, Joey?" He offered Benthorpe's box of perfectos. Di Torino took one, lit it, and puffed vigorously. For a moment both men sat, smoking, saying nothing, waiting. Di Torino belied the popular conception of a gangster. He was small, and his Italian ancestry evidenced itself in his black, darting eyes, and dark complexion. His clothes were well tailored and he wore them like a model. He looked more like a musician or a gigolo than a killer. "Listen, Dawson, I've got work to do," Joey began at last. "I was just getting ready to close when Flynn comes in and says you wanted to see me. He said Arnold Bentley had been killed. I tried to tell him that I haven't been in of the Chateau all evening but he wouldn't listen. Said you wanted to talk to me and that was that. What do you want, Dawson?" "You knew Arnold Benthorpe pretty well, Joey?" Dawson asked. "Sure, I knew him. Half the night clubs in town knew Benthorpe by his first name. He used to come to the Chateau a lot. But I didn't know he was dead until Flynn told me. Why pick on me?"

the club without stopping. Dave'll remember and so will Pete. Pete's my manager." "So you just went out for a ride, Joey—all by yourself," Dawson shook his head. "No, Joey, I thought you could think faster than that." "Listen, you left the Club Chateau, you drove up here to Benthorpe's—you could make it in a few minutes—you came in that side entrance you always used and you found Benthorpe in the study." "You've been holding out on Benthorpe, blackmailing him, and you know Benthorpe wouldn't let you get away with it. That's why he made out this record. That's why that book he figured he could keep your mouth closed until he found a way of closing it permanently." "But you beat him to it, Joey. You shot Arnold Benthorpe as he sat in his chair. Then you jumped that straight chair there against the door, rifled the safe, and finally, when you heard Flynn and Krone taking the door off the hinges, you went out the window. It's a closed case, Joey—and it will send you to the chair."

Di TORIO was silent, studying the glowing end of his cigar. At last he spoke. "You've missed one thing in your murder case, Dawson. What time was Benthorpe killed?" "The coroner's deputy said it was right around midnight. It took Flynn and Krone a while to get the door down." "That proves it," Di Torino smiled. "I can prove by half a dozen witnesses that I didn't leave the Club Chateau until after midnight. It was almost 12:15 before I could get away. And you had already found Benthorpe's body by that time." "AND there's one thing you've forgotten, I never thought it of you, Dawson. I'm saving your job by telling you this in advance. There's the little item of a gun." "Your cop, Flynn, lifted my automatic out of this shoulder scabbard on the way out here. Have you found the gun that killed Benthorpe yet?" "No," Dawson replied. "But Flynn probably has it in his pocket now." "Don't be too sure about that, my friend," Joey went on confidently. "I carry a .38 automatic and it hasn't been fired in six months. And when you get that bullet out of Benthorpe's head, there's one thing more to remember—ballistics tests. Surely you've heard of them?" (To Be Continued)

Ranger Food Sales Return $30,498 In Hidden Taxation

Families in Ranger pay an estimated $30,498 in hidden taxes annually through their purchases of food, a National Consumers Tax Commission survey shows today. "Nearly eight per cent of the total food bill represents shifted taxes buried in the price of every purchase," the report stated. "These taxes include, for example, 11 per cent of the butter cost, 6 1/2 per cent of bread costs, 1 1/2 per cent of ground beef and 1 1/2 per cent of the cost of coffee." The report was made public through Mrs. Kenneth C. Frazier, of Dallas, Chairman of the Board, who leads NCTC study groups in about 810 Texas communities in the educational crusade against "unnecessary consumer-penalizing taxes." The report added: "Chief offenders, and those that fall most heavily on lower income families, are hidden taxes. These are levied on manufacturers, shipper and distributor. Unable to absorb the load, each must pass on a share of its taxes and the consumer ultimately pays them, usually without knowing it." The commission, in whose non-partisan crusade groups in approximately 5,100 communities have launched tax study programs, said the hidden tax figure does not include the many other hidden and

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—First steps toward evolving the farm program which the Republicans will offer the country in the 1940 election—and which will be put into effect if they win—are being taken now by a group of congressmen headed by Representative Clifford Hope of Kansas. Named chairman of a 46-man committee by G. O. P. congressional leader Joe Martin, Mr. Hope is blocking out an all-inclusive program which will survey practically every angle of the New Deal's farm policy. Noteworthy is the fact that no back-to-1929 program is apt to come out of this study. Mr. Hope suspects that a subsidy program, and probably some form of government control over farm production, are here to stay. FREE LAND DAYS ARE OVER "We can't go back to the old days of free land, when a man could go two states west and take up a new quarter section if he went broke at home," he says. "Those days are gone forever, and we have a new and very difficult situation to face." "The theory this committee is proceeding on is that while the intentions of the New Deal farm planners have been good, and while their program has given the farmer some temporary benefits, it does not appear after the expenditure of all of this money that there has been any permanent rehabilitation of agriculture. It's in just about the same shape it was in at the beginning of the New Deal." Mr. Hope is now at work dividing his unwieldy committee into upwards of a dozen sub-committees, each of which will have one specific part of the farm problem to study. He hopes many direct taxes families here have to pay. The food tax estimate was computed from NCTC averages based on last available U. S. Bureau of the Census figures which placed 1935 food sales in Ranger at $291,000. Government estimates of total sales in the country last year
