WAR HEIGHTENS TRADE ENIGMA FOR AMERICAS

By LAWRENCE S. HAAS
U. P. Latin American Editor

The action of the United States Senate in amending the naval appropriations bill to permit the acquisition of foreign foodstuffs by the navy has marked an important step in the temporary advance in Latin American-United States relations.

It is of especial importance to Argentina, and, in a somewhat lesser degree, to Brazil, Paraguay, and Uruguay, all meat raising countries, as it may open the way to purchase of great quantities of South American canned beef.

For many years, Argentine trade relations with the United States have been conducted under the cloud of an embargo on Argentine fresh and chilled beef, imposed because of an insistence that the Argentine product may be contaminated by the existence of hoof and mouth disease among the cattle of the South American republic.

The Argentine government has repudiated the contention that the meat produced in the country is not equal—if not superior—to that produced anywhere in the world, but a strong congressional bloc, led by members from western states, raising states, has demanded efforts to permit entry of Argentine beef.

Argentina stoutly persists that its meat were to be permitted to reach the American market—in normal times it is sold on the European markets, the American consumer would be afforded better steaks, roasts, and chops at prices much lower than those prevailing.

The naval bill amendment does nothing to remove the embargo but it does widen the prospective United States market for South American meat products. Furthermore, it has brought the meat question to the forefront and it might lead to a fuller reexamination of the entire question.

Although much emphasis has been placed recently upon closer cultural ties between the Latin American countries and the United States, the fundamental interest of the American republics is economic. Virtually every country suffering from the loss of markets, due to the war, and most of them have looked to the United States to absorb at least a part of their mounting surplus as a proof of the effective application of the good neighbor policy and hemispheric cooperation.

The United States last summer sponsored a conference of the office producing countries of Latin America, resulting in an agreement in which quotas for coffee exportation to the United States were distributed upon an equitable basis.

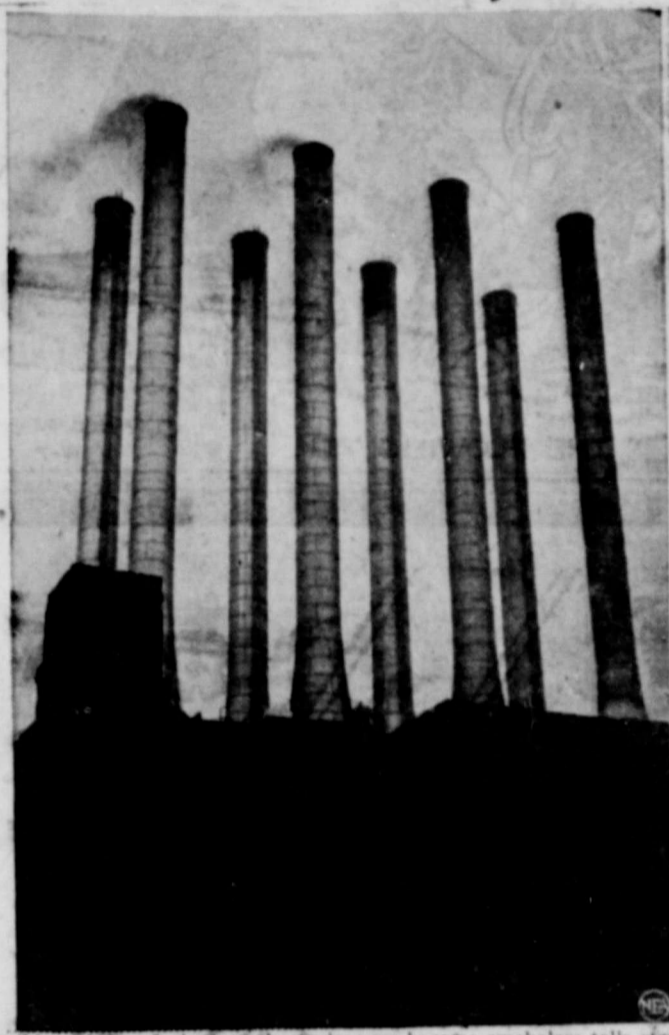

Arrangements were formed for purchase of vast quantities of other American mineral products, principally Chilean and Peruvian copper and Bolivian tin.

A party of industrial engineers, sponsored by the National Research Council, is touring the principal South American countries, exploring the possibility of using additional South American products in United States industry.

Agricultural experts have been sent to South and Central America by Washington to cooperate in research work, especially in connection with such vital products as rubber.

Although such steps as the agricultural research are likely to yield important results, they will be felt for some time, and, meanwhile South American economic problems are pressing ones. Representatives in Buenos Aires firms importing and exporting

SENATE-HOUSE OF MEXICO TO BACK U. S. TIES

By United Press
By EDWARD P. MORGAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

MEXICO CITY—The special session of the Mexican congress, called by President Manuel Avila Camacho to consider major banking, labor and educational reforms, has shown its support of the government policy of active cooperation with the United States in hemispheric defense.

This foreign policy, although of tremendous importance to Mexico's future, probably will not be put to an actual vote test because no legislation directly connected with it has been introduced thus far. But developments both in the chamber of deputies and the senate since the session convened Feb. 1 indicate that congress is supporting the administration's program of close collaboration with Washington.

This support has not been unanimous, however. When Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla appeared before the senate on March 7 and said that Mexico, recognizing the world crisis and Germany's threat against democracy, was even willing to enter into a military alliance with the United States if necessary there was an concerted opposition. But individual senators and some deputies declared that Padilla had violated Mexico's neutrality, and that he was dragging the nation needlessly toward war.

President Holds Control

In the last analysis, President Avila Camacho controls congress. If a showdown came on the defense cooperation question the administration would have the upper hand, despite the fact that a certain minority of congressmen have appeared openly opposed to the United States, and have indicated that they are not unsympathetic to Germany.

The special session has been swamped with major and routine legislation, but congressional leaders hope for an adjournment before April 15. The administration has presented the congress with the following legislation for action:

A bill restricting labor strikes, designed specifically to eliminate "illegal" "quickie" walkouts. Unions would be required to give notice of intention to strike at least six days in advance (ten days in case of public utilities). The Federal Labor Board would be required to rule on the legality of a strike within 48 hours of its start.

Reforms to the civil service law, giving the government a freer hand in hiring "confidential employees," i. e., secretaries to department heads, etc. The legislation also limits but does not abolish, as some proponents had hoped, the federal employee's right to strike.

Oil Proposal Made

A proposal to allow participation of private individuals and companies in the exploitation of the national petroleum industry instead of continuing it as an exclusively government function as designed after the expropriation of foreign oil properties in March, 1938. A proposal to liberalize bank credits. Bankers objected to the project as submitted, insisting that it endangered the nation's financial structure. Bank deposits have increased enormously in recent months by an influx of "timid" capital, fleeing the United States and other countries because of war scares.

One of the most hotly debated reforms has been the proposed amendment to the Third Article of the Constitution. This article provides that education is exclusively a state function. Luis N. Sanchez Ponton, secretary of education, recently announced that there would be no time to introduce the proposed amendment at the present session. Powerful Catholic groups are advocating the elimination of the "socialist" trend of Mexico's educational system, and the legal reestablishment of church-sponsored schools. Religious schools continue to function but, technically, they are outside the law.

STEEL STRIKE IS POSTPONED UNTIL APRIL 11

Officials of the United States Steel Corporation and the steel workers organizing committee of the Congress of Industrial Organizations agreed today to a second extension of the wage contract negotiations until April 15, averting a threatened walkout among the company's 250,000 workers, set for tomorrow night.

In New York negotiations went on to settle the soft coal strike and in Washington John D. Biggers, director of the Office of Production Management, production division, said the United States will, within the next 100 days, begin "real mass production of some of the most vital war materials" and the nation's future "may depend on what we all do in those 100 days."

Ex-Rangers May Be Organization To Aid Defense

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN, Tex.—One thousand Texas gunmen, picked from among former Texas Rangers, sheriffs, police and military veterans, will be offered to President Roosevelt for whatever use he may designate in the national emergency, Former Ranger Captain Frank Hamer and others propose.

The force will be limited to 1,000 men to be picked for their known dependency under difficult conditions. They will be selected by Hamer from volunteer ranks. No uniform will be worn, there will be no drills nor insignia. The volunteers will be sworn to report for any duty to which they may be assigned.

As Hamer described the proposed organization, a member's equipment will consist of "a pistol and an inclination."

Hamer is one of the most famous of the later day Texas Rangers. He was in the national eye after he and Texas Ranger Mannie Gault tracked down Clyde Barrow and Barrow's cigar-smoking girl companion Bonnie Parker when the pair was sought for alleged killing of a state highway patrolman.

If the offer is accepted there may be seen a revival of the non-uniformed Texas Rangers who have been connected in fact and fiction inseparably with the state's frontier days.

The Rangers several years ago were merged into the State Safety Department.

Another of Texas' picturesque big-hatted Rangers also is active in the national defense. Capt. Bill Sterling is liaison officer of the Eighth Corps Area of the United States Army, with headquarters at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio.

Sterling was the first Ranger to become adjutant general of the state and to be given command of both the Rangers and the National Guard of Texas.

Another former adjutant general, who later became a Ranger, is W. D. Cope. Cope will be adjutant of the new defense scout force under plans of the organization. Tom Martin, veteran of World War No. 1 and former police chief of San Antonio but now a radio broadcaster and columnist, is another of the organizers.

FEW AUTHENTIC REPORTS OF FIGHTING RECEIVED, BUT NAZIS ADMIT RESISTANCE

ROYAL AIR FORCE IS AIDING BRITISH ALLIES TO HOLD BACK FIRST THRUSTS OF GERMAN BLITZKRIEG

Britain and her Balkan allies today struck back by air against Adolf Hitler's blitzkrieg army of the southeast and rained bombs upon key objectives in Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria.

Nazi sources claimed a 25-mile advance on the Greek and Yugoslav fronts, but did not specify exactly where these advances had been made. From Athens came word that the hardy Greek forces, aided by the British Royal Air Force, were standing firm at Rupel Pass, key positions on the route toward Salonika.

There were no authentic reports of fighting in Yugoslavia, but the German High Command admitted the army had met with firm resistance. Nazi spokesmen in Berlin warned the people not to expect the tempo of the attack to equal the speed of the march into Poland and the offensive on the Western Front.

The Royal Air Force, powerfully re-enforced and possibly operating from bases in both Yugoslavia and Greece, roared into action. Budapest reported air attacks had been made upon at least six Hungarian points, largely centered close to the German lines of communications. British and Yugoslav bombers attacked Hungarian objectives and it was claimed by the Germans that six British bombers had been shot down over Szeged.

Other air attacks were reported upon Sofia, capital of ostensibly neutral Bulgaria, and upon Rumanian points, including the important German military headquarters at Timisoara.

Britain broke off diplomatic relations with Hungary because the country had become the base of operations for Germany, it was announced, while Royal Air Force reported five German planes were shot down in fierce dog fights over Rupel Pass.

In Africa the British put out every possible ounce of pressure to speed the cleanup of Italians in East Africa. Operations for the capture of the Red Sea port of Massawa is developing and Ethiopian patriots occupied Debra Marcos, important northern Eritrean point, while British troops established themselves in Addis Ababa.

The British admitted their forces in Libya again were forced to fall back under advances of the more powerful Italian-German columns pushing ahead from Benghazi.

Three Are Elected As Ranger Trustees In School Election

E. A. Tunnell, Lloyd L. Bruce and Dr. C. L. Jackson were elected to fill three positions on the Ranger school board in an election held Saturday.

Tunnell polled 204 of the 227 votes cast, Bruce received 189 and Dr. Jackson 156. I. W. Meador, only other candidate for one of the three positions, got a total of 99 votes. One vote each was cast for Pless E. Moore, Dr. W. L. Downtain and C. L. Crews.

Tobe Merton received 214 votes for county trustee from Precinct 1 and Dr. P. M. Kuykendall got 224 votes as candidate for trustee at large.

Ex-Official of the Smallest State Is A Senate Visitor

By United Press
AUSTIN, Tex.—Zenas W. Bliss, former lieutenant governor of Rhode Island, now making tax investigations in other states for the benefit of the Rhode Island legislature, shared the Texas senate platform recently with Lieut. Gov. Coke Stevenson of Texas.

"He's from a state not as large as my county," Stevenson said in introducing the guest to the Texas senators. Stevenson might have added a comparison between his own size and that of the visitor.

Bliss, a small white haired man, seemed almost dwarfed beside Texas' six-foot ranching lieutenant governor.

Bliss surmised that a state as big as Texas might have found some new way to separate people from tax money, and said the purpose of his inquiry was to learn how.

MAN HELD FOR POSING AS AN F.B.I. OFFICER

Ranger police arrested a man late Sunday night on charges of impersonating a federal officer, and placed him in the city jail, awaiting his removal to Dallas by Department of Justice agents.

According to Chief of Police Guy Pledger the man telephoned the desk sergeant at the Ranger police station Sunday night, stated that he was an FBI agent and wanted assistance of the local police. The man, who gave his name as H. P. Reynolds, was informed to call at the police station in person, which he did.

Officers Britt and Ames accompanied him to a hotel, where he had a man and his wife "in custody." After some questioning of the couple, who he claimed were suspected of being German spies, the officers asked the alleged FBI agent for his credentials. He explained that he did not have them available at that time, but would procure them.

Meantime Desk Sergeant Scott, who was suspicious, called Patrolman Boyd and dispatched him to the hotel. Boyd, together with the other officers, insisted on seeing the credentials. When they were not forthcoming the man was lodged in the city jail.

A search of his suitcase revealed, Pledger stated, that it contained nothing but a telephone directory. He had some clothing in another room, however, Pledger stated. When arrested the man had only five cents on his person, though Pledger stated he had run up a $5 taxi bill and had borrowed $7 in cash from a Ranger resident.

When notified of the arrest the Department of Justice agents in Dallas instructed Ranger police to hold the man in custody and said they would arrive sometime Monday afternoon to return him to Dallas to face charges of impersonating an officer.

Bill Is Passed In Senate Without Any Amendments

AUSTIN, Tex.—The Texas Senate this week did what members say is unprecedented in legislative history of the state. A $16,236,744 appropriation bill was passed without a single amendment. There were 30 votes to none on suspending rules to facilitate the passage. The money is for two-years' support of state eleemosynary institutions.

"That's some sort of a record," remarked Lieut. Gov. Coke E. Stevenson of Junction as he declined to cast a vote that would have broken a tie on the only proposed amendment that had a chance.

Though there were no amendments to the bill as reported to the senate by Chairman A. M. Aikin, Jr., of the senate finance committee, there were two changes in the printed copies of the bill—both due to errors.

One added $400,000 a year to the appropriation for Terrell State Hospital to replace the main hospital structure in two years. The other eliminated pay for a "dog-sergeant" at the Gatesville School for Boys, Senators on the committee already had decided that dogs should not be used to track down boys who ran away from the institution. Instead they propose to make the place one from which the youthful offenders will not try to escape. A recreational program under expert direction was authorized.

Faith In Today

By Robert R. Herring

The news which circulates about the street oftentimes draws my attention. The statement which did so today was that the democracies have fallen because democracy had failed to fulfill men's hopes. Here indeed is a strange confusion. One which, if allowed to spread, can undermine the foundations of these United States. This, we cannot and shall not allow.

The truth behind the fall of the European democracies is that they failed to apply the principle of unity to their foreign relations with the faith and persistence that today is a necessity. Finland, Denmark and Norway were model countries of inward progress and advancement, and yet, they failed to consider the danger of attempting to exist in this age alone. France likewise, failed to consider this basic truth. Today she is suffering the result of this oversight. Great Britain, had she recognized earlier that violence is the common enemy and that unity is of supreme importance, would not herself today be the victim of ruthless violence. Britain now offers aid to China; had she done so with full efforts in 1931, violence would not have scoured the world as though a plague.

It was only when Ethiopia followed Manchuria; when China followed Ethiopia; when later Czechoslovakia fell under the axe of Nazi aggressiveness; that the democracies began to awaken to their true responsibilities. They began to realize that ten men can destroy a thousand if the thousand will only defend themselves one at a time. The lend-lease bill is our proof of this realization. "We must hang together if we are not to hang separately." Those eminent words of an early American are even more true today. Our destiny lies with that of England. The spirit of unity binds the hearts of America with those of the British Commonwealth. Today is the time of our atonement; we must bear it nobly. Democracy, the picture of just law, constitutional government, and freedom, stands supreme today. The world of tomorrow will see it in finer form.

All these activities they report fully to someone who is interested and there are apparently plenty of people about the country who are interested, or their representatives wouldn't be here.

DOLLARS TO DOUGHNUTS

BY EDITH ELLINGTON

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY, the news of the Davenport kidnaping... heires to the Huntington Department Store millions, never boarded a liner for South America.

WAITING FOR TROUBLE CHAPTER XXV BEATRICE undressed slowly and mechanically, while Toby and Vera still discussed the mysterious kidnaping of the Davenport heiress.

TOBY padded out in bathrobe and slippers. She laughed when she saw the outspread papers. "You splurged! That's what I call a pal. Let's see 'em."

She dressed swiftly. "This is Judgment Day, I might as well face those papers right now."

She thought four. Last night's early edition, the one she'd seen in the subway, was mild by comparison. Here she was, on the front page, in a bathing suit at Nassau, splashing into the sun.

But Toby draped herself over the table, leaning on her elbows, and began reading the news stories. She skipped about in them, murmuring. She yawned.

Now, now of all times, when she wanted so desperately to be left in the obscurity she had found for herself... Oh, it was too much!

In the dignified columns of the newspaper Grandfather used to read, there were no pictures. She read the caution story in the apartment, a cup of bitter black brew beside her.

Her hair had been piled high on the top of her head, in a sleek and fashionable coiffure. The pictured girl, in her daring evening dress, was exquisitely groomed. She had a polished perfection, like a model in a high-style advertisement.

A twinge of pity softened her anger. But the boredom that had driven her to him, the emptiness that had caused her to find excitement in being with him, was gone. She had never loved him.

She couldn't sleep. There'd be a news broadcast at 6 a. m. Only three hours... She watched the clock, lay down again, closed her eyes, tossed, sat up once more, watched the clock to 6.

"It's me! Me!" Beatrice thought insistently. "What's the matter with her? I can't stand this suspense!"

Now he was only a nuisance of a man who had ruined something precious.

"Mr. Weeming said, 'Miss Davenport frequently leaves on trips without informing me exactly of her destination.'"

"Am I mad?" Beatrice asked herself dizzily. "Or have they known all the time? A terrible certainty gripped her."

"And that's the news up to this moment in Europe," she heard. "Here at home the FBI has been asked to investigate the disappearance of a girl who was supposed to be touring South America."

"Miss Davenport's fiancé, Fernando de Grandezzi, notified Federal Bureau of Investigation officials of the girl's disappearance."

That was it! They'd known, they'd been laughing at her. And now they were waiting, like two cats with a mouse. Waiting to see what she'd do, what she'd say.

"Greta Henckel, maid at the Park Avenue apartment, told reporters that Miss Davenport had not packed for a trip. 'All her clothes and all her luggage are still here. We don't understand it. We are dreadfully worried,' said the maid."

THE PAY OFF

BY HARRY GRAYSON

IT may have been significant that it was not until they had given up on him that the Joss-Cronin and McCarthy—decided Ellsworth Tenney Dahlgren was handicapped by short arms.

Babe Dahlgren's fielding in the Pacific Coast and International Leagues and with the Red Sox and Yankees made baseball men suspect they were seeing things.

Now actual measurements make it plain that there was something wrong with the sight of Managers Cronin and McCarthy when they attributed Dahlgren's circus stunts to what they called abnormally short arms.

Measuring his arms with every Boston Bee, Dahlgren finds his compare favorably in length with all except Outfielder Max West. And the defense of the Hub Nationals certainly does not suffer for lack of reach.

If Dahlgren isn't a remarkable first baseman, he has fooled a lot of schooled observers. There was nothing wrong with his work as a big league beginner with the Red Sox in 1935.

Dahlgren batted in 121 runs for Syracuse in '36, hit 340 for Newark in '37 and first based the Yankees to their fourth consecutive world championship in '39, when he drove in 89 runs. Last year he padded his batting average by 29 points—up to .264, but the crack-up occurred, and Gerald Priddy came up from Kansas City entitled to a shot at second base and making Joe Gordon available as a first sacker.

The short-arm talk was revived when Dahlgren was waived out of the American League and sold to the Bees for $10,000.

THIS despite the fact that for two complete campaigns respected ivory appraisers gave such as George McQuinn, Joe Kuhel and Dolph Camilli the go-by in declaring that the game had no other fielding first baseman in the same class with Dahlgren. But a few went as far as to call Dahlgren a right-handed Hal Chase or George Sisler.

Dahlgren at 6 feet stands two inches taller than Slater, by the way, and three inches taller than another fair-to-middling first baseman, Stuffy Melnis.

Dahlgren reaches far enough... even when he gets hold of the ball at the plate.

His principal trouble is that he doesn't hit a long ball often enough.

After 14 years of Lou Gehrig, that was fatal to a Yankee first baseman.

College Hopes To Fill Bottlenecks

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Michigan State College has found that it has its own "bottleneck" problems—but the college is not troubled with eliminating them. It's trying to fill them.

Because of war-time shipping restrictions, the supply of corks, obtained from Spain and Portugal is expected to be cut off.

Fearing a price rise or disappearance of corks from the market entirely, the state board of agriculture, college governing body, has appointed a committee to arrange for purchase of $1,000 worth—the amount annually needed to supply college laboratories.
